L. H. Collingwood offered $400 for two lots on O'Carroll Avenue, toward Aylmer Street, He intends to build a $3,500 house. Alderman Bradburn objected that those lots were worth more than $200 each, and contended that private property owners should get some consideration from the council, that is some protection against a form of competition that was unfair.

The committee agreed to a suggestion that Aldermen McIntyre, McCannan and Bradburn examine thees two lots before the Collingwood bid is disposed of.

L. Boorman's offer of $100 for a lot on Rogers Street, between Clifton and Hazlitt Streets, was accepted on condition that he builds a house within a year.

Report On Agreements.

W. J. Henry, assessor, is being asked for a report on any agreements that were not carried out according to the expressed terms of the Dominion Housing Act. Lots were sold, for instance, by the city for $50 each, and the purchasers agreed to build houses to cost at least $2,450.

Alderman Bradburn suggested that the city should find out whether these agreements were performed. His resolution, seconded by Alderman Dutton, asks Mr. Henry for a report on any such agreements that have not been fulfilled.

Speaker Declares Prayer Is Key To Mission Problem

Mrs. J. M. Fanning, leader of Group F of the Women's Missionary Society of George Street Church was hostess to group members Tuesday evening at her home on Harvey street.

Mrs. H. Ballard, guest speaker, gave an address on the subject of "Prayer," which she explained was one of the first things the disciples asked Christ to teach them to do. "There are many definitions of prayer," he said.

"It is the soul's sincere desire uttered or unexpressed. To some it is the great neglected privilege, and one of the misunderstood means of grace. The Bible is the word of God; prayer is the power of God, and the Holy Spirit is the guide of God."

The speaker defined prayer as the breath of the Christian, the cable from the power house and the warmth from the sun. If we, as Christians, are not using this power, she said, our lives are like an electric light bulb—useless. "The key to the missionary problem is in the hand of God," Mrs. Ballard continued, "and that key is prayer. There are no nations in Jesus' outlook—He wants the world, so we should all expect great things of God, and attempt great things of God, and attempt great things for Him. Pray daily, not that we may have more of the spirit, but that the spirit may have more of us, and the God of all peace will guide you graciously into new and holy pathways."

Brief talks were also given by Mrs. C. Elliott, who spoke on "Temperance," and Mrs. J. W. Hales, who outlined the "Kingdom of God" movement.

A gem on "Love" was given in response to the roll call. A vocal solo, "Jesus Whispers His Love to Me" was given by Miss Gladys Mills; Mrs. J. Douglas read the scripture lesson, and Mrs. E. Brown led in prayer.

A vote of thanks to the hostess and those assisting in the program was moved by Mrs. A. F. Lane and Mrs. J. Douglas.

Tea was served after the meeting, with Mrs. Lane presiding at the tea table.

Inspiring Meeting Is Held By Bible Class

A helpful and inspiring meeting of the King's Own Bible Class, of St. James' Sunday School, was held Monday evening, when thirty members gathered to promote the class work. The treasurer's report indicated the financial status of the class and the eighteen visits show that the King's Own is also a friendly class. This is also true of the Sunshine convenor's work who spends many kindly thoughts in cards and letters to the sick and shut-in members.

In charge of the devotions of the month, Mrs. W. K. Sloane announced the hymn "Into my heart" and that this had been chosen as the class hymn for 1940.

Readings during the evening were contributed by Mrs. Sloane "To talk with God," Mrs. A. Rosborough, "With All My Strength." Mrs. C. Wilson read Martha's prayer, and Mrs. Geo. H. Rowe's reading was given with piano accompaniment by Mrs. H. F. Doig.

Prayer was led by the pastor, Rev. F. W. Craik. At the call to prayer, a special prayer for peace was read by Mrs. Davis, and upon discussion was adopted by the King's Own Class for their daily meditation while "praying often for a righteous and lasting peace."

Other hymns sung during the service were "O Story, Sweet and Wondrous," and "It may be in the valley." A delightful violin solo was played by little Joyce Wilson, who was accompanied by her sister Gloria Wilson at the piano.

All took part in the jolly social hour and enjoyed the contests arranged by Mrs. E. Frost. Prizes were won by Mrs. Harris and Mrs. E. Kitney.

Refreshments were served by the convenor, Mrs. Downer and her assistants.

Hornsby, assistant Commissioner E. Wolfe, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, the troop chaplain, and three reels of moving pictures, shown by Oliver M. Steer, were thoroughly delightful highlights of the event. Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., was acompanist during the evening.

One-year stars to half a dozen Cubs concluded a happy evening for the number seven troop.

FASHIONS

It is fun to make new clothes for tiny tots. This pattern includes a sweet little button-front dress and a creeper suit. The self-help dress is every little girl's favorite because she feels so grown up when she dresses herself so easily. The creeper is simply but well cut for ease in making and comfort in wearing. Of course you will use the new, amusing printed cottons that are designed especially for small children. They come in such lovely, becoming colors and are inexpensive to use. If you have never done much sewing, you will like to make these simple garments.

Stlye No. 3179 is designed for sizes 6 months, 1, 2 and 3 years. Size 2 requires 1¾ yards of 35-inch material for dress, with ¼ yard of contrasting; 1¼ yards for creeper.

Home and School Association News

PRINCE OF WALES SCHOOL

The celebration of Founder's Day by the Prince of Wales Home and School Association took the form of a delightful birthday party Monday afternoon following a brief business meeting.

Mrs. G. A. Spicer, a past president of the Association, spoke of the work of the Home and School Association since its founding twenty - one years ago by Mrs. A. C. Courtice. "Today there are 400 Home and School Associations in Ontario with a membership of 25,000," she said. "The celebration of Founder's Day is an appropriate time to review the ideals and ethics of this movement in order that the standard set by its founders may be maintained." Mrs. Spicer closed her remarks with the quotation, "They shall not grow old, as we who are living grow old, time shall not weary them, nor the years condemn at the going down of the sun, and in the morning we shall remember them."

Mrs. K. Mackenzie moved a vote of thanks to the speaker.

The president, Mrs. F. J. Frape, welcomed the large gathering of parents and friends to the meeting, which opened with the National Anthem, followed by a period of silence in memory of Lord Tweedsmuir. A report of a recent meeting at the Y.W.C.A., held to make plans for the advancement of study groups among Home and School members, was given by Mrs. N. Nesbitt. Mrs. I. Rattenbury presented a report on the Health meeting recently conducted by Dr. R. F. Nott. The attendance picture for the month was won by Miss L. Wilson's class.

An attractive birthday cake and tall tapers in silver holders adorned the lace-covered tea table, at which were seated the president and past presidents of the Association, Mrs. F. J. Frape, Mrs. P. Black, Mrs. H. Darling, Mrs. G. Spicer, Mrs. G. Todd, Mrs. A. Mason, Mrs. George Davis and Mrs. G. Worboy. Mrs. G. S. Mattice presided over the silver tea service Tea conveners were Mrs. C. Wishart, Mrs. G. Webb, and Mrs. K. Shadgett, assisted by the social convener, Mrs. W. Constable, and her committee.

Delightful solos were sung by Mrs. C. Weldon and Mrs. V. Whittington, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. E. Glover, who was also heard in a piano instrumental.

Do You Know?

Tie a bit of string round your blue bag and make a loop in it. Sling the bag over your tap and let the water run gently through the blue bag into the rinsing sink or basin. In this way the blue will be evenly distributed.

To remove machine oil or tar from washable materials, saturate the stain thoroughly with kerosene or lard. Rub gently. Then wash in a thick suds, rinse and dry as usual. To keep woollen garments soft and fluffy, add a few drops of glycerine to the last rinse water.

If a flower is snapped off at the stem, cut a thin piece of stem from the other and fasten it with a greyish mixture wool at the top and bottom, making a splint. The broken flower will be as fresh as the rest and the repair will be unnoticeable.

Seams Follow Figure Lines

There are no detours in the course of seams in clothes, especially dresses, this spring they go just where they are intended to go, with no fiddle faddle about intricate or devious ways. And they give that nice, smooth and quiet look to clothes that is making the utterance of the day, in quick appraisals of them, "so wearable and so well-groomed looking."

Seams serve the major purpose of following the lines of the figure, shaping the bust, the concave waistline, and the rounded hip, and it may be the biggest and best tribute paid to a job well done by corsetieres, that because the "foundation" of figures is so firm and so truly a foundation the task of making dress contours conform to them is so much more dignified.

While figures were wobbly, it was the dress designer's problem to camouflage same with all sorts of trick seams that would take care of or disguise those uncontrolled areas. With figures so well disciplined, seams of dresses go about their business in straight-forward lines that make gored skirts perfectly symmetrical, and obdices as smooth as a bottle with particlar deftness in the from-bust--to-waistline shaping. And always just enough seams to tackle the alteration problem without blueprints.

We Noticed

....In spite of war handicaps, Paris remains the centre of fashion news with openings on time, and clothes more purposeful, flattering, feminine and wearable than they have been for several seasons.

....Much to everyone's surprise, fashions are practically empty of military ideas or uniforms. There are "military accents" such as shoulder epaulets, tunic effects, double rows of buttons, often brass, and pockets, some big enough to carry a gas-mask, others small enough to keep coins in safety, and outside pockets handy for identification papers.

....Colors reflect conditions. There are the new "wing blue," "artillery tan," "British navy." Resourceful French designers have made the most of white — valuable aid in blackouts—by featuring white hats, gloves and crisp white accents on dark dresses—very chic and feminine, in keeping with the season's mode.

Canadian Women To Honor Lady Tweedsmuir

In appreciation of Lady Tweedsmuir's work and inspiring leadership to Canadian endeavor, women across the Dominion propose to say farewell with a gift of Canadian furs on Her Excellency's return to England next month.

Headed by Mrs. Ernest Lapointe, wife of the Justice Minister, and Mrs. T. A. Crerar, wife of the Mines and Resources Minister, a committee of Ottawa women is making arrangements for receiving contributions.

Local branches of national organizations will form the channels through which individual donations may be forwarded in order that as many women as possible may share in the gift.

DOROTHY DIX

Rushing Business in Divorce Courts Often Caused by Old-Fashioned Husbands With Modern Wives. Many a Man's Marital Ideas Belong Back in Dark Ages.

Much of the conflict between husbands and wives is due to the fact that women have changed, matrimonially speaking, while men have stayed put. Nor need this surprise us, for the feminine has always been the restless, dissatisfied sex, always looking out for some new thing, and it is not to be forgotten that it was our first mother, not our first father, who so craved knowledge and change as to risk Paradise to get them.

So we have a new Eve, but the same old Adam in the home, and when Adam tries to use the same tactics in managing Eve that were popular in the Stone Age and when Eve attempts to bring Adam's ideas of the rights and privileges of wives up to date, the two schools of thought clash, with only too often fatal consequences to all concerned.

This difference between the sexes shows itself in men still clinging to their original ideal of a woman that they formulated centuries ago, while the modern woman's ideal man is no more like the hero of grandma's girlish dreams than Robert Taylor is like a caveman. Men still want the same qualities in a wife they have always wanted, while women desire an entirely different line of virtues in their husbands. And it is when each fails to find in the other what he or she wanted that trouble begins.

A man, of course, is not insensible to outward charm and glitter. He would like his wife to be a good-looker, witty and bright, well educated and to have social grace and poise. But underneath these he wants her to be domestic, thrifty, industrious, a stay-at-homer, to look up to him as an oracle and to begin every sentence with: "John says so-and-so." Very few men want their wives to be their equals, mentally, socially or financially, and when one makes the mistake of marrying a woman who is superior in any way, he had just as well take out his divorce papers with his marriage license.

Among the long list of career women there is hardly a baker's dozen who are not divorcees. Not because the lady scientists and doctors and lawyers and singers and writers and actors did anything untoward, but just because their husbands couldn't take it. They couldn't stand to be called Mr. Mary Smith and so they transferred their affections to some Dumb Dora who would look up to them and tell them how marvellous they were.

The modern woman also wants in marriage what her grandmother wanted, affection, loyalty, economic security, a husband who will be kind to her and bring in the bacon for herself and her children. But she wants something more than this. She wants her husband to treat her as his partner in the business of life, not as a domestic slave. She wants companionship and justice and freedom.

The highly educated college graduate resents having to talk like a moron to keep from hurting her husband's vanity. The wife who draws a bigger salary than her husband is infuriated at having him take possession of it and dole her out lunch money. The woman who has been independent and self-supporting for years rebels at having to ask her husband's permission to go to see her mother.

Of course, the old husbands and the new wives neither get just what they want in marriage, but the struggle for it makes a pretty fight as it stands. Perhaps some day they will iron out their differences, but at present they are in the predicament of an ox-driver who, without experience, undertakes to run a high-powered car. There ate bound to be wrecks along the road.

Can a Man Be Changed?

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am engaged to a lawyer. I admire him a great deal except for the fact that he is slouchy in his appearance. His clothes are always dirty, messy and look as if they had been thrown at him. They are not even buttoned up properly. Although I love him, I am getting so I do not like to be seen out with him, especially in a restaurant, where he makes so much noise with his food as to embarrass me. What can I say or do to show him that I am dissatisfied with him? How will it be if he doesn't change? Won't it hurt his business?

WORRIED

ANSWER:

The one thing that is absolutely necessary to a woman's happiness in marriage is for her to be proud of her husband. If for any reason whatsoever she is ashamed of him her marriage will be dust and ashes in her teeth.

And there is no possible thing that a husband could do that would so get on his wife's nerves as for him to be unkempt and untidy about his person. She could forgive his committing a crime easier than she could his wearing a dirty shirt.

And so I think you will make a very great mistake if you marry a man who looks so much like something that was fished out of the gutter that you dread being seen out with him. Also, another reason for not marrying him is because a man who is too lazy to keep himself clean will never succeed in business.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, February 29,

The astral influences bearing rule on the events of this day indicate a very lively and progressive trend of events, especially in all connected with writings, publicity, correspondence, and promotional enterprises. The greatest gain in such connection may be made through group collaboration, in which the objectives are directed toward the common good . All sorts of humane and public-spirited efforts should bring recognition. The young should find happiness.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a lively and progressive year, in which collaboration with group movements and other forward-moving projects should meet with conspicuous success. All pertaining to writings, advertising and intellectual pursuits thrive. Spiritual and community mobements also flourish, and the young should prosper and be happy.

A child born on this day may have unusual talent sand versatility, attaining ambitions in intellectual or professional channels where originality and creative skill are developed. It may, however, be restive and adventurous, as well as not orthodox in its ideas.

Tested Favorite Recipes

By MARY MOORE

One of my favorite invitations comes from a little lady who can make an afternoon tea fit for a queen out of mostly imagination and a very slim budget.

She uses egg yolks in mayonnaise and egg nogs for an undernourished child and has a surplus of whites on hand. So she has made a business of finding ways of using these whites appetizingly. Mina's Brazil Nut and Cherry Meringues are one of her best creations, and she served them with ice box cocoanut cookies(arranged very prettily on a silver cookie salver), and rolled toasted cheese sandwiches—tea with lemon and or hot milk completed the menu. Simple, but done with such delicacy and charm you hated to leave.

Mina's Brazil Nut and Cherry Meringues.

One-half cup cold egg whites, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup fine graulated sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla. Add salt to whites and beat very stiff using whip, not rotary beater. Whisk in 2 tablespoons sugar at a time until ½ cup is added then beat until it is stiff enough to cut clean with a knife. Then add the remaining sugar by sprinkling it over top and beating just enough to mix it in. Then add ½ cup each sliced candied cherries, ½ cup sliced Brazils (or almonds) which have been blanched, and roll into balls with powdered sugar on your hands. Bake at 300 deg. Fahr. until golden and when removed from oven they will retain their shape.

Christian Jury To Hear Nazi Murder Case

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—(AP)—The pretty wife of Ernest Kehler, 24, Winnipeg heavyweight boxer, who fought under the name of Ernie Haas, came to his support today as a jury began to hear evidence in his first degree murder trial for the slaying of Dr. Walter Engelberg, 42, German Consulate secretary.

"My place is at his side," insisted the wife, 25-year-old Mrs. Barbara Kehler, mother of their four-year-old son.

"I have all the confidence in the world he'll be acquitted. Any decent man would have done..."

She burst into tears at mention of Kehler's statement to police that he bludgeoned the Nazi agent to death last December 6 when Dr. Engelberg made indecent advances to him.

At her side was the defendant's aging father, Henry Kehler, a Winnipeg harness maker, who said that despite his son's indifferent success in the prize ring here, he had "quite a reputation" in Canada "as a coming heavyweight."

A prolonged trial was indicated when the prosecution announced it would call 57 witnesses and defence Attorney Leo Healy said some of his witnesses would be summoned from Canada.

An all-Christian jury was chosen after Jewish veniremen, almost without exception, said they would be prejudiced because the slain man was a Nazi.

Women Barred.

Women spectators were barred from the courtroom as the State charged "deliberate and premeditated murder" against Kehler.

Burton Turkus, assistant district attorney, told the jury that Kehler confessed bludgeoning the Nazi agent to death in a struggle resulting from offensive conduct on Engelberg's part.

"But there was no sign of a struggle in the bedroom of Dr. Engelbert's two-storey brick house in Brooklyn, where he was found in a pool of blood two days after the murder," Turkus said.

The prosecutor charged that Kehler had been in Dr. Engelberg's company "many times."

Turkus said Kehler fled to Scranton, Pa., where he picked up his wife, and then went to Canada, where he was arrested two weeks later.

Mission Quiz Held By Millbrook W.M.S.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 28—(ENS).—Mrs. A. R. Gibson entertained the W.M.S. of Grace Presbyterian Church for its February meeting on Friday at the manse, the hostess, who is also president, leading in the opening worship period, and closing with prayer.

The treasurer, Miss Agnes Johnston, reported $5.50 taken in the offering on the World Day of Prayer, $5.00 being remitted to the head office for the World Christian Literature Fund, as is done annually, and the remaining 50 cents paying for the programs used at the service.

Instead of the study book, a "quiz" on the various mission fields, and a contest on "Missionary Album," requiring names of those whose pictures were shown, filled in the time in a profitable and interesting manner.

A pleasant social hour followed the benediction.

Injured In Blast

LARDER LAKE, Ont., Feb. 28.—(CP).—Little hope was held today for recovery of Cecil Kirkpak, stope leader of the Kerr-Addison mine at this Northern Ontario settlement, injured Saturday in a dynamite blast.

THE Omaha Humane Society doesn't quite know what to do about this one:—

King, Lapointe Reach Winnipeg

WINNIPEG, Feb. 28 (CP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, minister of justice, arrived here this morning to launch a western tour for the March 26 federal elections. They will address a meeting here tonight.

Hon. T. A. Crerar, resources minister, who has been campaigning in Manitoba during the last two weeks greeted Mr. Mackenzie King and Mr. Lapointe.

The prime minister, rested and refreshed by his train trip, told reporters he will return to Ottawa immediately after his nomination meeting in Prince Albert Thursday.

He said that he did not believe it would be possible for him to make any other tour during the campaign. However, he will address one of two meetings within a day's travel of Ottawa.

Mr. Lapointe, who flew here from Ottawa overnight, will join the prime minister at his meeting tonight and then will go to Edmonton for a meeting Thursday night.

A Ticket Too

San Bernardino, Calif., Feb. 28

AN AUTO and a train ran a tie race to a crossing. The car was tossed 400 feet, but the four passengers were not hurt. A highway patrolman was amazed—but not too amazed to give the driver a ticket for failing to heed a crossing signal.

British Campers To Camouflage

LONDON, Feb. 28—(CP). — Persons who intend to camp in Britain next summer—and there are thousands of them—will attend night schools to learn how to camouflage their tents against aid attack.

The Camping Club of Great Britain and Ireland is organizing a "camp education group" in London.

W. Pegler, the club's general secretary, says: "The great thing in camouflage is to break up the pattern of tents so that it fits into the landscape.

"You have to study the background of the camp—usually earth or grass. In one case you use brown paint, in the other green. Fake shadows are often used to soften the contour of tents."

It has been suggested the number of tents in each group be limited to 20. Camps will be inspected by air raids precautions authorities and observed from the air to test the effectiveness of the camouflage.

Byrd Uses Plane To Map Antarctica

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—(AP)—A message from the Byrd expedition announced yesterday that Admiral Richard E. Byrd and two assistants had reached and mapped from the air the long-sought South Pacific coast of Antarctica, goal of explorers of many nationalities for the last 166 years.

Triumphing over fog, gales and ice-pack, the aerial explorers not only filled in 200 miles of the new coast, which is 1,200 miles east of Little America, but discovered a vast mountain range to the southward, rearing thousands of feet above sea level.

They also discovered an ice-covered island eighty miles offshore, mountains to the southeastward, and a great pack-enclosed sea. Byrd and his companions, who left Little America three weeks ago on the barkentine Bear, fought against the terrific odds of storms, icebergs, freezing fog, snow and increasing periods of darkness before the Bear was in position for the flight take-off.

The Bear, said a message received here, was forced to "drift blindly each night in inky-black, berg-dotted seas. Storms, brewed in Antarctic cauldrons, rattled the ship with hail or whitened her decks and rigging with snow for eleven consecutive days."

After one abortive attempt at a take-off, in which the twin-motored seaplane was almost trapped between a floe and a berg, a successful flight was made on February 24. The plane at first flew over an impenetrable ice pack for 100 miles, which the Admiral suggested was "eloquent reason why so many previous expeditions (including two of his own) seeking the coast in these longitudes have failed."

The great ice-locked sea, the party discovered, was forty miles broad and stretched westward as far as the eye could see. The mountain peaks discovered in the vast "dazzling whiteness" beyond the coastline lifted their jagged slopes up to possibly 7,500 feet.

Accompanying Byrd on the plane were two United States Navy men, Ashley C. Snow, an aviation chief machinists' mate, and Earle B. Perce, radioman. Byrd was a navigator, Snow the pilot and Perce the co-pilot.

HAVELOCK

Nursing Class Given Diplomas

HAVELOCK, Feb. 28—(ENS). — The interest which war service work has created locally was amply demonstrated yesterday afternoon, when over eighty ladies from the village and vicinity attended the weekly meeting of the Havelock-Belmont Red Cross. The final meeting of the month, the society as previously announced, had on display all the completed socks, sweaters, quilts, etc., for public inspection before they are packed for shipment. A feature of the meeting also was the presentation of the twenty-seven members of the recent home nursing class with their certificates and manuals. Afternoon tea was served at the conclusion of the program, for which an admission of 10c was charged.

The meeting opened with the president, Mrs. A. McLauchlin, in the chair, who extended a warm welcome to everyone in attendance. A vocal solo was contributed by Mrs. T. P. Lancaster, "There's a Land."

Honorary president of the society, Mrs. (Dr.) Joseph Holdcroft, presented nursing certificates to the following: Misses Natalie Clarke, Jean Rogers, Lois Thompson, Edna Warner, Hazel McCutcheon, Ruby McIntyre, Ina Morrison, Retta Southward, Marguerite Little, Margaret Voyer, and Elliott, and Mesdames H. Dooher, D. O. Post, P. T. Greenley, C. Lade, James Diaper, E. Cornell, H. Tinney, B. Poste, L. Rowat, D. Young, G. Denike, W. D. Duncan, P. Colquhoun, S. Southward, Joseph Little, F. Voyer.

Special thanks was extended by President Mrs. McLauchlin to those persons whose voluntary service made the classes so successful, namely Nurses Maloney, Sanders, and Rigby, Dr. D. J. Holdcroft, Dr. A. S. Thompson, Dr. C. V. Wallace, Dr. J. McLean, Mrs. Douglas Young and J. Evans.

The executive announced that a number of potted flowers, grown by Dr. Joseph Holdcroft, were being sold, the proceeds of which are being donated to the Red Cross.

All traffic men in Singapore, Malaya, have been ordered to wear white only.

France Guarding Farm Workers

PARIS, Feb. 28 (AP)—The French government today ordered all the nation's farm workers requisitioned, holding them to the soil under military control to assure the spring planting.

A notice issued by the ministries of agriculture and labor said that "agricultural production delayed by the severe winter must be intensified so that provisioning of the country will not be compromised."

The requisition decree forbade business and industries to hire workers away from the farms without special permission.

War industries employees already had been requisitioned, giving the government control over their work. The new measure, applying to a large proportion of this predominantly agricultural country was designed to meet a shortage of help arising from the general mobilization and the shift of men from country farms to city factories.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH. — In loving memory of a dear father and mother, who passed away February 23, 1933, and February 28, 1935.

One by one, they go before us,
They are fading like the dew,
But we know they're watching o'er us,
They the godd, the fair, the true.
They are waiting for us only
Where no pain can ever mar,
Dear ones who left us lonely
Watch us through the gate ajar;
There a father, there a mother,
Gone within those gates ajar.
—Sadly missed by Family.

DUNNETT.—In loving memory of Mrs. James Dunnett, who passed away February 28, 1938.

We know that she is happy
In our Saviour's home above,
Growing fairer as she lingers
In the sunshine of His love.
—Ever remembered by her daughter, Mrs. Lois Fleetwood, and Miss May Payne.

ONE FALSE STEP

BY KATHRN BEMIS

SYNOPSIS

Characters as you meet them:
JANIS SHELDON—Orphaned stenographer who inherits $20,000 and is in Hollywood seeking a picture career.
ROCK CONOVER—Former prison guard, who is also seeking a picture career.
LUCINDA HOLLENBECK—Woman about town in Hollywood, who makes her living from commissions on sales to gullible people she steers into the shops.
MARY BLACK—Successful Star.
DR. STEPHEN BLACK—Brother of Mary.

YESTERDAY'S ACTION

Janis has been living at Lucinda's apartment and finally is taken on a tour seeking a residence of her own, at the behest of Lucinda. They go to the home of Mary and Dr. Black and discuss the idea of leasing it. Janis is strangely moved by the actions of Dr. Black, but is undecided as to taking the house. She is worried about the amount of the rental.

CHAPTER VI

"PERHAPS you don't understand," Dr. Black told Janis earnestly. My sister is continually surrounded by curiosity seekers — she's hopelessly in the limelight and not a very good business woman. I only wished to make certain you were serious about the house—not just an autograph hunter, or a writer getting material for a spicy magazine article Mary wouldn't like."

"I hardly think the house suits me. So sorry—to have troubled you," she told him unsteadily.

She pulled away from him, stepped off the bottom stair, and walked past the Filipino houseboy, who had opened the door.

She marched quickly down the blue hydrangea-shaded walk to the smart maroon roadster and angrily flung herself inside. Never, she felt, had she been so insulted in all her life

But soon, Dr. Black and his sister came out to the car with Janis' two new friends, conversing amiably, as if nothing had happened, making Janis feel rather chagrined. She wondered if, after all, she had had real cause to take offense, and what had prompted her to come so close to rudeness.

Mary Black asked coaxingly: "You have decided to take my house, haven't you, Miss Sheldon?"

"I like it very much—I'll—I'll think about it."

Mary Black looked disappointed. Her voice dropped on, "Oh."

"We'll be able to convince Miss Sheldon that she can't find anything more lovely, Miss Black," hastily put in Lucinda.

"I could meet you this afternoon at Olds and Olds office—but later in the week I'll be on location." Mary Black's velvety brown eyes searched Janis' stern little face for some acquiescence to this plan.

A New Feeling

Dr. Black was looking at Janis now, also. And Janis felt something strange flare between herself and this man, something that caught her all at once with unexpected force. Then it vanished as quickly as it had come to be, leaving an odd void in her consciousness that annoyed her. "Good heaven—am I interested in every new man I meet!" she thought impatiently.

"I'll let you know — soon," she promised Mary Black politely.

Eve and Lucinda got into the car, and Eve started the motor. Janis, sitting next to the window, felt a hand on her wrist. Dr. Black's candid, homely countenance was close beside her. "I shall look forward to seeing you in our home," he murmured for her ears alone.

His voice, vibrant with meaning, sent something like prophesy through Janis. She was destined to recall this voice, the words it had uttered, many times during the succeeding months and wish from the bottom of her heart she had heeded the hidden significance of them.

"What a perfectly grand bargain that house is " sighed Eve, upon reachink the street's right-hand lane. "I should think you'd grab the chance of getting it, Janis."

"Such a stunning patio! What parties you could throw! Of course, you adore it, don't you, darling?" Lucinda sounded worried.

"Wouldn't any one?" countered Janis, all on edge. "But the price——"

"My dear! Where could you find anything cheaper—at all desirable?" Lucinda inquired, in a pained tone. "It would give you scads of prestige —such a wonderful part of town!

"Yes, you couldn't better that location," agreed Eve. "But if you're not interested, Janis, I'll have to show the place to other prospects today. I showed it to you first as a special favor to Lucinda. There aren't many such bargains floating around these days."

"Oh, let's stop talking house—go to the Brown Derby for lunch," cut in Lucinda. "I'm starving."

Eve glanced dubiously at her wrist watch and turned the car down Beverly Hills' smart business section. "I can—if we make it snappy. I'll have to get back and give Berry Olds a report on my morning's endeavors — which aren't so hot." She laughed dryly.

"Your morning's endeavors are magnificient, darling. Little Janis is weakening already, aren't you, dear?"

"I—I don't know exactly what to do," came from Janis uncertainly.

Lucinda flung Eve a significant look and Eve smiled back serenely. As far as they were concerned, the house business was successfully settled.

And while eating a fresh shrimp salad in the Brown Derby, Janis concluded she had better take Lucinda's advice if she wanted to get on in her new career. Besides, she was tired, anxious to get settled, and surely these two girls were right when they declared she couldn't locate a more perfectly appointed home for the price. The prestige of living in the home of a famous star, should also amount to something, and bring her luck.

So, later that afternoon, Janis met Mary Black in the office of Olds & Olds, where the lease was duly signed by both of them, and a check for $4,000 given Mary by her nervous new tenant. Dr. Black was not present and Janis felt vaguely disappointed. She wondered what had come over her, was plagued by something she could not explain.

Janis remained as guest in Lucinda's tiny bungalow for a whirling week after this and was the centre of attraction at many gay parties given by Lucinda and Eve's friends in other bungalows and apartments. She attended several in mountain and seashore cabins, that she thought not only gay actually wild. Eve and Lucinda made light of their friends' high jinks and were so generous-minded and modern about it all that Janis envied them, wished she could be more like them.

But she postponed it for the present. It was going to be an effort to change her habits and viewpoint too suddenly. It would be time enough when she became a star, as Lucinda declared were many of her friends; although Janis had never seen any of their names in lights over motion-picture theatres.

Nearly as soon as Janis was settled in her new home with only one maid, in spite of Lucinda urging her to keep at least two and a chauffer —and she knew just the man—Rock Conover came to see her. He announced that he had given up his old job and now had prospective work as a movie extra. He had managed all this, he said, so he could be near her.

He immediately filled her with the stimulation of his personality again, and she was unable to shake it off. Sometimes she wondered if she actually wanted to, and could not fathom why she had thrown discretion to the winds and so quickly became enamoured of a man about whom she knew nothing.

Lovemaking

They were out by the Pacific one moonlight evening, Janis, Lucinda, Eve, with Joe Thompson and Fatty Loomis and Rock. The job of roasting weenies over a shore oven had been given to Rock, while the girls unpacked hampers of food on a blanket spread on the sand.

But Rock had scarcely begun his task when he thrust the long-tined weenie fork into Joe Thompson's hands. "You're on for chef, Joe—yell when we can waddle back for eats," he ordered, and grasped Janis' arm and led her down the beach.

They stood finally on the damp sand watching waves topple into shore like whipped cream froth from the bowl of the ocean.

"Great, isn't it?" said Rock, glancing skyward. "You and I, Janis—out here on the edge of the world—our future written up there in the heavens."

His voice set up a turbulence in her which she could not control. She laughed happily, wondering if this could be love—real love. "You must have second sight. I only see the moon—and that lovely bright star reflected on the water. Is it Venus?"

"I wouldn't know. You're the only star I see out here."

His arm went around her waist. "You know I love you, don't you? I've never felt this way about any girl before. And you love me—I know it."

"You—you take a lot for granted," she said, unconsciously playing for time.

The First Kiss

He drew her to him quickly, pressed a long forcible kiss on her quivering mouth. He insisted, finally, "Tell me you love me."

Impulsively she threw her arms around his neck, rested her hot cheek on his in utter submission. "I do—I do love you," she choked out. I don't care if I've only known you such a little while, Rock —it makes no difference."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

"The Authority on Authorities"

LEADING AGAINST SLAMS

DEFENSE against slam contracts is a subject of its own, especially opening leads against them. Whereas the defender's effort to beat a lower contract is based on his striving to build up a sizeable number of tricks for his side, he must concentrate on the most likely way to get just a couple of tricks when he is opposed to one of the big bids. In doing this, he should be willing to abandon all hope of establishing long strings of tricks in order to increase the likelihood of taking a few.

Pass	6 ♠	Pass	6 NT

There were many variations of bidding in the duplicate where this deal arose, some using the Blackwood slam convention, as in the bidding given above, and some natural bidding. A number of the pairs stopped at 3-No Trumps.

A check-up showed that, wherever the deal was played at only 3-No Trumps, East invariably led the spade 10, and six-odd got made. But where the bid was carried to small slam, East in every case led the heart Q, and the contract was defeated.

Just wha' does that show? It reveals principally that, when the contract was low, the effort to set up the largest possible number of tricks, by means of the longer spade suit, justified risking a lead from the K into a tenace. But when the contract was a small slam the spade suit had better be counted on for only one trick, with a well-placed K, and the effort to build up another trick had better be in the shorter heart suit, headed by honors in sequence. This was so especially because the spade K could be an entry to take a heart trick, and the hearts could not very well serve as an entry for anything.

For one, hostesses were Mrs. W. R. Howard and Miss Josie Sutton, the latter extending the hospitality of her home for the even which was attended by forty-one guests and netted $10.50 for the W.A. funds. The other was at the home of Miss Luella Kennedy, with Miss Kennedy and Mrs. Edmund Ball as hostesses. Thirty-nine of the more than fifty guests invited were able to attend, and receipts were $10, with more money, it is expected, yet to come in. Dreams Wild Animal Is After Him Finds Raccoon Gnawing On Toe

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 28—(AP).—Did you ever dream that a wild animal was attacking you and then wake up and find a raccoon had a toe hold—with his teeth—on you?

Listen to the testimony of Elvis V. Todd, who is suing Raccoon Owner J. H. Kerr for $2,000:

"We had guests and I was sleeping on the davenport. I was awakened by an animal biting my big toe. I thought I was dreaming. I kicked at it with my other foot and I felt fur!

"Then we wrestled. I finally got a leg scissors around him and we rolled off the davenport. But the thing kept coming on, trying to get another hold. It bit me on the leg, too.

"Finally my wife rushed in. When she turned on the light, I could see the beast and got hold of it. I slammed the raccoon against the wall, but he came at me again. We rushed out of the room and slammed the door.

"The police came after a while and they caught the beast."

Todd says that for months after the attack, which occurred in September, 1938, he could get no restful sleep because his dreams were haunted by ferocious wild animals advancing to attack him.

The raccoon died.

Millbrook Girls Study Etiquette

MILLBROOK, Feb. 28—(ENS).—Mrs. Charles Thorndyke was hostess for the last meeting of the current season of the Junior Girls' Hostess Club, held at her home on Saturday at 3.30 p.m., with the president, Martha Belch, in the chair.

"An exchange of material for reference files" was in answer to the roll call, and was an interesting feature; business items included appointment of delegates to the annual Girls' Conference at Guelph, Ethel Belch and Ruby Fallis to represent the local group. Ruby Fallis will be in charge of the Club's exhibit on Achievement Day, and Ethel Belch and Wilma Armstrong will be the demonstrating team; the event will be sometime in July, and possibly at Millbrook.

The group is sponsoring a baking sale in the community waiting room on March 23, and will serve afternoon tea in June, following the local Achievement Day of the Club.

Mrs. Armstrong took the chair for the study period, which included etiquette for various occasions; the new laws on toasts, mentioning "How to introduce a guest speaker"; etiquette at a banquet, at meetings, at class parties, and on the street. Also what to expect from men and boys in the matter of etiquette for everyday and other occasions. In mentioning the new laws on toasts, the leader told of the proper way to honor "The King"—holding glass in the right hand, the guests will remain standing and sing the National Anthem, then drink the toast but without the clinking of glasses formerly in use; the toast is in absolute silence, according to the new ruling now generally accepted.

The usual vote of thanks to the hostess closed the gathering.

Food Rations Ordered In France

Tighten Price Control Coarsen Flour, Cut Down On Meat

PARIS, Feb. 29 (AP) — The French cabinet today decreed the issuance of food rationing cards.

Other decrees intended to reduce the consumption of oil and alcohol also were signed by President Lebrun as the French girded themselves for a long war.

Finance Minister Paul Reynaud will broadcast to the nation at 7.45 p.m. (1:45 p.m. p.m. EST) explaining the decrees.

There are 10 sets in all—designed in general to decrease consumption and spending and to increase production.

A communique issued after a 45-minute cabinet meeting this afternoon announced only the titles of the decrees.

France already has three meatless days a week and on the four other days restaurants are forbidden to serve more than one meat dish a person. Other foods, however, have not been rationed although Great Britain has a rationing system.

Cards Sent Out.

The first decree was entitled "relative to spending abroad" in line with the government's policy of reducing ordinary imports to conserve foreign exchange for extraordinary purchases.

A second group of measures "destined to restrain consumption" provided for "a general census for distribution of rationing cards" and control of retail food centres.

Food measures included the coarsening of bread flour.

A third decree tightened price control.

A fourth set of measures provided grants to farmers to increase spring wheat planting, cultivation of farm lands in army zones and reduction of customs duties on farm machinery.

Decrees also were signed which were destined to facilitate French exports, to regulate the employment of women, to fight waste in civil and military administrations and to provide easier taxes for landlords deprived of rents because of the war.

An agreement with the Bank of France, apparently to provide further raid to the treasury, also was announced.

They Want Nickel

London, Feb. 29 (CP Cable)

THE Russian invaders are working at top speed with the aid of German engineers to bring the vast nickel deposits near Petsamo, northern Finland, into production, according to the Copenhagen newspaper Onherald.

Officials of the Mond Nickel Company which holds the lease from Finland for the Petsamo properties on behalf of the International Nickel Company of Canada declined to comment. They said they had no private advices. Until war engulfed the far north it was hoped to have the mine at the production stage next fall.

Bacterial Warfare New Nazi Weapon?

NEW YORK, Feb. 29 — (CP)—Adolf Hitler's "secret weapon" may be a "horrible bacterial warfare that Hitler might not hesitate to unleash when he finds himself at bay," Dr. Martin Gumpert, former head of the Berlin city dispensary for deformity diseases, said here today.

A refugee from Nazi Germany, Dr. Gumpert quoted in an interview excerpts from an official German army journal published in September, 1939, which he said discussed the possibilities of unleashing disease-laden germs upon the civil populations in France and Great Britain.

"As crazy as it sounds, Hitler has been experimenting with this method of warfare," said Dr. Gumpert, who since 1936 has been a practising physician in New York. "Diseases such as tularemia, for which there is no possibility of treatment or vaccination, could be spread by dropping refrigerated flies and lice by airplane."

But the author of "Heil Hunger!" a study of health conditions in the Reich under Nazi dictatorship, said if Hitler resorts to such means of warfare as "a last

Barracks Springing Up In Moselle Area As Activity Increases

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 29 (AP)—Increased activity by German troops was observed today at various points along the Luxembourg and Netherlands frontiers.

The significance of the troop movements was not clear, but there were indications the Germans are pushing the job of strengthening the westwall fortifications.

Reports from Eupen, Belgium, told of a visit of high German army authorities to inspect military works and augmented labor camps across the frontier.

From Luxembourg came reports of greater activity noted in the Moselle valley. With the coming of milder weather, new barracks are said to be springing up almost overnight.

It was also believed that some of the shelters which could not be lived in in the recent severe cold weather now are being reoccupied.

Across the Netherlands frontier work is continuing on military projects carefully shielded from inspection. While the extent of these operations is not definitely known, they have not reached the elaborate scale of the westwall fortifications, which extend to the Netherlands border.

Joining Army Gets Archer Off With Fine For Arrow Through Premier's Window

LONDON, Feb. 29 — (CP). — Joseph Green, 22, was placed under a £2 $8.50) peace bond for a year today after he had shot an arrow bearing a written message through a window of 10 Downing Street, Prime Minister Chamberlain's residence.

He was arraigned in Police Court on charges of insulting behavior and wilfully damaging a pane of glass valued at five shillings. He got off lightly because he is joining the army tonight.

A sheet of paper attached to the arrow was handed to Magistrate Sir Robert Dummett at the police court hearing. Sir Robert said it was a reference to "Social Credit and so on."

The shooting incident occurred early to-day.

"I regret having to play Robin Hood in Downing Street," Green said.

"Today I am supposed to be joining His Majesty's Forces to serve my King and Country. I think people here should fight Hitlerism at home as well as in

Firing Off Holland Starts Scare, Only Dutch Practice

EUPEN, Belgium, Feb. 29 (CP) —Havas News Agency to-day quoted usually reliable sources as stating the German-Belgian and German-Netherlands frontiers are to be closed on the Reich side beginning to-morrow.

Residents of the German town of Aachen (Aix-la-Chapelle) who asked for permits to cross the border were informed by German police that there would be little use in getting such cards "in view of the forthcoming closing of the frontiers," Havas was informed.

Men in the eastern districts of Belgium who go to Germany daily to work have been told they will not be able to cross the border after to-morrow, according to the same sources.

It was also learned that bakers in Aachen and the surrounding district have been ordered to put in supplies of flour sufficient for three months, in view of transport difficulties.

About 1,000 residents of the Belgian industrial city of Verviers, 12 miles from the German border, have evacuated the city in the past month, it was reported. Woollen manufacturers in Verviers have begun to move their stocks, and in

Britain To Tighten Hold On Aliens

LONDON, Feb. 29 — (CP Cable). — The Government will tighten its supervision of enemy aliens residing in Great Britain, Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary, announced in the House of Commons today.

Taking notice of the mounting anxiety manifested recently over the comparative freedom of the 73,500 Germans and Austrians in Britain, Sir John announced new regional commissioners will review individual cases.

The police and the intelligence departments of the fighting services recently have been seriously concerned over the leniency shown by the tribunals. Out of 74,000 enemy aliens examined by the tribunals, not more than 500 have been interned.

More than 8,000 Germans have, for instance, been granted "B" certificates by tribunals. This allowed them unrestricted liberty as long as they did not own a motorcar or camera, and did not travel more than five miles from home without police permission.

Many of them, it was alleged, had not fulfilled these conditions. In some

Finns Mining Bay Ice About Viipuri

300,000 Red Troops Hammer Line In Ceaseless Drive

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 29 — (AP). —Finns are planting mines on the ice of the Bay of Viipuri and massing all available artillery as a defence against a possible encircling movement by Soviet Russian forces against Viipuri, it was said to-day in despatches from Finland reaching Stockholm and Copenhagen newspapers.

Fresh Soviet troops—some despatches estimated there were fully 19 Russian divisions, nearly 300,000 men, now on the Karelian Isthmus —were said to be forcing the fighting to a new intensity.

The Russians already have pounded their way up the western edge of the isthmus, directly south of Viipuri, and taken well fortified islands off the mainland.

The new Finnish defence precautions are aimed at preventing the Russians from using that newly-won territory for a drive north-west across the frozen bay to a point west of Viipuri which then would be menaced from two directions.

All non-combatants have been withdrawn from the village of Sakkijaervi, 25 miles west of Viipuri, and presumably the immediate objective of any Rusian drive across the ice and from other villages on the west coast of the bay.

Red Drive Never Halts.

HELSINKI, Feb. 29.— (AP). — The Finnish army's new positions between the Bay of Viipuri and the Vuoksi river, on the hard-fought Karelian Isthmus, are being subjected to "continued enemy pressure," the Finnish High Command announced to-day.

The Russian invaders appeared to be trying at all costs to press their newly-gained advantage in efforts to encircle and capture Viipuri, strategic port of the region.

Russian troops also attacked at the other—or eastern—end of the Isthmus front in "great force" at Taipale, according to the High Command's communique which covered yesterday's action. The communique was unusually brief.

Russian planes meanwhile were sighted over Helsinki to-day. The capital was subjected to three air

Hepburn Against Any Acreage Control Scheme

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Feb. 29. — (CP).—Opposition to any form of acreage control of farm products was expressed in an interview here to-day by Premier Hepburn in commenting on efforts of an Ontario Tobacco Growers' Association to obtain such control of tobacco crops.

A newly-formed Protective Co-operative Tobacco Growers' Association, sponsored by J. E. Carter, one-time mayor of Guelph, and William Sutch, former mayor of Tillsonburg, claims more than 2,000 names on a petition urging the Provincial government to adopt acreage control.

The Federal Agriculture Minister, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, told an audience here last night that he intended to confer with the Provincial Agriculture Minister, Hon. P. M. Dewan, in regard to the Ontario Government's attitude on acreage control.

If the 1940 crop of tobacco could be governed in acreage, Mr. Gardiner intimated that Federal aid might be forthcoming to alleviate

Britain To Spend 151 Million On Indian Army

LONDON, Feb. 29—(CP). — The British Government today announced "assistance amounting to £34,000,000 ($151,300,000)" is being extended for modernizing Indian defence forces over a five-year period.

Sir Hugh O'Neill, Under-Secretary or India, announced in the House of Commons that one-fourth of the sum would be considered a loan to India.

He said Britain considered India should meet the costs of special defence measures undertaken for India's interests during the war, but that Britain would contribute toward maintenance of Indian troops outside India. Some are now stationed in Egypt.

The annual grant to the Indian army remains at its 1939 level of £2,000,000.

The Indian defence budget for the 1940-41 fiscal year totals £40,000,000, including £6,000,000 extra because of the war.

Entire Aluminum Output Sold To Britain

MONTREAL, Feb. 29 — (AP). — Aluminum, vital to the Empire's war machine, will flow to Great Britain from Canada in ever-increasing quantities between now and the end of 1941.

Announcements made simultaneously last night here and in London disclosed that the British Ministry of Supply has purchased the entire exportable surplus of the aluminum company of Canada for the remainder of 1940 and for 1941.

It was also disclosed that the aluminum firm, Canada's main producer, has embarked on a wide program of expansion. The London announcement said that the increase in Canada production will be paralleled by a boost in the output of the British Aluminum Company, whose 1940 output has been purchased by Britain.

The Montreal announcement said the base price will be equal approximately to that current in Canada at the outbreak of the war.

Budapest Checks Czech Refugee Flight To France

BUDAPEST, Feb. 29 (AP) — Sabre-bearing policemen today guarded exits of the French legation, under orders to break up an alleged traffic in French passports for Czecho-Slovak refugees—orders reported to have been issued by Hungary under German pressure.

The police maintained an all-night vigil around the four-storey building where they said 40 refugees were harbored. Callers at the legation were questioned and automobiles leaving the inner courtyard were searched.

An inquiry at the legation brought the answer that no one at the moment was authorized to discuss the situation.

Hungarian officials were understood to have told the French minister, Pierre Guerlet, that so long as the passport traffic endangers Hungary's neutrality, in the German view, the police watch would not be relaxed.

It was reported the beleaguered Czecho-Slovaks sought haven in the diplomatic immunity of the legation when police started to round up scores of persons holding French passports without being able to speak French.

Germany was reported to have entered a stiff protest against Hungary's countenancing the passage of refugees through the country.

The basis of the German objection was said to be a belief that

Allies' Six-Month Toll Under 5,000 Against 100,000 At Ypres Alone

The war between the Allies and Germany is six months old tomorrow but its cost in manpower is light in comparison with the last war at the same stage.

Great Britain, France and Germany, have not yet had to go through what they did in the first six months of the last war. Then:

Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey were in on one side, and Britain, France, Belgium, Russia, Japan, Montenegro and Serbia on the other.

Germany had smashed across Belgium and through France to within a few miles of Paris.

The Russians had invaded Germany.

Slaughter at Tannenberg and in the first battles of the Marne and Ypres was history.

Japan was seizing German colonies in the Far East, Britain invading them in Africa.

Ships were sunk on the seven seas, three British cruisers going down in one day.

Now, a quarter century later, March 1 makes the present war six months old. Germany invaded Poland on Sept. 1. Great Birtain and France declared war on Germany Sept. 3.

In this six months Britain and France have fought a war of attribution against Germany, hemming her in and hurting her economically. So far, Germany also has waited.

In one phase—the war on allied and neutral merchant shipping—the current conflict is running ahead of the last war, a daily average of about 6,000 tons having been sunk in the past six months as compared with about 4,500. In the last war it was not until 1917 that Germany attempted the unrestricted sea warfare with which she opened this one on the very first day by sinking the Athenia.

Available statistics give the following picture of the war to date:

Paris reports allied casualties on land—in the spasmodic action on the western front—total about 1,500 killed and 7,500 wounded, with German casualties "slightly higher"; the British army casualties to Dec. 31 are listed as 40 killed and

Britain Returns 9 Of 21 Nazis Seized At Sea

YOKOHAMA, Feb. 29. — (CP-Havas) — Nine of the 21 Germans taken off the Liner Asama Maru by a British warship on Jan. 21 were handed back to Japanese authorities in a transfer at sea off this port to-day.

The nine men were brought into Japanese waters by the British auxiliary cruiser Kanimbla, which dropped anchor off Yokohama at 7 a.m. An hour later Yoshitaro Yamada, chief of the European affairs section of the foreign office, accompanied by Captain D. N. C. Tufnell, the British naval attache, and several foreign office officials, set out in a launch and took the nine Germans aboard a few minutes after reaching the Kanimbla's side.

The party returned to port at 10.10 a.m. The nine Germans were taken to the harbor master's office where their passports were examined.

The Germains were not permitted to talk to any one until formalities were completed. It was understood that the Japanese intended to turn them over to the German Consul General, who has made arrangements to accommodate them at a hotel.

The Kanimbla left Yokohama at 10.30 a.m., steaming away southward.

4 French Slain Battling German Patrol

BERLIN, Feb. 29.—(AP).— The German High Command reported today:

"In the course of local patrol activity in the border section west of Merzig and northwest of Weissenburg, the enemy suffered losses and was obliged to leave numerous prisoners in our hands.

"In the night of Feb. 27-28, individual enemy planes crossed into Germany on the north-west frontier, including two which flew over the Netherlands-German border. Air activity was slight on Feb. 28. Our air service confined itself to border patrols."

Death of at least four Frenchmen in hand-to-hand fighting in the patrol clash was reported by a German news agency.

"Bitter fighting at close quarters took place in a little woods northwest of Betting and east of the Moselle," DNB said.

"Strong opposing patrols clashed. In a hand-to-hand engagement the enemy fought coureageously, so there also were some light wounds on the German side.

'On Fence' Plan Saves Italian Blood But Food Jump Equals War Prices

ROME, Feb. 29. —(AP)— Italy clings grimly to her role of non-belligerency, is reaping few of the blessings of peace and is suffering some of the sacrifices of war at the end of the first six months of conflict.

Italians concede it is a precarious role.

Two developments considered most likely to upset Italian non-belligerence are the prospect of absolute victory for one side or extension of the war into the Balkans.

A Russian attack on Hungary or Rumania, diplomatic circles agree, almost certainly would find Italy fulfilling her favorite role—that of being a bulwark against Bolshevism.

The Italian position in the event of a German or French-British move in the Balkans is less clear. Informed Fascists say Italy would not let her Balkan interests go by default and in either case might face the necessity of making a choice between the belligerents.

Aside from its prospective benefits, non - belligerency already has brought Italy advantages and disadvantages. On the debit side must be listed the strain of gearing national life to wartime standards, an inescapable corollary of the dictum that Italy may be obliged at any moment to take up her arms and fight.

Coffee, sugar and gasoline are rationed severely, allowances being even less than those of some of the countries at war. Two days a week are meatless. Laundry soap has all but disappeared. Cooking gas ceases to flow after 9 p.m. A coal shortage, combined with the most severe winter in a generation, has caused general discomfort.

The severest test of popular endurance is the precipitous rise of the cost of living. It is estimated reliably that since the start of the war prices have increased an average of more than 20 per cent.

Coffee costs $1.10 a pound; bread, eight cents; potatoes, four cents; butter, 55 cents; veal, 50 cents; beef, 35 to 50; pork, 35; sugar, 18; lamb,

Torontonian Drives Bay Ice To Test Rights; Police Cross Him Up With Drunk Charge

TORONTO, Feb. 29. — Buster Ward of Ward's Island sought last night to make a test case on the rights of a citizen of Toronto to drive his car across the ice on the bay. The issue was avoided when police locked him up on a charge of being drunk in a public place.

He would land, he said, at the seaplane slip at the foot of Yonge street, where he would drive up the ramp. Nazis To Try Heroic Warsaw Mayor On Fund Fraud-For City's Defence

(Editor's Note.—While in Warsaw as an Associated Press foreign correspondent, Lloyd Lehrbas saw the war begin six months ago to-morrow. He wrote dramatic accounts of the German blitzkrieg against Poland. Now back in the United States, he has developed from authoritative sources a picture of what has happened to Poland in the interval. The following article describes the situation.)

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29 — (AP). —The Polish Republic consists today of one square mile at Angers, France—capital of the Polish Government in exile.

Poland itself, after 1,000 years of turbulent history, has been torn into three parts by Soviet Russia and the German Reich. Its 35,000,000 people are under alien rule, dead, or refugees in foreign lands.

Within a month after the first bomb had dropped on September 1, German planes, tanks and goose-stepping soldiers marched in from the West. Then Russian armies began to advance from the East until the two forces met.

For reasons still undisclosed, they drew a crude—and several times changed— line dividing their conquered territory.

Adolf Hitler next drew another line across his share, annexing that portion which once belonged to Germany, and making the remainder into a special area which he has indicated some day would become a "puppet" Polish state.

The map of what was Poland is divided to-day into three areas:

Territory bordering on Germany totalling 33,000 square miles with a population of 9,000,000 has been incorporated into the Reich.

The New Poland.

A triangular-shaped area in Central Poland consisting of about 39,000 square miles and a population of 12,000,000 has been designated the "general government" under the administration of Dr. Hans Frank as Governor-General.

The Eastern part, consisting of 78,000 square miles with a population of 14,000,000, has been absorbed by the Soviet Union.

Political Drives Turn Guns On Air Training

TORONTO, Feb. 29 — (CP). — Past and present air training schemes provide campaign ammunition for both the Government and Opposition parties as the election drive moves into high gear.

The Liberals uphold the British Commonwealth air training plan as a major contribution by Canada to the Allies' war effort, while the Conservatives charge that the Government made a grave error in not allowing Britain to establish her own schools here two years ago when negotiations first were opened.

M. A. MacPherson of Regina, continuing his Ontario tour, spoke at Barrie, Ont., last night and renewed the Conservative criticism. He said the present war effort was delayed because Canada did not fall in line with the 1937 air plan and it is "high time we put somebody in office who will play ball with Britain."

At Sault Ste. Marie, Conservative Leader Manion also mentioned the old air training plan and criticized the Government's part in these negotiations between Canada and Britain. So-called Canadian co-operation in this regard was a "complete piece of farce and humbug."

Generous chunks of Hansard reports of the debate in the House of Commons were cited by Dr. Manion in a general reply to the Winnipeg speech by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

First, Dr. Manion accused the Prime Minister of "changing his

Japan protested the act and the British government replied reiterating its rights to prevent men of military age from proceeding to service in Germany's armed forces. Negotiations were begun in Tokyo by Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie and resulted in a compromise under which Britain agreed to return nine of the men and the Japanese agreed to have their steamship lines avoid carrying Germans liable to seizure.

Orders to this effect have already been given by the ocean-going Japanese lines and have been extended to the services maintained between Japan and the Asiatic mainland.

While it had been generally hoped that this arrangement closed the matter, the Japanese foreign office spokesman told correspondents yesterday that Japan was still demanding the return of the remaining 12 men.

These are alarming prices in a country where $75 a month is a good salary for a white collar worker.

The end is not yet in sight. A two-per cent turnover tax, effective three weeks ago, is boosting living costs still further. Experts expect it to boost living costs another six to 10 per cent.

Non-belligerency has its advantages, too.

It is popular with the people. Although they grumble at deflation of their purses, they find that infinitely preferable to shedding blood in some Alpine trench.

Militarily, the Italian policy has increased Italy's strength. Nearly a year ago, Mussolini told Adolf Hitler this country would not be prepared fully for war for three years. Military experts believe much progress has been made in rectifying deficiences during the six months Italy has spent on the sidelines of the war.

The plane disappeared to the west, dropping anti-Polish pamphlets similar to those dropped by an unidentified plane over the province of Namur the night before.

wounded and 720 dead of accident or disease.

The German invasion of Poland was far more destructive. Hitler listed German casualties there up to Sept. 30, after most of the fighting in Poland was over, as 10,572 killed, 30,322 wounded and 3,404 missing. Polish casualties were much higher but indefinite. A Quaker relief mission estimated that the number of persons killed in the siege of Warsaw, the bloodiest phase of the campaign, at 50,000.

This compares with the 100,000 Allied soldiers and 250,000 Germans killed at Ypres alone, and with the 70,000 Russians killed and wounded at Tannenberg.

The naval war is largely a fight between Britain's great surface fleet and the submarines of Germany, although the French navy, Europe's second largest, is effective in the blockade against Germany and has sunk some 10 submarines. The Allies together have destroyed perhaps 50.

The only French warship lost was the minelaying cruiser Pluton, sunk in an accidental explosion with a loss of 100 lives. Britain has lost 30 naval vessels, including 15 naval trawlers, and 2,602 officers and men who were killed and 69 taken prisoner.

Aside from the trawlers British naval losses were one aircraft carrier, one battleship, one merchant cruiser, six destroyers, four submarines and two minesweepers.

French air casualty figures are indefinite but the Royal Air Force lists 738 men lost.

The biggest naval engagement was the all-day running fight on December 13 between the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee and three British cruisers, the Exeter, Ajax and Achilles, off the coast of Uruguay.

The 10,000-ton Graf Spee was run into Montevideo harbor, where she later was scuttled by her crew, after 36 of her men had been killed and the British ships had lost 75, most of them on the Exeter, which was badly crippled but able to steam away under her own power.

The strain on neutrals, particularly in Scandinavia, the lowlands and in the Balkans, has been great. Belgium and the Netherlands are planted directly among the warring powers. Commerce on the high seas is a chief problem for Scandinavia, while the Balkans are a source of important raw materials sought by both sides.

Since Russia became embroiled in Finland November 30, the threat of action in southeastern Europe has been heard. Turkey, non-belligerent ally of Britain and France, is on a virtual war footing. The Allies have massed thousands of troops in the Near East.

Italy, who at the beginning of the war pictured herself as ready to remain neutral and profit from increased trade, now is not so happy. What she wants is a peace of compromise so she can wield some influence.

MOSCOW, Feb. 29 — (AP). — The Red army pressed on toward Viipuri to-day, reporting the capture of six additional Finnish towns that brought the Karelian Isthmus drive within four miles of the city.

Finnish forces continued to retreat after unsuccessful counter-attacks that cast them heavy losses, said the Soviet communique.

Forty-two Finnish defensive fortifications were taken yesterday, with full data not yet available, the communique said, and added:

"Soviet troops captured the enemy's defensive fortifications on the northern bank of the Salmenkaita River, occupied the town of Ritasaari on the western bank of Vuoski Lake, also the villages of Maikela, Hammarnijaervi, and Seikurila, north of Lake Jurapin; Kamara, four kilometres south-west of the station of Hienjoki; and Ylasomme, six kilometres south of Viipuri."

The Kamara mentioned is a highway junction five miles north of a railroad station of the same name which the Russians previously had reported capturing.

Little Air Action.

On other fronts, the communique said there were "no important changes," while bad weather restricted the air force to reconnoitring flights.

(The Finns, making slight mention of the Karelian Isthmus struggle which has been in progress since the Russian invasion began on November 30 and which has been a continual smashing attack since February 1, said merely that Soviet forces "suffered heavily" and that the Finns are fighting defensive actions.

(The fortress of Taipale, on the eastern end of the Mannerheim Line that spans the Karelian Isthmus, continued to stand firm against Russian battering, the Finns reported.

(Coupling of the Russian and Finnish reports indicated that the Russian gains were in a broad spearhead, bordered on the east by the stream-like Vuoksi and on the west by the Gulf of Finland, with the point nearly touching the ruins of Viipuri).

G. J. Monahan Passes Away

Gordon J. Monahan, 45, sales manager of the Canadian Raybestos Company, died at his home at 548 Weller street just before noon today.

Mr. Monahan had been associated with the Raybestos Company here for the past 17 years. He had been ill since the first of January when he was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. Apparently on the road to recovery he left the hospital on February 11 and seemed to be making good progress until yesterday when he suffered a sudden relapse. His death today came as a great shock, however, since he was not believed to be in critical condition.

Mr. Monahan leaves his wife, formerly Ann Rodermond; two sons, James and Gordon, Junior; and one daughter, Rosanne, all of them at home.

The funeral will be held from the home on Saturday morning at 8.45 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral for Requiem Mass at 9 a.m. Interment will be at Mount Hope Cemetery, Toronto.

Trinity Sews Up Bantam Playoffs

Trinity evened up the Church League bantam finals last night with a 3-1 win over All Saints', making it a game each. They meet tonight. It was a hot tilt with checking close and rough. Trinity got two in the first, Beatty's shot going in off a rival defenceman, and Jewell scoring in close. Beatty again bulged the hemp in the third, and Jones got the only Anglican marker near the end. Trinity played defensively between breakaways and Dorset shone in goal. Beatty and Jones were effective, with Hill, Outram, Jewell and Plunkett also good. The teams:

Trinity: Goal, Dorset; defence, Beatty, Hall; centre, Fallon; wings, Plunkett, Meredith; subs, Beaton, Dinsdale, Jewell, Pammett.

All Saints: Goal, Panter; defence, Outram, Shadgett; centre, Chambers; wings, Jones, Baxter; subs, McDougall, Menzies, Mason, Hill.

Referee—R. Gordon.

MONTREAL, Feb. 29—(CP). — A nine-pound son—first "Leap Year" baby of the day—was born a few minutes after midnight to Mrs. Edouard Asselin. Both mother and child were reported "doing well." Mr. Asselin is a former Quebec Deputy Attorney General.

Manion Charges King's Defence Tune Is Changing

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Feb. 29 — (CP). — Conservative Leader Manion accused Prime Minister Mackenzie King of "changing his tune" since last September regarding the reduction of defence appropriations during the year of the Conservative regime in Canada from 1930 to 1935, in a speech here last night.

Quotations from Hansard, official record of the House of Commons debate, were used freely by Dr. Manion, as he claimed among other things that the Prime Minister had charged that the defence deteriorated in the Dominion between 1930-35. The Conservative leader said that such had been the case in all peace-loving countries.

During the war session of parliament, however, the Prime Minister, according to Hansard said Sept. 8: "I am not attributing this by way of blame upon another administration. I am saying now that had we been in office in the previous years we doubtless would have done our utmost to cut down armaments and military expenditures," Dr. Manion told his audience.

villages along the southern border has been ceded by Germany to the German-dominated Slovak government.

Polish Embassy officials estimate that 1,000,000 must be deducted from Poland's population of six months ago to account for the killed and for refugees in Rumania, Hungary, and neighboring countries.

The Polish Government at Angers has issued white papers in which it describes Poland to-day as a land of hunger, stark fear, wrecked hospitals and churches, executions and methodical and cruel deportations. On February 2 it estimated 18,000 Poles of all classes had been executed.

The German government has admitted that Poles have been executed for killing German residents during the war, for sniping, and for spying and other violations of German military law.

Most of the ranking Polish officials and titled families fled from the country in the first days of the war. Some were killed or arrested.

After The Mayor

Polish sources report that Stefan Starzynski, heroic mayor of Warsaw during the German siege, whose fate has been unknown, soon will be placed on trial by German authorities on charges of "misappropriating city funds"—presumably because money was spent to defend the city against the invader.

All political organizations have been disbanded.

All theatres and concert halls have been closed.

All radio sets have been confiscated.

Only two newspapers are published in Polish, and both are Nazi organs.

Mail is consored and takes from a month to six weeks to reach North America. Telegrams come through in from two days to two weeks.

The Polish language is not permitted to be spoken on the streets.

going to cross the ice tonight. The ice," the voice repeated. "In a car. I'm going to drive and all the police in Toronto can't stop me."

"Ah, yes," said the night editor.

"A crowd of cops will be there and I want a reporter to be there to see how they will try to trample the right of a citizen," said the voice.

Fifteen minutes later a cameraman and a reporter joined a group at the foot of Yonge street where there's a ramp and a barricade. Away out on the ice a light winked.

The light crawled closer, split into twin headlights, vanished behind a big hump of ice and reappeared again. The squad of officials moved down the ramp to the wooden barrier. The headlights glared and the car stopped 15 feet away, on the ice.

"You can't get past," a policeman challenged. "Do you see this barrier?"

He pointed to a wooden fence across the ramp. On the fence was a sign saying it was the property of the Harbor Commission and must not be moved.

Two men stepped out of the car. One identified himself as Ward. He said he wanted to get through, that there was no law to stop him, that it was a free country.

"I'm a citizen," said Ward. "I demand to be allowed into Toronto."

"Climb the fence," advised a lifeguard.

"I want the car in, too. I want to drive in. I drove out didn't I?"

One of the lifeguards was walking away. He froze in mid-stride and turned around. "Oh, you did?" he asked.

"Sure I did. This afternoon I drove from Toronto to the Island."

The lifeguard hurried over to the barrier. "This barrier has been busted," he announced in a grieved tone.

A few minutes later two men in plain clothes walked down the ramp and took Ward and his friend, William McDougall, in charge.

increasing concern over a 1939 surplus of more than 17,000,000 pounds.

Premier Hepburn said to-day he didn't know whether the Gardiner-Dewan conference had been held, but that Mr. Dewan had made no recent reports to him on the tobacco situation.

The Premier said that Mr. Gardiner was within his rights if assistance was given to growers in their exporting of their marketable surplus, but that the policy of the Provincial government was opposed to any acreage control. Acreage should be governed by the law of supply and deman, he said.

At a meeting in Simcoe last Saturday, Mr. Carter said he had been advised that there was an indication the Federal government would announce assistance for tobacco growers in the near future.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Feb. 29 — (CP). — The price trend on Winnipeg Grain Exchange was irregular today with traders apparently following the unsettled Chicago market.

Wheat futures quotations fluctuated in a narrow range around previous closing levels and at the finish were ½ to ⅝ lower. May was quoted at 89, July 90¼ and October 91¼.

Chicago was reported down about ¼ cents near the close. Buenos Aires was 1¼ to 1⅛ cents lower at mid-day.

The coarse grains pit reported some domestic interest in oats and barley, but flax and rye were mostly neglected.

Civic Banquet Follows Opening Of Millbrook's New Post Office

MILLBROOK, Feb. 29—(ENS)—Millbrook's new Government Post Office was officially opened at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, when A. H. B. Potts, Federal Superintendent of Land and Air Mail Services, Ottawa, acting in place of the Postmaster-General, who sent his regrets at not being able to officiate in persons, turned the key in the main entrance door, declared the building open, and admitted the public to a survey of what is undoubtedly an important community asset.

Unexpectedly, word had been officially received by Postmaster T. H. Collins the same day, ordering immediate use of the new post office, and removal from the quarters farther down on King street, which have housed the post office for some years, took place under Mr. Potts' supervision, following the banquet on Wednesday evening.

Banquet Is Held

Following inspection of the handsome new building, by a large number of interested citizens of both the village and countryside, adjournment was made to the town hall, where covers were laid for 150 guests, and tables attractive with runners of green and cream fluted crepe paper, silver vases of daffodils adding to the Spring-like atmosphere. The W.A. of St. Andrew's Church did the catering.

Rev. W. E. Ball acted as toastmaster at the conclusion of an abundant meal, and after The King had been duly honored, W. R. Howard, M.A., proposed the toast to "Our Country," mentioning the fact that we are a nation at war, that the British Empire is fighting for its very existence, and speaking with pride not only of the part Canada is playing in this present war, but also of the fine contribution she made in men and munitions in the last world war, he concluded: "I ask you to think of the men of Canada who are fighting for us, as we drink this toast."

Senator J. J. Duffus of Peterborough was given an ovation as he rose to respond to the toast, his very fine address dealing in detail with the industries and diversified products of the various provinces from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and giving to Ontario an outstanding place, particularly in her production of gold; her great Hydro development; and also, especially in this immediate district, her amazing tourist trade, with its "cash crop."

The improvement in Canada's defences was also stressed, the speaked ending, "We are quite safe now, should any enemy vessel visit either one of our ocean borders."

Community singing with Leslie Unitt at the piano, and a solo by Miss Juan Shield, "I Dream of Jeanie," with "Hannibal Crossed the Alps" as a recall, preceded the toast to The Post Office, proposed by ex-Warden W. T. Wood, who told of the request of municipal council some five years ago, for a post office building on the lot which the Government had purchased for this purpose previous to the last World War; and of the satisfaction generally felt that the handsome new building had been erected, adding much to the appearance of the business section of the village, and giving promise of greatly improved postal facilities.

W. F. Rickard, member for Durham in the last House, made suitable response to the toast, and spoke particularly of the harmony and cooperation which had characterized everything in connection with the new building, "hence we had had quick and good results. It is for use and not abuse; and I believe the small communities should have the same facilities as the larger centres for the carrying on of their public services." The need for readiness for national defence was stressed, "that we may pass on to posterity undimmed and unimpaired, the privileges of freedom to thank and act as we see fit, which we enjoy."

Guest Speaker.

Mr. Rickard introduced the guest speaker of the evening, A. H. B. Potts, who has been connected with the national mail service for 36 years, and who spoke of his personal pride in the new post office building, which he had had the pleasure of opening, and of turning over to the public for use. "The post office enters closely into the business life of your community, as perhaps no other utility does, and is a tangible evidence of the faith the post office department has in your community continuance and grewth."

Going back to early days in Millbrook, from a study of the Archives at Ottawa, the speaker told of the post office being first established here on January 6, 1846; the first postmaster of whom record has been made was Matthew Knowlson, appointed in 1951, died in 1854, succeeded by Miss Isabelle Knowlson, who was in turn succeeded by Richard Howden, appointed June 1, 1861, and who held the position for 11 years. The late William Vance was made postmaster on September 17, 1872, and continued for 50 years; the present incumbent, T. H. Collins, assuming office in 1930.

The use of air mail was particularly stressed, the speaker pointing out that a letter posted at St. John's, New Brunswick at 4.30 a.m. would be in Vancouver at 11.25 the next morning. Also a letter sent by air mail from Millbrook on the 4.14 p.m. train, would reach Vancouver at 11.25 a.m. or Halifax, N.S., at 8.30 the next morning. "We sent four tons of mail over the trans-Canada air line in November last, and our service now reaches to the Arctic Circle, to White Horse and to Dawson City. Your new post office building, along with one hundred others of a similar nature, has been erected by a democratic form of government for the preservation of which we are fighting in this war, in the last four years."

In conclusion, Mr. Potts extended his personal good wishes for Millbrook's continued prosperity and success in the years ahead.

Mr. W. Moir of Toronto, the assistant chief architect, also spoke briefly of the satisfaction in the new building, and Postmaster T. H. Collins mentioned its beauty and its improved facilities for carrying on the postal business.

R. C. Hornibrook, provincial post office inspector, was next heard, his message dealing particularly with the efficient manner in which Postmaster Collins carries out his duties. "If I came into his office fifty times a year, to check up, I would always find everything O.K." The proper doing up of parcels, and addressing of letters, taking pains always to put the sender's name on the outside, and the convenience of having a locked box for individual and family use, took up the remainder of Mr. Hornibrook's informative address.

P. I. Bentley, local supervisor of construction, also spoke, at the request of the toastmaster, mentioning especially the fine co-operation which he had received from the department as the building progressed, or any changes in the plan became necessary. The very best of work and material had gone into the new building, of which the approximate cost was $11,000.

A whistling solo by Miss Beatrice McDowell was warmly applauded, and the toast to "Our Guests," was ably proposed by ex-Warden Percy Stinson, and responded to by Cecil G. Mercer, M.P.P. and by Ross Strike of Bowmanville, who incidentally is the Conservative candidate for Durham in the present election campaign. Mr. Strike spoke particularly of the modern trend of industries from the larger to the smaller centres, for improving conditions both from a business and a physical standpoint. That Millbrook might have added growth and prosperity by inducing one or more industries to locate locally was the speaker's closing wish.

F. W. Bowen, ex-M.P., always a popular visitor in the community, briefly addressed the gathering, and

Asks For Joint Meetings

Fred G. Sanderson was the member for Perth Co. in the last Parliament, and is again the Liberal candidate. John Murray, a lawyer of Stratford, has accepted the nomination in support of Hon. Dr. Manion, and Mr. Murray suggests there be a new form of campaigning in the riding. New because it has not been used for some years. That is, the holding of joint meetings. Each candidate would have equal time for his address and by going to one meeting the people would hear all that both candidates had to say.

Mr. Murray says that snow lies deep on many of the roads in the rural part of the riding, and that is correct. Says too that often enough it is difficult for people to get away because there is no one to leave at home with the children. So he would have them go just once in their district and get a double dose of politics. Then they could go home and figure what it was all about.

We have wondered often enough how many votes are won or changed by the attendance of people at political gatherings. That would probably depend on the size and calibre and persuasiveness of the speaker. There is of course the changing vote otherwise there would never be a change in government. Once a government got in power it would stay there unless people changed their minds about it.

But the bulk of the vote does not change. Liberals have always gone to Liberal meetings, and Conservatives have joined together at Conservative gatherings. They go because they know they are going to hear what they want to hear. They applaud because the speaker is saying what they already believe.

The joint meeting is not new, but a good many candidates do not like it. But if a man is elected to the House of Commons he has to go and attend a session where there is nothing else but a joint debate going on. One result of the joint meeting should be to make the speakers more certain of their statements, of their facts and figures because they would know at the outset if they went wild of the mark they could be checked up by the opposing speaker.

Whether they can bring back the joint meeting in Perth we do not know. It has been out of use for a long time probably because most candidates like to have things their own way and prefer to speak to a sympathetic audience.

A Chance For Gallantry

Robert Smeaton White, Conservative member in the last Parliament from St. Antoine-Westmount, a riding in Montreal, has indicated he will again be a candidate. He was born in Peterborough in 1856, so he is now in his 84th year. He is to have opposition in the election from a Liberal candidate, but it would be rather a gracious thing if Mr. White were told to return to his seat on behalf of all the voters.

Mr. White is rather far removed from the turmoil of party politics. He has seen so much come and go that he is able to distinguish readily that which is good from that which is not. He is a valuable man in the House no matter what party is in power.

He was first elected in 1888 and again in 1891. Then he retired from public life, but was returned once more in 1925-26, 1930-35, and in the contest came out with a majority of 5,683. It would have been a kindly thing to have left him unopposed.

The Right Sort Of Ending

The Montreal Star wrote an editorial complimenting the Province of Quebec on the success of a provincial loan for $65,000,000. It was the largest public loan floated since Confederation. The explanation is given that the previous Quebec government had actually doubled the Consolidated Debt of the province after being in office for only three and a-quarter years.

The editorial in the Star has a proper enough conclusion, and in it reference is made to the warning of the Provincial Treasurer that the success of the loan in no way diminishes the province's heavy burden of debt. The only way to cure that condition is by economy or additional revenue—or both.

As a rule we like to boast about the financial standing of our provinces, our municipality or our Dominion every time a loan goes over the top. We come rather giddily at times to the conclusion that what we call our financial standing is away high, and we entirely neglect to mention that when we borrow some more millions we are under obligation to pay them back and to hand out interest money as well. Nor have we often stopped to consider that according to our system of governmental financing no provision is made to retire these loans. There are not the restrictions which are imposed on municipalities whereby we must make levies on our taxpayers each year to pay off the debt. So it was well that the Montreal paper tapered off its bit of enthusiasm by using the sound warning of the Treasurer that floating a loan does not decrease the indebtedness. Most times it adds to it.

Can He Keep It Up?

The suggestion was offered by a speaker in Hamilton that during Passion Week (or Holy Week) which this year immediately precedes the Dominion election, there should be a cessation of "name calling" in election addresses. The feeling prompting the suggestion is that it would be a fitting time to remove too pointed personal reference from election discussions. The suggestion is rather new and may have its points.

We believe that by the time the last week has arrived there are some—fortunately not a large number—of our public men who will have exhausted their supply of invective. Jamieson Bone, of Belleville, former mayor of the city and now candidate for the Federal House, is on the hustings. When he was Mayor he used to make addresses and they were noted for the amount of the explosive material they contained. There could hardly be any dull moments when Mr. Bone had struck his stride.

Now that he is in the Federal contest Mr. Bone is still Mr. Bone. He does not appear to like Mr. Mackenzie King, nor does he approve of Liberal governments, and Mr. Bone has his own way of saying so.

He was speaking in the friendly town of Cobourg, and looking over a report of his address we find the following references to Mr. King:

"He has proven himself to be a saboteur, an American at heart, anti-British and a chair-warmer of the old school."

A saboteur we believe is one who is guilty of sabotage, and that is the deliberate and planned wrecking of property. It causes one to think in terms of bombs and dynamite and such stuff.

Mr. Bone stated it would be proper to have Mr. King tried by court martial and punished for his crimes. We gather that the man is trying to make it plain that he does not think much of Mr. King. But we were wondering whether it would not be rather wise to fall in line with that suggestion from Hamilton about eliminating "name calling" and the intensification of personal denunciation during the last week of the campaign. If Mr. Bone is going to have Mr. King tried by court martial now—and there is almost a month yet to go—we fear he may run out of heavy material before polling day.

The Right Idea

Property Committee of the Peterborough City Council has in hand a tender for market fees for the year, but at the moment the committee considers it better to think about it a little longer. The reason for the added thought is the belief that the city should engage a clerk to manage the market for the Council.

That is the plan most generally followed now. In some centres there is a profit made from the market, but that is not the chief concern. The big feature is that it places control of the market in the hands of the Property Committee.

Peterborough has a large market, and the truth is not much has been done to encourage its growth. We still maintain that the open space is quite good enough for those who do not find places in the upstairs market. We have no shelter whatever for those who do business outside nor for the customers who patronize them. In that way we are backward.

The Examiner does not suggest that there should be a policy of seeking to make money out of the farmers' market. It is actually a means of bringing people to the city and these people do their trading here. So the market occupies that desirable dual position, a place of buying and selling, and the source of revenue which leads to further buying in the city.

The Property Committee can invest with profit what time they have to spare in planning for better market facilities, for making certain that the farmers are well looked after and seeing to it that people in the city are made more aware of the existence and purpose of the farmers' market.

Fixing The Wheat Price

M. J. Coldwell, national chairman of the C.C.F., does not like the way things have been done at Ottawa. Mr. Coldwell was a member of the House of Commons since 1935, and he was giving voice to his complaints at Stony Plain, Alta. He is on a speaking tour which he anticipates will be national in its extent.

For one thing the price of wheat set by the government at 70 cents was entirely too low. Mr. Coldwell said it did not cover the cost of production, and that may be true enough as from the 70 cents there has to be deducted the cost of getting the wheat to Fort William which is about 19 cents per bushel from a central point in Alberta, in which province Mr. Coldwell was speaking.

The story of wheat in the Canadian West is long, and it is not one of unbroken success. A generation or more ago we found a land which would grow wheat, and it was settled for that purpose. There was a rush of immigrants, and there was an exodus of young men from our older provinces, and they were all going to grow wheat on land which they could get at low cost.

As far as we can find no person saw far enough ahead to ask some questions. No person inquired what was going to become of all the wheat which was grown, and no one took the trouble to indicate that growing wheat in the Canadian West was actually selecting an area of production which was a long way removed from the wheat markets of the world, and which was also a long way removed from the sea coast and cheap shipping.

Other nations were increasing their wheat production, and while that was going on our sales were decreasing to lands to which we formerly exported. Germany and Italy decided years ago to grow their own wheat; they were afraid that in war time they could not depend on us, and France was in a similar position. The result was the world had too much wheat or else the people of the world were not able to purchase sufficient of it to deal with the surplus.

A fixed price for wheat can never be regarded as anything else than an emergency measure. If we were to say to all the wheat growers of the West "Yes, go ahead and grow all the wheat you can and through our Government we will guarantee to pay a fair price for it" we would be in trouble enough in a hurry. It would be extending the system of government paternalism to the point where we could not stand it. The farmers of the East, many of whom have no wheat for sale, would have to pay toward maintaining a guaranteed and artificial price for the wheat growers of the West. And if the Government lost some millions of dollars on the year's trading then every taxable individual would be called upon to pay a portion of the loss.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Naval experts were called when a German mine was washed up on the coast near a British town, and that would be a fine chance for an expert to demonstrate that's what he was.

Butter prices in Germany have been increased by 8 cents per pound by order of the government. Possibly the spy department found out that in Ontario we pay that much tax on gasoline.

Minister at Indianapolis declared no man amounts to anything unless he has a good nagger for a wife. As a rule we agree with most anything a minister has to say but in this case we elect to vote with the opposition.

One man was in court at London, Ont., and the charge was that he had been stealing trees. He produced evidence to show he had been assessed for the property since 1920, and as such things go that looks like a fairly good alibi.

Norway is willing to arbitrate the Altmark case with Britain. Now isn't that a great little idea. And as a starter we suppose the British prisoners would have to be placed back in the depths of the hell-ship so there would be something about which to arbitrate. Before Norway goes to the expense of hiring a hall it ought to be stated that Britain isn't having any.

ALAS!

(By A.R.K.)

¶ It's not much fun now being a pig, it's chance of life's not very big, lasts just six months or so; and when it's learned to look around, and locate some new rooting ground, why then it's time to go.

¶ For scientific men today, decide how much that pig should weigh, their rules are hard and flat; they know how much the pig should eat, so it will finish clean and neat, how much of lean and fat.

¶ In other years when life was free, pigs had more fun it seems to me, and they lived longer too; for just six months is awful short, for pigs to have a bit of sport, and then find they are through.

¶ A pig back there lived quite a spell, and knew his relatives quite well, his aunts and uncles too; his grandsire might stop by some day, and have a chance to talk and say, of things he used to do.

¶ Ye old time pig reached quite a size, and had some wisdom in his eyes, could recollect last year; could recollect his days of youth, could sift the error from the truth, nor did he live in fear.

¶ Alas the pig that lives today, he can't have very much to say, no future plans are laid; he only has six months to stay, and then they take the pig away —into the bacon trade.

Writes About Interview He Didn't Get

WHEN, H. B. Elliston of the staff of the Christian Science Monitor left Boston several months ago he had rather an elaborate assignment. It was in Europe, and he was to go there and find out what he could and send home reports.

The vessel on which he sailed was picked up by the British sea patrol and taken in for inspection. Mr. Elliston said he had been wondering just how effective that sea patrol was, and he admitted it was very good indeed.

Since then he has been in Finland and has seen much of the fighting there. More recently he moved to The Hague in Holland, and it occurred to him that he might make a try at getting an interview with Wilhelm Hohenzollern, the former Kaiser of Germany who lives in exile at Doorn not far off. Mr. Elliston failed and he tells of his failure:

The Hague.

The story of how I didn't get an interview with the Kaiser may not be without interest to all the newspapermen who sometimes think on such an assignment. Kaiser Wilhelm II is still good copy. But it didn't occur to me to go out to Doorn till I read in the newspaper of the Kaiser's views of the Finns as given to the New York press by his friend, Poultney Bigelow.

I thought the Kaiser might be interested in the fact that I had just come down from Finland. So many people have been interested. Why not the Kaiser? Accordingly I mentioned the matter the next day to the editor of the Handelsblad on whom I was calling. "Um," he said, in Dutch. Then he tinkled a bell and asked his secretary for something.

What was produced was his own dossier of refused applications. "You might do it," he said, and he gave me the name of the Lord High Chamberlain at the Court of Doorn, and also the name of the Netherlands "protector" of the Kaiser whom the Netherlands appointed in 1919 at Allied solicitation.

The Chamberlain's name is Baron von Sell—His Excellency to all inquirers. And the gentleman responsible for "protecting" the Kaiser is Mr. Kan. Mr. Kan lives at The Hague, and is a person of note, being a member of the Council of State. To both gentlemen, therefore, I presented my petition for an audience. Today I got the sad news that the Kaiser couldn't be at home to me.

Nor did the Kaiser encourage any huckstering on my part by signing the turndown. Probably he had read the story of Rudyard Kipling who wrote a dozen letters of complaint to the local gas company and found when he called in person that the company had been doing brisk business in selling the complaints and hoping for more.

No, Baron von Sell wrote to me. The letter came in elegant German, on letter paper bearing the watermark:

Hofmarschall-Amt
Seiner-Majestat
des Kaisers und Konigs
Wilhelm II

The letter informed me that my request couldn't be granted.

"His majesty," said the writer, "as a matter of principle, doesn't receive representatives of the press of whatever kind. The extraordinary position in which His Majesty finds himself here in this country of refuge (Gastland) lays upon him the obligation to observe the strictest reserve." Which is, of course, what I expected. But I had tied my request for an audience on to Poultney Bigelow's handout of the Kaiser's letter.

Said the Hofmarschall:

"The letter of His Majesty to Mr. Poultney Bigelow, who is a friend of his, had a perfectly personal character, and was not destined for publication."

That was that for Mr. Bigelow as well as for myself.

I regret now that I thought so much about my readers that I mentioned the dread word "interview." Perhaps if I had simply offered to tell the Kaiser all about the fighting Finns I might have had an unpublishable chat. Perhaps.

Anyway, I regret I didn't try it on. In that event I would have had a brace in my bag of interviews with monarchs with nothing left of their kingdoms but their courts. For I once interviewed the Manchu Emperor of China when he simply ruled an enclave called the Forbidden City in the heart of old Peking.

That's the reason I am writing this piece: When you ask an audience of the Kaiser, be prepared to give something without tying it to any tag about an interview.

EXAMPLE OF THRIFT

The youngest tradesman and ratepayer in England is 15-year-old Thomas Pow, who bought a grocery store last fall "out of his savings" and is running it successfully without help. This is another example of the value of "looking after the pennies" and cultivating the thrift habit. Probably some of the Ontario school children now depositing in the Penny Banks may be duplicating the feat of this English boy in the near future.—Chatham News.

SEA MONSTERS

(Brantford Expositor)

The whale-like "what-is-it" killed at Peggy's Cove, near Halifax, had even the experts puzzled. There are stranger things in the sea than out of it, so why should superior people be sneeringly skeptical of the Pacific coast's Caddy, Lake Okanagan's Couchiching's Thingummyjig?

MEMORIES

"Blimy! As if I wasn't 'omesick enough without that!"
—Humorist.

• Fearless Example of Straight Talk

New York Post chides United States for supplying the aggressive and dictator nations with war materials.

BOTH Finland and China are backed against the wall. Disorder and aggression now rule the world from Tokyo to the Rhine. The cancer that eats at world civilization is almost as big as the patient. There are few healthy spots left. If there is to be a solution, it must be a big solution. It is too late for small solutions.

In this setting the Senate bill grants Export-Import Bank loans of $20,000,000 apiece to Finland and China is little more than a pious wish, a gesture, a moral sop. It might almost be called conscience money. We are giving a few crumbs to peace and decency before pulling the blankets up about our ears and sinking into deep isolated sleep and sweet democratic dreams.

We refuse to entangle our fortunes with those of the belligerents because we fear to involve ourselves in war.

It is a pity this same delicacy does not lead us to cut off our relations with the aggressors, with whom, in another way, we are also entangling our fortunes. Almost every ship that leaves our west coast bears copper and scrap iron and steel and oil and machinery for the use of the aggressors who have created the problem which afflicts and affrights us.

The truth is that we are arming the countries which inflict those wounds we seek to bind up by small loans. The greatest democracy in the world is bogged down in a morass of contradictions. It sells brass knuckles to the thug and lodoform to his victim. It will not defend the victim for fear of war and it will not stop arming the aggressor.

An embargo on war materials to Japan would leave the Japanese military machine helpless. It depends almost exclusively on American goods. It buys $30,000,000 of crude petroleum from us each year; during peace it bought $14,000,000 of this commodity. It buys $5,000,000 of pig iron; during peace it bought $45,000 worth per year. It buys $22,000,000 of copper; during peace it purchases less than $8,000,000. It buys almost $24,000,000 of machinery; during peace it bought less than $4,000,000 per year. These increases are for war use.

Not all the bandages in America, nor all the ambulances, nor all the medicines can wipe out the moral stain of these increased sales. The goods are clearly the raw materials of conquest, the makings of murder on the Asiatic mainland.

As for Russia, she had almost cut off her purchases from us until the fall of last year, when war came. In four months she bought $56,000,000 of goods, of the year's total of $70,000,000. She is buying heavily of copper and gasoline and machine tools. Most of these are war goods by their very nature; almost all are war goods during war. A metal-working lathe is more deadly than a thousand 12-inch shells. It makes the motors that run the tanks that crush freedom and democracy.

The small loans in the Senate bill may drag us toward war; they cannot save Finland or China.

Instead of making this new partnership, let us break the old one that binds us to the brigands. That may save China; the mere word of forthcoming embargo might give the Russian generals pause in their headquarters on the Karelian isthmus.

This is the contribution history calls upon us to make. It does not involve the risk of war. By dragging the brakes on war, and tending to reduce the area and severity of war, embargo serves the cause of peace everywhere, and thus the cause of peace for our country.

It is close to the zero hour for what is left of order in the world. There is no longer the slightest doubt as to what we ought to do.

• This Man Can't Go To Church

HERE is the story of a man who cannot go to church because the congregation and officials do not want him. It happened in Chatham. Thomas James Baxter, described as an Australian of 56 years was in court because he had created a disturbance at the service of the Latter Day Saints church. As a result, he was demanded to jail for sentence, the magistrate intimating that arrangements would be made for the defendant to be examined by a psychiatrist.

"I don't fear what man can do," exclaimed the man as he stroked his flowing black beard.

In the cells later he told Chief Bagnall that perhaps he should have accepted the offer of the magistrate to have his freedom, stating that perhaps he could do more good for people by being at liberty than by languishing in jail.

Baxter was arrested Sunday morning when officials of the church declined to allow him to enter, because of the interruptions and his conduct generally at previous services. He claims that wrong doctrines are being taught, and asserts that one which is not preached is that man shall not "kill to eat flesh." In court crown witnesses testified that on one occasion he threw himself on the floor of the church and had to be carried out because some of his questions were not answered.

Frequently during the procedure this morning, Baxter quoted from the Scriptures as he told the court that his mission on earth is "brotherly love." He denounced those in the church who are opposed to his views. From his behavior, and his own statements in the court room, Magistrate Arnold said it was easy to understand how he had been a disturbing influence in the congregation of the North Chatham church.

"Why is the church so opposed to you? What have you done?" The magistrate asked the defendant during his testimony.

"Nothing," was the reply. "What did they do to Christ? He taught the work of His Father, and I teach the same. They can't say I have done one thing or preached anything that does not comply with the three books of the church."

"There are certain doctrines you believe to be true and which the pastor does not accept?" Crown Attorney A. D. Bell, K.C., asked.

"There are certain doctrines I know are true, and which he will not accept," he said. He added that he believed it his duty to go into the church and correct misbeliefs.

"You have deliberately gone into the church to try to correct?" Mr. Bell asked.

"No," replied the defendant "God has sent me to teach them I disagree with what they are teaching, and have tried to get them to follow Christ."

"As the light is given to you?" Mr. Bell suggested.

"No, as it is given in the Scriptures," Baxter said.

"As you interpret them," Mr. Bell insisted, but Baxter retored "God sent Christ to do the will of His Father, he sent me also."

HOG RAISING

THE PRICE of all hogs have been advanced in Britain to the producer and runs from 22 cents per lb. for hogs up to nine score pounds to 19 cents for hogs over twelve score pounds. Sows are worth 18 cents and boars ten cents per pound, dead weight. But then over there they are up against the imported feeding stuff. Imported feed barley was $30, now it is $40, and our Canadian oats (No. 1) which were worth around Christmas $38 per ton are now quoted at $55 per ton.

But how about this for a ration for fattening: damaged corn 60 per cent, 10 per cent dried dates, 10 per cent stale buns and chocolate cakes, 10 per cent custard powder, and 10 per cent "pick up" that is foraging for grass and so forth. The farmer who tried this ration had also tried his pigs on tomatoes, but they jibbed at that.

Well, one never knows what he gets in his rashers of bacon at breakfast time! And talking of pigs, here is an instance that will bear recording as it is quite unusual. A farmer had one sow. She was served by two boars in one month. When she farrowed she had 19 pigs but all died for lack of milk. Within a month she farrowed a second litter of 13 of which nine were reared. — Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

OVERGOVERNED

IT IS LIKELY that the tremendous financial burden, which the war will lay on Canada's shoulders, will inspire renewal of the agitation to dispense with many of the superfluous governing bodies with which this country is afflicted.

At the annual meeting of the Trusts and Guarantee Company at Toronto the other day, the president, C. S. Hamilton, stressed the necessity to avoid every kind of waste. He pointed out that Britain, with a population of fifty million, found it practical and efficient to get along with one parliament, while Canada, with population of eleven million, is supporting ten, which must embody many unnecessary and costly duplications.—Galt Reporter.

TASK OF GREAT SIZE

FEEDING even one overseas division, such as Canada already has abroad, is a task of formidable size. The daily issue of food as a matter of fact, includes eight tons each of beef, bread and potatoes, a ton of jam, another ton of butter and 28 pounds of pepper. Incidentally some forty orders for jams and marmalades have been placed by the War Supply Board since November 1st last to keep Canada's enlisted men supplied with these niceties. The combined orders represent a total of $14,500 and include strawberry, raspberry and plum jams and orange marmalade.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of all? And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these.

THOSE PORK IMPORTS

DOMESTIC meat packers can take no little satisfaction in the fact that their deputation which waited upon the Ottawa authorities in an effort to secure revision of the "drawback" Order-in-Council, was successful in achieving its objective.

As has been shown, the ninety-nine per cent "drawback" allowed to export packers on pork products they brought in from the United States worked to the disadvantage of the small or non-export houses. Thus, while the latter had to pay the full one-and-a-quarter cents per pound duty, the export packers were allowed a ninety-nine per cent rebate on that impost. The result was to demoralize the domestic business, while at the same time permitting something approaching a flooding of the home market by United States meat, to the disadvantage of the Canadian breeders.

This was evidently not the intention of the Government in passing the Order-in-Council, which, accordingly, is to be withdrawn.—Brantford Expositor.

COMPULSORY TRAINING

VITAL CHANGES in Australia's military organization will take place following the decision of the federal government to reintroduce a complete scheme of compulsory military training. As soon as possible after the end of the financial year, private soldiers at present serving in the militia will be transferred to the reserve and the army will be maintained on a compulsory service basis. Apart from light horse regiments which will continue to enlist volunteers, only officers and non-commissioned officers of other units will have the opportunity of remaining in active service.—Brandon Sun.

A Bit of Nonsense

Cheer-Up

The missus has just got a new hat, and it's so funny I couldn't really describe it to you.

I said to her: "Every time I look at that hat I have to laugh!"

"That's good," she said. "I'll leave it where you can see it when the bill arrives."

Willing to Please

One of the B.E.F. blokes home on leave told me this one.

A pal of his got wounded and went to hospital. He thought he'd write a letter to his missus, but he couldn't do it himself. He got one of the nurses to do the writing for him.

After telling her all the news he was allowed to, he said: "And just add a line to say the nurses in this hospital all look like horses."

"Oh," the nurse said, "that isn't very complimentary to us, is it?"

"I know," the chap said. "It's not right, but it'll please the missus."

Meanest Man

Did I tell you about the meanest man in the world?

He gave his little boy a penny not to eat any supper.

Then he pinched the dough back while the kid was asleep.

Then he wouldn't let him have any breakfast because he lost the penny.

Where Am I?

The young Air Force officer had just crashed into a telegraph pole, and wire, pole, and everything was draped round him.

As helpers rushed to his aid and began to untangle him from the wreckage, he reached out his hands feebly, fingered the wires, and whispered:

"Thank Heaven, I've lived a clean life—they've given me a harp."

Campbellford Sunday School Is Given Banquet

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 29 — (ENS).—A banquet and program in the Sunday school parlors of St. John's United Church took the place of the annual sleigh ride this year and judging from the enthusiastic greeting which more than two hundred pupils gave the affair, it was a marked success.

Gathering at the supper hour the pupils were seated at long banquet tables gaily decorated with colored animal pictures and snow men moulded from cotton batting. Organist and choirmaster Harold R. Kitney presided at the piano.

Sunday School Superintendent Harold Twigg was the very capable chairman and during his opening remarks explained the origin and idea behind the custom of toasts.

First toast was to the King, and this was made by Billy Mowatt and responded to as the entire gathering joined in singing the National Anthem. Following this, came the toast to Canada, proposed by Marjorie Mills and responded to by singing "O Canada." Harvey Donald responded to the toast to the Church, proposed by Darrell Duncalfe, and Miss Elinore Armour proposed the toast to the teachers, to which Mrs. R. Fox responded. Rev. G. N. Maxwell also spoke briefly, emphasizing the important part the Sunday school was playing by bringing the young people together for worship.

The program, which had been arranged by Misses Gladys Stephen, Dorothy Henson, Mrs. Frank McKelvie, and Mr. Harold Kitney, began with a vocal solo by Carol Weston; a recitation by Jack Morgan; the public school Rhythm Band directed by Miss Stephen; a chorus by pupils from Mrs. Pierce's class; Scotch songs by Mrs. Frank McKelvie's class of boys who sang "Home On The Range"; Mrs. Howard Clarke's class gave a fine offering of three-part singing, and at the conclusion the entire group joined in singing the well-known hymn, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

Speaking on behalf of the pupils Miss June Burgis sexpressed appreciation to those in charge for what she termed "one of the most enjoyable Sunday school parties in recent years." On behalf of the Girl Guides who had attended in a group under the leadership of Miss Grace Payne, Patricia Ironside voiced their thanks for the splendid evening and also for the invitation to be present.

Particular thanks was also tendered Mrs. W. F. Scott and her committee which arranged the banquet and also to the accompanists, Don Bennett and Arnold Bates and those who had arranged the program.

The list contained forty-two names and raised to 705 the Air Force losses since the war's start.

Seven were listed killed in action, four missing believed killed in action, six missing, twelve killed on active service, thirteen died on active service.

OBITUARY

LEVI JAMES JEWELL

An esteemed resident of Percy Township, Levi Jewell, passed peacefully away at his home on February 17, in his 74th year.

The late Mr. Jewell had enjoyed good health for a man of his age, until about six weeks ago, he had the misfortune to fall and fracture his hip. From then until his decease, his health gradually declined.

He was born in Haldimand township, the second eldest of a family of eight, of the late John and Harriet Jewell. Forty-six years ago he was united in marriage to Araminta Bailey of Markham, who survives him. Shortly after their marriage they moved to their present farm home near Dartford. He was one of the pioneers of the district. In his passing, the community has lost a faithful friend and a good neighbor. He was a quiet man, a lover of peace and his whole ambition was centered around his home and family. He had a wide circle of friends to mourn his passing. A large number of them called at the home to offer sympathy to the sorrowing family in their loss of a husband and father.

Besides his widow, he is survived by one son, Gordon at home, and four daughters: Reta, Mrs. Milford Tucker of Plainville; Lila, Mrs. L. Dowler of Dartford; Lillian, Mrs. E. Sandercock of Fenella; Olive, Mrs. Walton Lean of Fenella, and eight grandchildren. Also three brothers: Norman ad Charles Jewell of Fenella, and Thomas of Detroit, Mich.; two sisters, Mrs. David Stevens of Baltimore, and Mrs. George Sherwin of Fenella.

Funeral service was held at the home on February 19, conducted by Rev. Dr. J. R. R. Cooper. The remains were placed in Warkworth vault. The pall-bearers were Warren and Stuart Atkinson, Archie McCracken, James Mackie, Nelson Hardy and George Broadworth. Four Atkinson boys: John, Trevor, Ambrose and Sydney, were flower bearers.

JOSEPH JONES

BETHANY, Feb. 29—(ENS). — The funeral of the late Joseph Jones was held on Sunday from the United Church, of which he had been a life-long and devout member; his pastor, Rev. Clarence Ferguson, officiating. A short private service was held at the family residence prior to the cortege leaving for the church service.

The late Mr. Jones was in his 85th year and for some time had been quite enfeebled, but his sudden passing came as a severe shock to his sorrowing wife, whose maiden name was Eleanor Fallis.

Mr. Jones was of a very quiet disposition and a kindly neighbor. Many friends from long distances came to pay a last tribute of respect at his interment at the Fallis Cemetery, south of Bethany. Rev. Ferguson based his address on the words of St. Paul, 4th Timothy, 6 and 7: "I have fought a good fight. I have kept the faith," a fitting tribute.

Mr. Jones was the third son of a family of seven: five sons and two daughters, born to the late William Jones and his wife, Mary Best of Cavan, 13th Concession.

Thirty-two years ago he retired with his wife to his late home in Bethany, on Queen street, and was assistant to the late Charles Reynolds, undertaker, for many years.

Pall-bearers were Messrs. Isaac Fallis, Bruce Ryley, Fred Thompson, Milton Weatherall, Walter Rowland, and J. Jackson.

The floral tributes were carried by Arthur Stinson, George Fallis, Harold Bannon and Nelles Bradburn.

Among friends from a distance who attended the funeral on Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Gaynor; Mr. and Mrs. Melville Lathangue, Pontypool; George Fallis, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Dickinson, Toronto; Dorothy Fallis, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bannon; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Shield; Mr. and Mrs. Post of Omemee; Nelles Bradburn, and Mrs. L. Fallis, Lindsay; Melville Jones, Omemee; Joe Boyd; Mr. and Mrs. Bland, Mount Pleasant; Mr. and Mrs. Bradburn and Art Stinson, Warkworth; Mr. and Mrs. Calvert; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd McKay, Reaboro; Mr. and Mrs. Vestal Staples and Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Staples, Fleetwood.

Amateur Night Is Planned

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 29 — (ENS).—An address titled "The Church in Indian," by Charles Jeffs featured the weekly meeting of St. John's Y.P.U. on Monday of this week. Miss Gladys Stephen, the missionary convener, had charge of the program and she was assisted during the devotional period by Bill Mowatt and Madeline Lisle. During the general business discussion it was announced that the committee placed in charge of the matter had arranged to hold a "St. Patrick's Amateur Night," on March 18. Other items on the program included a piano solo by Constance Black; reading, Mrs. Don. Holmes; instrumental, Bill Cubitt and Ronald Lowe; reading, "Young Enough To Know Better," Mrs. Elva McConachie; chorus, June Burgiss, Marjorie Mills, Marion Rowe, Dorothy Betty, Constance McKelvie, and Eleanor Armour.

Convicted

MONTREAL, Feb. 29 — (CP). — Gordon Campbell Smythe, 44, was convicted today by a King's bench court jury of the murder of his 70-year-old landlord and was sentenced by Chief Justice R. A. E. Greenshields to be hanged Friday, May 31. The jury, which retired at the end of the afternoon hearing yesterday, brought in the verdict at the start of today's session.

"Goosestepping To Defeat"

Veteran Conservative Editor Laments Party's Blunders

"It must be clear to any thinking man that if we ever had a chance in this election it would have been as a vigorous, united, fighting party, and not as one suddenly jumbled together, under the banner of Nationalism."

W. R. GIVENS

Former publisher of The Kingston Standard, in Globe and Mail, February 26, 1940

Experienced and seasoned judgment speaks in the words just addressed to his party by one of Canada's greatest Conservative journalists.

Why is Mr. Givens, who for so many years helped foresightedly to mould party traditions, thus moved to words of scorn? The answer is simple: The great traditions of Conservatism have been "scuttled"—are being "scuttled," to make way for Opportunism.

"If we cannot be fair," he writes, "let us at least not be silly."

Small wonder that he is impressed not at all with the promoters of a New Age of Fable—in which "best minds," so far invisible to earth-beings, are to be fashioned into a National Brain Trust.

The eminent editor's words are terse:

"Let Dr. Manion, then, produce his men, and they their policies, their plans and their wares, and thus give the people of Canada full and fair opportunity to judge of the respective merits of this presently nebulous party and the Liberal party now in power.

The overshadowing entry before us at the moment is to do our bit as citizens of Empire to help win the war—for win it we must. Can we do that better by putting in power a new party whose elements and policies are as yet unknown?

That was his (Hon. Dr. Manion's) mandate and that only—to lead the Conservative party. He has no mandate to do other—no mandate to hybridize the party or change its hue from a conservative to a chameleonic color or its texture from solid Conservative to a sort of crazy-quilt patchwork....Many of the party followers are weekly goose-stepping into line, no matter what their personal feelings — "Goose-stepping to another defeat.

To say that the King Government has made a shocking mess of its conduct of the war will not get us anywhere because any sane man who has studied conditions and followed the doings of the Government, knows that is not so. The British Government does not think so—and our contingents already overseas, and their splendid condition, reinforce that view! Fully as much to the point is the declaration of the last Conservative Minister of National Defence, Hon. Dr. Sutherland, who said: "I think the Government has been doing everything that could possibly be done—I am convinced of that." Here is an authoritative voice, and a Conservative one at that — that cannot be lightly laughed aside."

Voters in Peterborough West will vote for the candidate of "the government that has being doing everything that possibly could be done." They will vote for a Record rather than a Promise. They will vote for—

Country Doctor Gives Talk To Rotarians

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 29 (ENS) —Titling his address "The Reminiscences of a Horse and Buggy Doctor," Rotarian Bruce Longmore, M.D., gave one of the most interesting talks heard at the club in some time.

Choosing a number of anecdotes from the careers of several famous physicians and combining them with a few of his own early experiences the speaker traced the advance of medicine in this country from the time when a doctor got all of his training from spending a year or two with a colleague and rode to his patients on horse back, to the present time when the M.D. jumps in his high powered car, rushes to his patient's bedside and after making a hurried diagnosis orders him sent to the nearest hospital by ambulance if his condition is in any way serious. "One thing that has always amazed me," said Dr. Longmore comparing the physician of today with those of a half century ago, "is that those chaps who studied so many things more did so many things less."

"In those days it would have been fatal to have moved a patient over those roads to a hospital and we just had to make the best of it, by operating on a kitchen table, calling on all the skill and technique we possessed." Whiskey, castor oil, turpentine and epsom salts were the four stock remedies recommended by doctors before the turn of the century and many operations were performed with whiskey the only anesthetic.

Primitive Instruments

"He recalled how he had stood in a farmyard as a boy watching a doctor amputate the arm of a man, who had caught it in a threshing machine. The instruments used were a hand saw, a butcher knife and a spool of silk thread, and the operation, performed while a neighbor held the patient, took exactly seven minutes. At that time they didn't know there was such a thing as appendicitis. It was simply known as inflamation of the bowels, and there was nothing they could do but give him a dose of castor oil which usually hastened the conquest of death. "One thing the old horse and buggy doctor realized was that he was expected to do something, and he usually did," continued the speaker. The idea of early surgery was embraced in the quotation from a doctor who later became very well known, "there's nothing to it," said he, "all you do is cut and tie." "This chap did many abdominal operations" said Dr. Longmore, "he used whiskey as an anesthetic and worked with such speed and skill that some of his patients actually recovered."

Another generally accepted procedure which the speaker recalled, was the practise of sending for the professor "whenever you ran into anything out of the ordinary."

Bewdley Baptists Hear Four Students

BEWDLEY, Feb. 29—(ENS)—On Sunday afternoon those who attended the Baptist Church had a real treat. Four young men from McMaster University, who were at the Port Hope Baptist Church for the day conducting evangelistic services, officiated at the Bewdley Church with vocal quartettes, instrumental trios, solos, and a fine sermon.

On Thursday evening the congregation of St. Anne's Anglican Church met in a business meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Kennedy. Business of the church was discussed and reports presented. The officials were re-elected, some of whom are: Treasurer, Elmer Sidey; W.A. president, Mrs. Harry Goss; secretary, Mrs. W. Kennedy. Clare Morton was chosen to represent the Bewdley appointment at the June session in Toronto. It was decided to hold a pot luck supper during March, with the entertainment after, the date to be set at a special meeting soon.

The Sunday School is re-organizing on Sunday after being withdrawn for the winter months.

On account of the road conditions the Boy Scouts have not been able to hold regular meetings during the winter, as their leader, Rev. K. D. Whatmough, residing in Gore's Landing, had difficulty in travelling to Bewdley since the lake has been heavy a lot of the time.

Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Richard spent Thursday in Port Hope.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Manley attended the insurance agents' convention and banquet at Toronto on Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. Harold McAllister visited her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Ryan in Toronto for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. P. Smith, Peterborough, visited the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Beyrs, parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Byers, on Sunday.

Bonarlaw

Mrs. Douglas Brown returned from Renfrew on Monday of this week where she has been visiting her sister, who was seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Caldwell are home again after a brief visit to Trenton.

Messrs. W. J. Barlow and Thomas H. Prest returned from Toronto on Friday last after attending the Good Roads Association convention in that city. The following members of the Rawdon Council also attended, namely, Reeve G. B. Bedford and Councillors J. Morrison and Wilfred Spencer, also Past County Wardens G. E. Thompson and George A. Bailey.

Mr. Archie Haslett died at his home here at an early hour Tuesday morning following an illness of ten days. He leaves to mourn his loss his widow and two sons, Harry of Bonarlaw, and Gerald of Toronto.

An item which appeared recently in the Picton Gazette should be of interest to residents of this vicinity as Mr. Montgomery resided at Springbrook for a number of years. We quote: "R.Q.M.S. Reg. Montgomery, Trenton, with the H. and P.E. Regiment at Aldershot, had the honor of shaking hands with the King when he reviewed the division. His Majesty was attracted by his row of ribbons, resulting in a handshake and conversation."

Constable Suspended

HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 29—(CP). —Chief Constable Thomas A. Brown announced today that Constable William Thoburn, who has been charged with assault by Dr. J. G. Ferguson of Toronto, has been suspended.

The Toronto doctor complained early last Saturday he had been assaulted by a man in his room at a hotel here.

Constable Thoburn is a former Olympic oarsman and a well-known rowing coach.

Folding Office For Trenches Made By Clerk

OTTAWA, Feb. 29 — (CP). — Corporal Lionel Lefebvre, of the corps of military staff clerks at Ottawa has invented a collapsible trench office built after the manner of a packing case, and along lines that may prove useful for office work in the trenches.

At the Defence Department it was said no official consideration had been given the new trench office, but the invention has been placed on display. It is a whole office, but for the filing cabinets, packed into a box, roughly, 22 inches by 32 inches by 20 inches.

The lid of the packing case, removed, becomes a notice board calculated to bring joy to any orderly-room sergeant on front line duty On it may be hung the orders of the day.

Drop legs are set in position, and the packing case assumes the height of a standard desk. The ends unhook, and, when lowered, give the desk a working space of 20 inches by 60 inches.

One side may be unhooked and removed and a pair of folding legs transform the whole into a solid bench, affording a comfortable position for any typist. The other side is left standing, and forms a backdrop for the typewriter which is fastened securely in a central position.

1,000 Leave Homes

BRUSSELS, Feb. 29—(AP).—The newspaper Le Soir said today that 1,000 residents of Verviers, Belgian industrial city, 12 miles from the German border, had abandoned their homes after government warnings.

The newspaper said the city of 46,000 had been told by the defence and health ministers that it would be impossible to remove the population after danger had materialized.

NO OFFICIAL WORD.

LONDON—(CP).—The House of Commons was told today that the Government has no "official confirmation" of recent press dispatches reporting incidents along the Russian-Turkish border.

Edmonton Regiment Shows Experts Realistic Reconnaissance Patrol

ALDERSHOT, Feb. 29. — (CP Cable)—Their faces as black as a troupe of southern minstrels but carrying "instruments" not at all resembling banjoes, trained scouts of the Edmonton Regiment today staged a workmanlike reconnaissance patrol before a distinguished gallery of military experts from the Imperial and Canadian forces.

The exercises, planed to simulate a night patrol into a defended enemy position, were personally directed by Brigadier G. R. Pearkes, officer commanding the Second Infantry Brigade. With him at the observation post were General J. W. Wilcox, inspector general of infantry, Brigadiers A. A. Smith and C. B. Price, Colonel G. R. Turner, Major G. Simmonds, and senior officers of the Canadian infantry.

The demonstration covered one phase of the work carried out nightly by the Canadians in perfecting their individual training. In other parts of the area similar manoeuvres are performed by patrols from other regiments.

As the Edmonton patrol emerged from its most forward defensive post in a well-protected copse a running account of the progress was given by an expert instructor of the Imperial Army.

Some Careful Going.

The men moved at a snail-like pace as if afraid of stepping on red hot cinders during the first stage of their advance. Then, for more than an hour and a half, they wiggled and squirmed on their stomachs across the rugged terrain, lying motionless for a minute at a time as an occasional star-shell from the enemy trenches lit up No Man's Land.

The men performed every conceivable operation a patrol might be expected to encounter on an actual raid. They crawled through hedges and over ditches, cut their way through barbed wire entanglements, detoured around trip wires, and finally accomplished their mission — identification of an enemy corpse which lay near a shell hole in front of the enemy entrenchment.

This operation concluded, a platoon of a famous British Guards regiment gave a realistic demonstration of a raid into an enemy division under the protective fire of machine guns. The attackers, in full battle kit, reached their objective with the imaginary loss of only a few men. They returned, however, with a group of prisoners who looked like the real thing, wearing German helmets and field grey tunics, trophies of the last war.

OMEMEE BLACKHAWKS WIN DISTRICT LOOP TITLE OVER LOCALS

Lock Co. Squad Is Beaten 4-3 In Overtime

Omemee Black Hawks won the district hockey championship over the local Lock Co. Eagles last night in Omemee. The final count was 4-3 in overtime as a good crowd of fans roared throughout the rough, tight tussle. Tripp's classy counter with but 40 seconds of overtime left gave the homesters the win for the group title and sends them into O.H.A. intermediate "B" playdowns. They go to Whitby on Friday.

Play was fast, quite close and rugged. Several fist fights broke out and twice free-for-alls, including players and fans, threatened. Edmunds drew two major penalties in the second period, one for a fight with Tripp and again for tangling with Parsons, both these Hawks also getting majors. Again in the third, Edmunds nearly got into a real jam after someone leaned over the boards and hit him.

Goalies Good

Both goalies sparkled in a good showing in the hot contest. Gilbert sparked the losers' attack with all the forwards looking good. Tripp, Dart and Jamieson were standouts for the O's, but the whole team clicked well. The homesters disputed an Eagles' goal in the first frame, but it was allowed.

Burke and West scored for the visitors in the initial inning to make it 2-0 for the Eagles. The Hawks got those back early in the middle heat when Jamieson scored twice, aided each time by Tripp. Gilbert again shoved the Prete pack ahead with a nice counter that frame. Ellis counted halfway through the third to sew up the struggle, and not until late in the overtime session did Tripp score to wind it up. He took a corner faceoff near the Eagles' net, stickhandled out in front and rapped the rubber home as the fans yelled.

The teams:

Eagles: Goal, King; defence, Edmunds and Watkins; centre, Gilbert; wings, Cournyea and West; alternates, Snarr, Watson, Burke, Prete and White.

Hawks: Goal, Fisher; defence, Williamson and F. Parsons; centre, Tripp; wings, Dart and Jamieson; alternates, Brohm, Ellis, Brooks, Brockley and Conneybeare.

Referee—Lou Lebarr.

BACHELORS' Defense

A famous poet has set it down in black and white and rhyme that a woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke. Bachelors are good cigars. In fact, though they cost only 10c, they are 100% Havana filler—a noble smoke! They soothe the troubles of the married and allay the longings of the single . . . and they add to the delights of both.

Grove Juniors Win

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 29.—(ENS)—Grove juniors and Trinity College juniors played an exhibition game in the rink Tuesday afternoon with the Grove winning easily 10-1. The Grove were superior in stick-handling and were better skaters. Lilley II on the Grove front line tallied five of the 10 goals. The teams:

T.C.S. — Goal, Keyes; defence, Murray, Britton; centre, Stewart; wings, Symons, Howard; subs, Perry, Higginbotham, Hope, Gibson, Dyman.

Grove—Goal, McBrien; defence, Dixon, Thompson; centre, Harris; wings, Lilley II, McLean; subs, Onorado, Perry II, Herold II, Langmuir III.

Referee B. Smith— Grove.

Cold Hits Savold Costs Mike 2nd Tilt In Week

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—(AP)—For a long time the breaks have been good for Mike Jacobs, the fabulous boxing promoter, but today Heavyweigth Lee Savold is in a hospital and Uncle Mike is confronted with the loss of his second bout in less than a week.

Savold, a rugged Des Moines, Ia., corn belter, being groomed for Champion Joe Louis, was booked for a 12-round bout with Bob Pastor tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden.

Yesterday he had a cold and didn't go to the gymnasium to work out, so the Boxing Commission sent Dr. William Walker around to the fighter's hotel. Dr. Walker sent Savold to a hospital for a rest. The doctor pronounced his illness influenza.

The bout seemed to be off, even though an official announcement awaited the arrival of Jacobs by plane from Florida, where a light heavyweight title scrap between Champion Billy Conn and Gus Lesnevich set for last night had folded up. In that case it was an abscessed gland under Conn's right armpit.

Park St. Juniors Make Playoffs

Park St. earned the right last night to enter the Church League junior playoffs with Mark Street by beating George St. 3-2 in a tight tussle. The losers had about as much play and might have won on better ice. Hodson was lost to the Baptists with a banged-up wrist. Park St. counted early with Hodson sinking the disc, but Routley soon evened it up. Herb Campbell made it 2-1 in the second. Henry tied the score in the third, but Cox came back to cop the winner. The losers ganged up then but failed to tie it. The Park St. team was well-balanced, while Routley and Henry were tops for George St. The teams:

Park St.: Goal, Ainslie; defence, Herb Campbell, H. Campbell; centre, Hodson; wings, Jobe, Cox; subs, Martin, Kidd.

George St.: Goal, Richardson; defence, Henry, Craig; centre, Routley; wings, Willshaw, Marsden; sub, Smith.

Referee—A. Padgett.

All Saints' Seniors Yank Out Victory

In a church loop senior playoff to break a second place tie last night, All Saints' scored in the third for a 1-0 win over George St., Hopkins tallying in a scramble. All Saints now meet Murray St. in finals. They had most of the play last night with Smith shining in the Uniteds' net to hold down the count. The losers' forwards were dangerous, and Dunkerley missed two close-in tries near the end. All Saints' defence, especially Hopkins, gave Lacey fine protection, and their starting line had a good margin on play. Edwards went best for George St. and Parnell stood out defensively. The teams:

Al Saints: Goal, Lacey; defence, Hopkins, Callons; centre, Platt; wings, McDougall, Langton; subs, Livingstone, Deering, Reid, Abraham.

George St.: Goal, Smith; defence, Parnall, King; centre, Edwards; wings, Wildman, Rennie; subs, Dunkerley, Roberts, Hardie.

Goodyears Blank Sailors 9-0; Dominions Win

TORONTO, Feb. 29.—(CP)—Form took a somersault in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" series playoffs last night. Hamilton Dominions, down two games to St. Catharines, turned on their semi-final opponents with a vengeance to emerge 7-2 victors. Meanwhile Toronto Goodyears were blasting Port Colborne 9-0 in the other semi-final.

Playing at home the Saints started the game as though capable of ousting Hamilton from the playoffs in three straight games in the best-of-five series. Reynolds lashed home the first point at the halfway mark of the first period but from then on Hamilton outplayed, out-bumped and out-scored their rivals.

McLeod zipped home the equalizer in the last minute of the opening frame and in the second two goals by Tonn and one by Barlow gave the winners a substantial lead. Connick added two more to the Hamilton total and Barlow one in the third session before Catlin netted the final goal for the Saints.

Robertson Out

Dominions, who meet the Saints at home in the fourth contest Friday night, lost Stan Robertson in the second period when the flashy winger crashed into the boards and fractured an ankle.

Toronto, defending champions and leaders of the group at the close of the regular schedule, had little trouble with the Ports from a puck manipulating standpoint. A free-for-all involving 27 players broke out in the dying minutes, however, and brought the fans from their seats for the first time in the game.

Toronto won the first game of the best-of-five series but lost the second. The fourth will be played at Port Colborne Friday night.

Inglis, Laurent, O'Flaherty and Turney led the Toronto scoring parade in the first period. O'Flaherty and Turney added a brace in the second while in the third Imlach scored twice and Cooper once.

Draper of Goodyears and Allan of the Sailors drew major penalties for precipitating the free-for-all.

PRO PUCK PERSONALITIES

ART JACKSON
Boston Bruins

(By Central Press Canadian)

When Art Jackson made his pro hockey debut with Toronto Maple Leafs five years ago he was simply "the Busher's young brother," the reference, of course, being to Harvey Jackson, great left wing on the Toronto "Kid line," at that time potting goals regularly. Now both Harvey and his fellow linesman, Chuck Conacher are with Americans, while their younger brothers —Art Jackson and Roy Coancher—both perform for the Bruins. The younger Jackson joined the Leafs from St. Michael's college juniors of Toronto (his native city), who had captured the Memorial Cup in 1934. Most of his first pro season was spent at Syracuse, the following one with the Leafs and the next shuffling between both. Art Ross entered the picture at this point and purchased him for Boston. He played the 1937-38 season with the Bruins and was loaned to Americans for last season, to jam quite a bit of juggling into a few hockey seasons.

He's back with the Bruins this winter, however, currently making the plays for Herbie Cain and Eddie Wiseman on the team's third line.

Last season with the Amerks was his best as he posted 12 goals and one more assist for 25 points Career total until start of this season: 29 goals, 34 assists for 63 points, and 59 minutes served in penalties Twenty-four years old last December.

Rogow Wins Swim In Junior Event

The Y.M.C.A. Junior Swimming Club held their fifth in a series of handicap swims at the George St. Natatorium last night when Ralph Rogow romped home with a nice lead to win the 60 yard medley race. Rogow, who is the present club champion gathered in his first handicap win in five starts.

The medley race which consists of one length of the pool swimming breast stroke, one, backstroke and one free style is one of the most difficult of races. Second place in the event was closely contested with Don Pinch touching just ahead of Ray Routly after coming from behind twice.

In the Flutterboard relay event which followed, the team of Len Smith, Ralph Rogow, Don Pinch and Andy Brown won an easy victory over the team of Jim Brown, Routly, Marshall, and Wallace.

This Saturday Gord Minty, the "Y" Swim Coach, is taking the Junior Swimming team to Toronto to take part in the city of Toronto championships to be held at Central Y.M.C.A. Whether the lads come home with some laurels or not, they will be giving a good account of themselves.

Complete results of the handicap race were as follows:

Second heat—1, Pinch; 2, J. Brown; 3, Wallace and Marshall, tie.

First semi-final—1, Rogow; 2, Pinch; 3, J. Brown.

Final—1, Ralph Rogow; 2, Donald Pinch; 3, Ray Routly.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEL. PERDUE

About a year ago now, the Petes' puckists—rated as O.H.A. senior "B" calibre—tackled Waterloo Tigers twice in a provincial round-robin playoff series. Two other teams were in the series, too. Well, the local squad trimmed the Tigers here but were nosed out by them in the German-Canadian centre. And the Tigers went on into the finals against the Falls, losing out to the Big Roar outfit. Niagara Falls and Chatham Maroons were the other two entries in the serial. This year, the Petes—a little stronger than last year, but rated as of intermediate "A" calibre—are again in a provincial round-robin playoff. With four clubs in it once more. They are the Petes, Owen Sound Trappers, Port Colborne Incos and the Kitchener Greenshirts.

* * * * * *

Well, Port Colborne and Owen Sound are intermediate "A" teams, and we believe the locals can nose 'em both out. But the Greenshirts—like the Buckland gang — are really of senior "B" strength. In fact this Kitchener crew is the Waterloo crowd of last winter. Their lineup includes Bindernagel, Lederman, Simon, Bauer, Grau, Vrooman, Smith, Lang, Krueger, Hause and Clair—nearly all good Dutch monickers which adorned the Waterloo lineup a year back. These Greenshirts play the Petes here this Friday in what should be the locals' toughest test of the year. At 8.30 in the Rue Brock, and pasteboards are on sale now.

Up Ashcan Alley?

Pretty cocky after trouncing Camp Borden Fliers 10-3 last week, the Greenshirts are wheeling up this way promising to do to the Petes—we gather—about what we do to a light opera when in singing mood! The Kitchener clique threatens to detour the speedy Petes up Ashcan Alley, and go on and grab off an O.H.A. championship. Which is exactly the idea of some guys named Harding, Crowe, Gardner, Ellis, Joplings, Burton, Tompkins, Heal, Kingdon, Starr, Coughlin and Blewett. And of Coach Buckland, Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

Provided the homsters are in top form, and flying up and down those ice lanes as in their series with the R.C.A.F.-ers, the boys in the Erin-hued uniforms are going to have quite a tussle on their hands here tomorrow after dusk. It ought to be a rip-snorter of a struggle, faster and better than the 4-1 Petes' win o'er Port Colborne here Tuesday. And no doubt a packed arena will curl the shingles with yells and roars at the hot action. Belleville and Lindsay sent fans here for the last fray, besides all the district villages, and we imagine the Friday night crowd will top by far any previous puck crowd of the season in Peter's borough.

Industrial Loop Tilts

Industrial Hockey League winds up its interesting schedule tonight at the Brock with three games. Watercrafts and Packers—now tied in fourth place—tangle at 7.30; Westclox and Marines—in a virtual second-place tie—mix it at 8.30; and Brintons and Raybestos (both down in the standing) finish it up at 9.30 o'clock. Those first two should be humdingers, and the last tilt might supply fireworks, too. These shop squads are playing lively and heated hockey, all being in the w.k. pink now and battling their heads off for playoff berths. And they're drawing more and more fans—the price of admish being ridiculously low. Yep, should be a goodish gang of rooters up there tonight seeing the lively action.

* * * * * *

Here's the standing: Quakers five wins in six starts, Westclox four in five, Marines three wins and a tie in five, Packers and Watercrafts tied with four points apiece, Brintons no wins but two draws in five games, and Raybestos in the cellar. The playoff setup, which starts next week, calls for the top two teams to stage a semi-final game, and the third and fourth clubs to have a similar sudden-death game. The two finalists then play two-in-three for the loop title. Regarding the two protests, the committee last night decided that Mike O'Leary—having seen O.H.A. action with Lakefield—is not eligible with Westclox this season. If the protested Quakers-Westclox game has any bearing on the final standing, it will be replayed. As for Packers' protest regarding a period being shortened, it was left over to see if action need be taken at a later date. Probably not. Committee included: D. Hunt, L. Deadey, H. Lundy, R. Feeley and L. Maguire.

Teams Fading Out

Two more Church Puck Loop teams were rubbed out last night as three games were played. Park St. won and now meet Mark St. tonight at 7.30 in the first of the junior finals. Ron Hodson, centre star for Park St., broke his wrist in a fall—the worst accident of the season. All Saints Seniors copped a nod and for the fourth year will meet Murray Street in playoffs, first of the two-in-three series commencing Monday. The very heated bantam finals were tied up between Trinity and All Saints, and they settle it at six tonight with Norm Jobe refereeing. Trinity has hunted a title 12 years and is optimistic, while the United's coach figures this day, his wedding anniversary—gosh, he's only gotta buy one present every four years!—ought to bring him luck. The protested junior joust is settled now, as having no bearing on the race.

Lock Co. Eagles bowed out of the district puck picture last night in Omemee, the Hawks winning out 4-3 in overtime. Which was no disgrace at all. A nifty game, plenty hot, with several fist fights and a free-for-all nearly exploding all over the O's big arena. Tripp snaked in a smart counter late in the overtime heat for the deciding point, giving the Black Hawks (minus Tom Parsons lately, out with a sore shoulder) the third win in four starts of the playoffs. The Hawks now enter O.H.A. intermediate "B" playdowns, journeying to Whitby this Friday, and having Whitby back in Omemee—it's goals to count—on Monday.

Zephyrs, C.G.E. Cop Games In Cage League

Zephyrs cinched first place in the City Basketball League at the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday night when they nosed out the Quakers 23 to 22 in a closely-fought game that was in double until the final whistle; in fact until after the whistle because a postgame check-up of the score sheet was in order before the Zephyr victory was definitely established.

The game completed the league leaders' schedule, leaving them on top of the heap. Unless there is an upset in the final double-header next week, the Bees will finish second and Quakers third. In any case they will have to meet in a series to decide which will meet the Zephyrs for the League title.

C.G.E. defeated Dominions in the second game of the night 34-32 and the losers have a firm grip on the cellar slot.

Joe Was Out.

Although minus their ace scorer Joe Jakafby, the Quakers gave the green-sweatered Zephyrs a torrid argument. The checking was close and neither team was able to open out much of a lead at any stage.

Zephyrs had a shade the better of the argument in a low-scoring first half and had a margin of 9 to 6 at the rest period, but the porridge crew had plenty of fight when they came back after the recess and outscored the winners 16 to 14 in the second half. Bob Dyer with eight points and Joe Stewart and Don Sedgewick with six each sparked the Zephyr attack, with Doug. McPherson and Walter Ward with eight and seven points respectively, were the siege guns for the losers. The Zeps tossed in three fouls out of eight attempts and the Quakers were successful four times out of nine. The line-ups:

Zephyrs (23)—Centre Stewart (6), forwards, Dyer (8), Dougherty (2), guards, Sedgewick (6), West (2), subs, Davern, McIntyre.

Quakers (22)—Centre Patterson (2), forwards, McPherson (8), Ward (7), guards, Gillespie (3), Thomas (2), sub, Gonsolus.

Referee—C. M. Krug.

The second game was another close battle and like the first fixture was decided by the pressure put on by the winners in the first half. C.G.E. outscored Dominions 19 to 13 in the opening session but the losers staged a rally in the second half that saw them cut down the C.G.E. lead by four points and left them only a field basket in arrears when it was all over. C.GE played without subs while the losers only had one extra man in uniform

For the winners Jack Gemmell looped in five baskets from the field and tossed in a foul for good measure and led the attack with eleven points, and Herb Galley was close behind with a useful ten. Don Weese was the big scorer for Dominions. He was held to two successful throws in the first half but finished strong, tossing in five baskets and two fouls in the final period for a game total of 14 points. Steve Csumrick on the other hand registered four baskets in the first half and then was held off the score sheet entirely in the second. Harry Marsh played an effective defensive game and in addition contributed six points to his team's total. Eighteen fouls were called against the C.G.E., but Dominions cashed in on only six of them, while the Electricians registered two out of seven. Line-up:

Dominions (32)—Centre, Hammell, forwards, Weese (14), Csumrick (8), guards, Marsh (6), Grose (4), sub, Wolstenholme.

Referee—C. M. Krug.

Remember When—

President A. E. Gilroy of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, landing at Halifax on his way home from the Winter Olympics in Germany four years ago today, denied having protested the inclusion of Jimmy Foster and Alex Archer, Winnipeg hockey players, in the English hockey team. The C.A.H.A. had suspended Foster and Allen, and Gilroy charged the sudden change in the rulings governing nationality of Olympic competitors was the "worst manipulation in sport history."

CURLING

By HERB MARTIN

Out of respect for the late Al. Sharpe, a member of J. T. Braund's rink who won the Neill Trophy last evening, we will forego any running story of the final game. The news of Al. Sharpe's sudden death not only shocked the citizens of the city, but completely dumfounded the members of the Curling Club. Al was down here at the presentation of prizes late last evening and it is hard to conceive that he has now passed on within those few short hours.

He had played all through the bonspiel with J. T. Braund, with the exception of the last two games, and was bidding fair to become a curler of real distinction. He was one of our youngest curlers and one of the most promising. It was his first year at the game and he had already shown that he would be a valuable member.

Of a quiet disposition, he was always ready to do his share and willing to help at all times. The sympathy of the entire club is extended to the members of the bereaved family.

Baroni Claims Specify Horse To Beat

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 29 (AP)—Turf history may repeat itself in the sixth running of the $100,000 added Santa Anita handicap Saturday, and the outcome should provide another smashing climax to the world's richest horse race.

Looking over the probable starters, there are the two who last year burned up the track, and themselves, in setting a sizzling pace—Whichcee and Specify. The battle they put on stands out as a vivid part of that race.

Then there is Kayak II, the C. S. Howard Argentine who came up from behind, caught and passed the tiring pace setters, and went on to win. Ranked with him is his stablemate, Seabiscuit.

A. A Baroni, Specify's owner and the man who saddled Top Row for his triumph in the 1936 Santa Anita, is high on his six-year-old's chances.

"Specify," said the Nevada horseman, "is definitely the horse to beat."

Symaethis Backed For Grand National

LONDON, Feb. 29—(CP Cable)—In the first official callover of the season, Arthur Sainsbury's Symaethis was established favorite today for the Grand National Steeplechase to be run at Aintree April 5. The eight-year-old jumped was backed at 13 to 1.

Second place at 100 to 6 was shared by four entrants, Sir Francis Towle's Airgead Sios, Miss Dorothy Page's Kilstar, Sir Alexander Maguire's Sterling Duke, and H. C. McNally's Royal Daniell.

Other odds: The Professor II and Le Cygne, 18 to 1; Royal Mail, Workman, Black Hawk, Dominick's Cross, MacMoffat, and Old Pal, 20 to 1; Rockquilla, Venturesome and Knightsbrook, 25 to 1; and Red Prince, 33 to 1.

Mrs. A. Bendir's Quartier-Maitre was eastablished 9 to 1 favorite for the Lincolnshire, first event of the flat-racing season which will be held April 3. Miss Paget's Wonersh was second choice at 100 to 9.

Other odds: Titan, 12 to 1; Boomps-a-Daisy, 100 to 8; Aldine, Golden Sovereign, Southport, and Ticca Gari, 100 to 7; Hot Bun, 11; Rosetown and Spliced, 100 to 6; and Time Step, Davy Dolittle, and Uncle Archie, 20 to 1.

Kitchener Here To Play Petes On Friday

Kitchener Greenshirts clash with the Petes here tomorrow (Friday) night at 8.30 o'clock in the Brock St. arena. It will be the visitors' first and the locals' second game of the O.H.A. intermediate "A" round-robin playoff series, the Petes having beaten Port Colborne 4-1 here Tuesday Another victory for the Buckland bunch here tomorrow would give them a flying start in the playoffs. With no increase in prices, and the Petes tangling with probably the toughest opposition in the series, there should be a record crowd of city and district fans on deck Friday evening

The visitors, made up largely of last year's senior "B" Waterloo Tigers finalists, will be plenty tough. They have size, speed and experience The Petes, at full strength, will shoot the works to cop this one, and a redhot sizzling playoff struggle is expected. Following their win over Port Colborne—and recalling an exhibition win over Owen Sound (the other team in the series)—the Petes appear to have a good chance this year to win a provincial championship.

Toronto Gets 1st Title Bout In Decade As Salica, Pace Tangle Monday

TORONTO, Feb. 29 (CP)—Toronto gets its first world championship boxing bout in a decade next Monday when Georgie Pace, the Cleveland negro with the right-hand wallop, attempts to settle dispute about his bantamweight crown against Lou Salica of New York, who is recognized as champion in New York State and California.

Back in 1929, when Frenchy Belanger was the people's choice, he fought Ernie Jarvis for the flyweight title here. Even that match wasn't recognized everywhere as a championship affair, however, and Toronto hasn't harbored so important a battle since.

To Salica's advantage are his experience and the fact that he has fought the championship distance of 15 rounds three times. Pace will be going 15 for the first time on Monday.

Then Salica will have no trouble coming under the 118-pound limit. Pace, scaling 121 right now, is in perfect shape and might take the edge off when he pares off more weight.

The semi-final brings together Len Wadsworth of Hamilton, Dominion welterweight champion, and Frankie Genovese of Toronto, with Wadsworth's title at stake.

Plainfield Whip Tweed 4-3

TWEED, Feb. 29.—The league-leading Plainfield boys maintained intact their record of no defeats as the regular schedule of the East Hastings Rural Hockey League ended at the local arena on Tuesday night, by trouncing Tweed 4-3.

The opening game of the double header saw Farnsworth Bees and Roslin Imperials meeting in an exciting tussle to break the three-way second-place tie, which they shared with Tweed. After sixty minutes of strenuous play, the lads from Farnsworth defeated the southerners by a score of 4 to 2, giving them undisputed possession of second place.

Burleigh opened the scoring for Roslin, getting the only goal of the first period. Lajoie knotted the count in the second period, while Roslin was held scoreless. Going into the third, Chisholm broke the deadlock when he finished a passing attack with Mattis and Bellis. Farnsworth, however, proved too strong for them and ran in three goals from the sticks of R. Palmateer, Lajoie and Meraw to stow the game away 4 to 2.

Plainfield Victors

The second game was a hard-fought battle which brought together the Plainfield squad and Tweed Bearcats, with the former winning by a score of 4-3. Anxious to maintain their unbeaten record, the visitors went all out in the opening frame, and skated Tweed right into the ice. Two goals by Parks, star defence man, gave Plainfield a substantial lead.

The middle stanza showed a complete reversal of form on the part of both team. The Bearcats threatened with a cellar berth to finish the season, stampeded Plainfield, who became completely disorganized with the result that Tweed ran in three goals without a reply, to go out in front. Shanque, Lobb and Cronkwright were the marksmen.

The final period was well advanced before Parks picked up a loose puck, skated through the entire Tweed team to pick a corner and tie the score. With a minute left to play, Carleton scored the winning goal for Plainfield, giving them their fourth victory of the season. Five penalties were handed out, with Bearcats drawing three of them.

In the playoffs Plainfield, by virture of their position, will draw a bye, while the other three teams will play to decide which will contest with the league leaders the honor of winning the championship.

Milltown Squad Take Hornets For 2nd In Row

NORWOOD, Feb. 29 — (ENS). — With the record crowd of the season in attendance last night at Norwood arena, the Trent Valley League's two top-ranking squads fairly burned up the ice for the benefit of the lustily cheering fans who assembled to witness their last encounter of the regular schedule. Following up their overwhelming victory over the Norwood "Hornets," Monday evening in Campbellford, the speedy "Sunocos" came right back last night to grab a 3-2 decision over the Hornets in their own backyard.

Deciding factor in the extremely close tussle was the winning goal scored by Hendy on a penalty shot, with less than three minutes remaining in the final period.

This win places the Hendy-coached crew three points up on Alex. Kempt's favorites, but the Hornets can still finish on top if they can click for a pair of victories in the remaining two league fixtures. They have a four-point game with Marmora scheduled for Friday night, and will conclude the regular season on Monday in Madoc, for a possible total of six points. With only one game left to play, Campbellford can hope to add only two more to their present three-point margin. Whichever way it goes the squads are going to finish in mighty close order, and the fans are anticipating a rousing playoff series.

Rough and rugged throughout, Referees Ennis and Payne managed to keep everything within bounds until the O'Leary-Free incident of the final canto, in which both were given match penalties. Starting out as a bumping joust in the middle ice zone, a few angry words were flung, and O'Leary of the Hornets took the initial clout which precipitated a heated conflict with Free and also was the signal for a couple more fights to break out among the opposing players. Eleven penalties were handed out during the tilt, in addition to the match penalties, seven of which went to the homesters.

Campbellford getting off to a fast start gauged in on McMaster from the opening bell. In less than three minutes a rush by Hendy resulted in their initial goal, Blake slamming home his rebound.

Entering the middle frame, play was decidedly even as both sides checked closely and watched for the breaks. Breaking up a Norwood attack Blake grabbed the puck, dashed towards the Hornet cage and slipped Free a pass close in for the Sunocos second and only goal of the period at the eighteen-minute mark.

In the last canto, Hendy and Webb went off together, and before they returned, Rogers also got the gate, thus giving the Sunocos the odd-man advantage. The game was held up for a short interval when the puck clipped Hendy on the head. Back to full strength, Norwood's continued efforts to bulge the twine were at last successful, Rogers banging in a pass from Brady for their opening counter. Play was again temporarily suspended while O'Leary and Free had their fistic encounter, and resumed again with the teams minus their services for the rest of the game. Hendy and Webb were waved off together next for the second time this period. Back again Rod Webb climaxed a splendid effort by blazing a shot past Turner to deadlock the count 2-all. A penalty to Aboud for tripping Hendy gave the visitors a splendid chance, but they failed to make good their power play. Continuing to gang, however, with their opponents back to full strength, Referee Payne awarded them a penalty shot, claiming that Brady had illegally held the puck during a pile-up near the Norwood cage. Hendy winding up at centre coasted in fast on the penalty shot line and let go a hard drive to the lower right-hand corner, which beat McMaster cold. The large representation of Campbellford fans practically rocked the rafters at this sudden turn of events. Only three minutes remained as this winning marker was tallied, and an extremely tired Sunoco squad somehow managed to withstand the furious Norwood onslaughts, helped materially by another penalty to Aboud. Godin of the visitors was injured in a collision with Brady and carried from the ice near the end of the period. The teams:

Campbellford—Goal, Turner; defence, Hendy, Wilkes; centre, Blake; wings, Godin, Kelly; alternates: Robinson, McIlraith, Free, Atkinson.

fused to allow the British to set up their own training schools here two years ago, Dr. Manion said.

"To which Mr. King should we listen?" he asked.

"Neither the Prime Minister nor Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Pensions Minister and former Minister of Defence, had dealt directly in their latest speeches with his charges that the Mackenzie King government re-

A Covering Scheme.

Now to cover up that refusal to Britain, the "so-called" Commonwealth air training scheme was devised, costing Canada at least $350,000,000, and Mr. Mackenzie King had admitted "practically none of which need have been spent had he consented to the British establishing these schools at their own expense."

The Conservative Leader said that in reply to his questions as to what the Government had done with the $188,000,000 spent on defence from 1935 to the outbreak of the war, Mr. Mackenzie King said the amount was $94,000,000, although at the same time Defence Minister Rogers said $112,000,000 had been spent.

(In Winnipeg on Tuesday night Mr. Mackenzie King said that Canada's defence expenditure from 1936 to 1939, inclusive, was $94,000,000. In reporting a statement on the subject by Dr. Manion at Blind River, Ont., yesterday The Canadian Press erroneously stated the dates used by the Prime Minister at Winnipeg were 1935 to 1939, inclusive.

(In Eganville, Ont., on Tuesday night Mr. Rogers said that defence expenditure between November 1, 1935 and August 31, 1939, was $112,764,449.

Dr. Manion said he preferred to believe Mr. Mackenzie King to Mr. Rogers, if the Prime Minister would only be definite, which he rarely was. But "unfortunately for him I have his own definite statement about his Government's expenditure on defence for the very period to which I refer." The $188,000,000 figure was taken from the Prime Minister's own mouth.

Quotes Hansard

Again referring to Hansard of Sept. 8, Dr. Manion quoted Mr. Mackenzie King as saying: "The actual expenditure for defence in each of the folowing years was, in round figures: 1936-36, $17,000,000; 1936-37, $22,923,000; 1937-38, $32,760,000; 1938-39, $34,432,000.

"The estimate for 1939-40 amounted altogether to $64,528,815," said the Conservative leader. "Of that capital expenditures represented $30,000,000 and ordinary expenditures $34,000,000. Since then governor general's warrants have been issued, in addition to that sum, amounting to $16,454,000.

"Rather strangely," said Dr. Manion, "in his Winnipeg speech Mr. King divided his figures of Sept. 8 by two. Apparently he thought half the truth should be good enough for Winnipeg and the Prairies and I suppose that in the heat of the election, half-truths are the best we can get from Mr. King when politics are at stake.

"But which Mr. King are we to believe—the Mr. King at Winnipeg or the Mr. King of Sept. 8, 1939? I accept the latter because his figures there are based on the actual estimates passed in the House of Commons, not as in Winnipeg, where he may make any irresponsible statement, with no one present ready to check the totals.

"He has therefore displayed in this speech one of the reasons why he has scuttled parliament—so that he could make this type of irresponsible charge against me and give to the people, at the same time, so-called information that is only half true."

tune" since last September regarding the reduction of defences in 1930-35 and quoted Hansard to support his accusation.

Waste in Millions.

The Government's waste of public money "must run into millions of dollars, and every taxpayer should realize that to vote for a Mackenzie King candidate is to put the stamp of approval on this sort of thing," Hon. H. H. Stevens, National Government candidate in Kootenay East, said at Kamloops, B.C. He spoke in a 30-minute address over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

"Parliament was denied the right to review the actions of the administration or to examine into war purchases or supplies—a right which it was assured would be given when it unanimously granted the government supplies of money in the war session last September—yet there is ample evidence of crass negligence in the expenditure of the taxpayers' money."

Mr. Stevens said land has been purchased from friends of the government at from three to ten times its assessed value. Contractors have been paid huge sums for rental of equipment "which they and everyone else know is excessive."

The record of the King government for the past five years is a succession of one failure after another, he continued. "If it was not actually a failure then it was an evasion of responsibility. Since the outbreak of war the administration has been marked by a degree of hopeless incompetence and grave dereliction of duty unparalleled in Canadian history."

Judging from the manner in which war purchases were being handled, it was clear that by national unity the prime minister meant a united Canada under the domination of the Liberal party. Patronage characterized the administration both before and since the outbreak of war.

That One Party System

"In relief administration, in the granting of war contracts, in the purchase of supplies and now in the enforcement of criminal law by order-in-council we have a picture of what we may expect from a 'one-party' system of government.

"Gone with the wind is all semblance of fair dealing in the expenditure of public money. No longer is relief to be granted on a basis of need but according to party affiliation.

The ancient right of a man to be tried by his peers is to be jettisoned and his liberty to be in the gift of a political minister. Such is indeed the drift of this incompetent yet cunning administration."

During the regular 1939 session of parliament, three separate acts were passed which violated "the sacred principle of responsible government" in which absolute power was given the agriculture minister to extend or vary the acts by or through regulations and in utter disregard of parliament, Mr. Stevens said.

No Capable Leadership.

A National Government such as proposed by Conservative Leader Manion "would not be capable of giving leadership to a united Canada," Revenue Minister Ilsley said at Halifax in a 15-minute speech broadcast over four private stations in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

"The diversity of view in a Manion government would cripple it from the outset," Mr. Ilsley said. "Canada needs a united government in time of war."

It was safe to say a Manion Cabinet would contain "no Liberals of any standing." If it consisted of Conservatives, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation representatives, Social Crediters or New Democracy exponents, it would be "the worst type of government the country could possibly have, far worse than a government representing any one faction."

"Dissension would be rife," the Minister said. "For example, the C.C.F. is against the sending of troops overseas; New Democracy is for conscription. Imagine the scene at the council table of Canada!"

He listed four ways in which a Manion government would "suffer by comparison with the government now in power." It would, he contended, be less experienced, less united, more "erratic" and would not be "as fair to all persons and parties" as the King administration.

Air Scheme In 1937

Murdoch A. MacPherson, former Attorney-General of Saskatchewan, told a National Government campaign meeting at Barrie, that Canada would have benefitted considerably more from the Commonwealth air training scheme if Prime Minister Mackenzie King had accepted in 1937 the British Government's proposals for training airmen in the Dominion.

Mr. MacPherson said the present war effort was delayed by the fact Canada did not fall in line with the air plan in 1937 and he said it was "high time we put somebody in office who will play ball with Britain."

"If we had started with this Empire training scheme in 1937 we would have been manufacturing those planes here and have kept our dollars in Canada, instead of seeing them go across the line to the United States," Mr. MacPherson said, charging Mr. Mackenzie King had shown he "wouldn't trust Britain."

most of the refugees are former army officers or reservists seeking to join the Czecho-Slovak legion in Paris to fight Germany for a reconstruction of the shattered Czecho-Slovak republic.

Unlike refugee Poles, the fugitives from the German protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia have no diplomatic representative to whom to apply for passports. They have turned to Allied diplomats. The republic of Czecho-Slovakia no longer is recognized by Hungary but Poles have their own legation.

Hundreds of Czecho-Slovak refugees, most of them in Hungarian jails, believe they face deportation as a result of German pressure applied to Hungarian officials diplomatically and through the Gestapo.

Germany was understood to have demanded that Hungary request France to recall Lieut.-Colonel Tony Albord, military attache of the Legation, who was accused of furnishing passports through agents stationed in northern Hungarian villages shortly after the war started.

Forty-eight Czecho-Slovaks held in the Budapest citadel have written to neutral legations that "the influence of the Gestapo has forced the Hungarians to treat us severely."

The prisoners identified themselves as former army officers, college professors and students. They pleaded for intervention to avert deportation back to the German protectorate "where certain death awaits."

On letter, dated February 13, described an attempt by five men to break prison which caused guards to fire on them. The break was tried on February 11, when the prisoners went into the citadel courtyard to get water from a pump.

"Nine bullets were fired at them," said the letter. "One of the students seemed to have been hit and wounded."

Two of the men were caught by police, the letter added, and were "beaten to bloody unconsciousness at the citadel."

Entire Aluminum

Just how extensive the Canadian expansion program will be was not disclosed. But the announcement did note that it will put Canada almost on a par with Germany as a producer of aluminum, essential in the manufacture of gas masks, aircraft and other war equipment.

Some idea may be gained from the figures of Canada's 1939 output —approximately 100,000 short tons— and Germany's estimated annual output—between 130,000 and 140,000 tons.

Apparently much of the expansion will be made at the firm's plant at Arvida, Que., in the Saguenay district, where, the announcement said, an average of about 1,500 men will be needed for erection of new structures and equipment. In addition, the announcement said that "for operation of new equipment, authorized but not completed, the company and its subsidiaries will need about 1,700 additional employees, of whom approximately two-thirds will work in the Saguenay."

With the possible exception of certain skilled tradesmen, it was pointed out, those likely to be required for construction and for operation are already employed or available.

The company operates other plants at Shawinigan Falls, Que., and Toronto, while a fourth is under construction at Kingston, Ont. The Kingston plant, to be devoted to production of strong alloys for aircraft, is not involved in the present arrangement, an official said.

The agreement supplements a previous one which called for purchase by the British Ministry of 90 per cent. of the company's annual exportable surplus.

Red Tank Crews Perish In Flaming Inferno

This blazing Russian tank is just one of scores that met a flaming end in the fighting near the Summa sector of the Mannerheim line. The Finns discovered that dynamite and gasoline are very effective in stopping these red juggernauts. Crews are usually burned to death before they can escape from the trapped tanks.

Boy Is Ordered To Be Home Nightly At Nine

Arranging the conditions upon which a sixteen-year-old boy was to be allowed to go on suspended sentence in police court this morning Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., was dubious when the boy's father suggested that the lad should be required to be home every night by 9 o'clock.

"Don't you think there is danger in tightening things too much?" he asked. "Nine o'clock is early especially in the summer months. Sometimes when irksome conditions are imposed boys began to think they are being very harshly used and it makes them hard."

A suggestion from defence counsel W. B. Gordon that the time limit be set at 9 o'clock standard time which will allow the boy another hour during the daylight saving months was finally adopted by the court.

The boy had pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the Normal School and later in juvenile court two younger boys also entered guilty pleas to the same charge and were allowed to go on suspended sentence.

When the older boy's case was before the court Crown Attorney McElderry, K.C., explained that the three youngsters had entered the Normal School through a window and had done a considerable amount of damage. A door in the principal's room had been pried open with a bar and damaged, desks had been ransacked, ink and papers strewn about and in addition several microscopes and scales had been carried off. The stolen property, he said, had been recovered but there should be restitution for the damage done.

In allowing the boy to go suspended sentence on condition that he report to the police, get home every night by 9 o'clock standard time and does not associate with the other two youngsters, Magistrate Langley told him that he had done nothing smart or brave in entering a school building and damaging property.

Father Charged Assaulting Son

As the result of a disturbance in a house on Park street Wednesday afternoon in the course of which a 13-year-old boy is alleged to have been struck on the head with a knife, a Park street man faced two charges before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning.

He was first charged with assaulting his son, occasioning actual bodily harm and pleaded guilty. Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C. however, asked that the accused should be remanded without plea and the request was acted upon, he being allowed to withdraw his plea. He was remanded until March 5.

On another charge of creating a disturbance he was also remanded until March 5 for sentence, after he had pleaded guilty.

Crown Attorney McElderry asked that bail be fixed at $1,000.

Rollie told the story at the committee rooms last night and added that the dog showed his displeasure at the action by rubbing shoulders against the furniture until the offending sign was off.

Two Babies Are Born In City On February 29

Two youngsters born in this city today will have grounds for bitter complaint against fate. Sifice today is February 29th, the extra leap year day, they will celebrate a birthday only once every four years.

At 2.45 this morning a fine big boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Vincent O'Toole, R.R. 6, Peterborough. Mrs. O'Toole is at St. Joseph's Hospital and both she and the child are well. Two hours later at Nicholls Hospital, another boy, weighing 7 pounds was ushered into the world. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Murray of Bridgenorth. So far as could be learned there were no other arrivals.

This extra day in leap year is a headache to many parents, and it has been recorded that some parents insist when a child is born on Feb. 29th, the birth certificate should be dated March 1st.

There are several Peterborough people celebrating birthdays today and some celebrating wedding anniversaries. Yvonne Mary Reid, 616 Brock street is sixteen today, her fourth birthday. Patrick Earl Collins, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Collins, Alexandra Ave. is also 16 today. Miss Hilda Pearson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Pearson, 316 Maitland Avenue is another who is celebrating her fourth birthday today. She is sixteen and is a student at the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby. William K. Ferguson, 170 Edinburg street, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ferguson, is 20 today, his fifth birthday.

Darrell Ackford, eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Ackford, Boswell avenue has his second birthday today, while Edward Deal, four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Deal, 286 Edinburgh street is having a grand time celebrating his first honest to goodness birthday. Miss Phyllis Armstrong of 42 Sophia street also observes a leap year birthday today.

Unemployed To Hold Social

Peterborough Workers' Unemployed Association will hold social games at their headquarters at 454½ George street on Friday evening. A large crowd is expected to be on hand when proceedings commence at 8.30 o'clock. The unemployed won their fight and plan to operate as usual.

Prizes include towels, eggs, bacon, cheese, butter, and ten pounds of sugar. A special "freeze out" prize will be a shoulder of pork. Blankets will be special prizes and there will be two door prizes.

Farmers Attended Morning Meetings

His belief that farmers will attend morning meetings was verified for Frank C. Paterson in the series during the last three days that extended from Buckhorn and Ennismore to Havelock.

"You don't have as much time as at night meetings," Mr. Paterson said today. "The series from Monday to Wednesday were all in the mornings and afternoons, and we had from fifteen to twenty-five men turn out for them. The attendance should have been higher, but we had good discussions on such subjects as soil fertility, seed, hay and pasture, and a general talk on bacon."

R. S. McKercher of Seaforth accompanied Mr. Paterson in this mid-season effort to stimulate fresh interest in the farm work that will be getting under way when Spring advances.

The Rambling REPORTERS

NOT GOOD ENOUGH.

Frank Kerr told a little story about himself on Wednesday night that amused the Glover rally crowd in Ashburnham Community Hall. In his day he was something of an athlete, played a good game of tennis and football, dabbled in hockey, and baseball, and it transpires that he also had a hand in lacrosse. As a souvenir of those days Mr. Kerr has kept a lacrosse stick, a long reach of hickory that was fashioned for the game before its spaces and flails were abbreviated to the scale of th box scrambles.

Once in a blue moon, it seems, Mr. Kerr takes down the lacrosse stick and tosses a rubber ball against the wall as he used to do in his youth at Cobourg. On one of those days a year or so ago he was wearing some kind of red house coat, and generally looked like a Turk or something extraordinary, in his own words. Several boys were going by and stopped to watch the King's Counsel with the long antediluvian lacrosse stick, and the solitaire game at the wall. One of them called out: "Hey, mister, are you playing tonight?" Mr. Kerr said he looked at the lads in a grateful spirit for having recognized in him a candidate for the local squad, and he answered, "No, sonny, I wasn't good enough to catch the team." —T.

Fenelon Falls Man Although 68 Years Old Is Marking His 17th Birthday Today

LINDSAY, Feb. 29.—(ENS)—John Cuthbert, retired mailman, found a 1917 copy of the London Mirror in his home recently and informed the Examiner that it is one of the copies he sent home while he was overseas in the last war. The paper is interesting in that it carries many pictures of the last war and also a picture of the fire which destroyed the Quaker Oats plant in Peterborough in 1917.

Born February 29

M. H. "Mac" McCallum, well-known Fenelon Falls business man, is 68 years of age February 29 but hasn't had many birthdays. Today is his 17th birthday. The well-known business man was honored by his friends on the occasion.

Big Ice Harvest

It is estimated that close to 10,000 tons of ice have been taken from Cameron Lake by ice men of this district. Cameron Lake ice is in demand since it is said to be among the purest in the province due to the large number of springs which feed this lake.

Fewer Couples Are Being Wed; Old Scottish Law Approved

No one has ever quite settled the problem of when and how the privilege of women proposing marriage in Leap Year commenced, and is comparative statistics mean anything, women are certainly not taking advantage of this privilege in 1940

In January of February of 1939 there were 35 couples marched to the altar but in the past two months, January and February of this year, and even with a war to help things, there were only 31 couples married.

Faint hearted maiden ladies who have discovered the man of their choice but are unable to make him pop the fateful words might be interested in knowing that a law aimed at giving strength and courage to leap year proposals was enacted in the year 1728 in Scotland. The law read as follows: "It is'a statut and ordaint that during the rein of her maist blissid Megeste foe lik years knowne as lepe years, ilk mayden ladye of bothe highe and lowe estait shall hae liberte to bespeke ye man she likes, albeit he refuses to taik her to be his lawful wyfe, he shall be mulched in ye sum ane pundis or less as his estait may be; except and awis gif he can make it appeare he is betrothit ane ither woman he then shall be free."

This in a few words means that if a woman has courage to propose to a man, and he refuses, he is liable to a fine of five dollars unless he can prove that he is already engaged to another girl.

It was such a good law that France adopted it, and it is also said that the law was placed on the law books of England. This brings up another rather interesting angle. According to a provision contained in the revised statute of Ontario 1937, in all matters of controversy relative to property and civil rights resort shall be had to the laws of England as they stood on the 15th day of October, 1792, the only exception being in regard to poor laws.

If England adopted this old law and it was on the books when Canada adopted the English law, then it is reasonable to believe that such a law could be enforced in Canada to-day. There are a lot of laws on the statute books which are out of tune with the time, but are sometimes availed of by clever lawyers, astute judges and credulous juries. Needless to say every judge and magistrate would be most happy to enforce this law were a case to come before them.

One dear old lady in Peterborough, a grandmother, learned of this old Scottish law and immediately declared that such a law should be in force to-day, because there are many more women than men, and in her opinion many fine men go through life without a partner merely because they are unable to get up courage to pop the question to a girl.

Who knows — she may be right.

War Bulletins

LONDON — (CP).— Several British airmen who were interned in Belgium after forced landings escaped across the French frontier and returned to England some weeks ago, a reliable source said to-day. Various reports set the number of escaped fliers at three to five. Officials declined to give the details.

GLASGOW, Scotland — (CP Cable). — James Nector of Vancouver, was among the 35 survivors of the torpedoed freighter 4,996-ton Loch Maddy, it was announced to-day by managers for the ship's owners, the Glasgow Navigation Company. Four lives were lost when the ship went down in the North Atlantic on February 22.

LONDON — (CP). — Unless London is bombed before midnight to-night Colonel Josiah Wedgwood, Labor member of Parliament, will be £5 ($22) to the good. When war broke out he endeavored to calm what he considered another M.P.'s unjustified nervousness by betting him £5 the city would not be bombed in six months.

WELLINGTON — (CP-Reuters). —The New Zealand Government to-day announced a contribution of £5,000 ($15,900) to the Finnish Red Cross.

BUDAPEST — (AP). — Hungary entered the Turkish market as part heir to Germany's former trade with the signature to-day of a trade agreement between the Hungarian and Turkish Governments. WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE — (CP-Havas).—Seven hundred men of the Palestine Pioneer Auxiliary Corps arrived on the Western Front yesterday to join other units of the British Empire in active service. Marching side by side were Arabs and Jews, who until recently had been engaged in bitter conflict over domestic issues in Palestine. The contingent is composed exclusively of volunteers and is commanded by British officers.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— To aid Finland in its war against Russia, people in the United States are donating everything from a Missouri mule to a muzzle-loading rifle. Every mail brings a new load of voluntary contributions to the Finnish legation. The mule, incidentally, was not led up to the door and delivered. It was the gift of the American Legion in Paris, Mo., and will be auctioned in its home state and the money sent to Finland.

LONDON—(CP)— Major Kermit Roosevelt needed only the formal nod of the War Office today to be off for the north in command of an international volunteer brigade in Finland. The son of Theodore Roosevelt, former president of the United States, who won a medal with the British forces before the United States entered the last war, expected permission before the end of the day to resign his major's commission in the British army, which he joined in the early weeks of this war.

A Finnish official said: "Major Roosevelt's record in the last war and his exploits as an explorer in Tibet, India and China are qualifications which suit him for this post."

LONDON—(CP)—Sugar rationed for candy-making fed 50-foot flames early today in a factory which endangered the homes of 100 families, forcing them to flee. It was London's biggest fire since the wartime blackout was started.

Canadian General Pays $2 A Share

Earnings of the company have been more than sufficient to cover dividend requirements over recent years, although net declined in 1938 to $9.49 per share on the common from $12.44 per share in 1937. Total business during last year was reported as moderately higher than in 1938, but was somewhat below the 1937 level.

Can Motorist Whose Car Is Motionless Be Convicted Of Careless Driving?

Can a motorist whose car is motionless on the highway be convicted of careless driving, even if his machine might be on the wrong side of the road and without lights?

That was the crux of a traffic case heard in police court Wednesday when Charles Elmhirst of Otonabee was charged with careless driving under the Ontario Highways Act, as the aftermath of an accident on Highway 7 on the night of February 10.

The crown evidence was heard Wednesday morning, and when the court resumed in the afternoon, W. B. Gordon, who appeared for Elmhirst said he did not propose to call any defence witnesses.

Magistrate Langley reserved judgment in the case until Saturday morning.

Al Sharpe Dies Suddenly At Age Of 42

Al Sharpe dropped dead about midnight Wednesday night at his home at 575 King street. A post mortem was performed this morning by Dr. C. B. Waite but no report will be available for two days.

A clothing merchant on George street for many years, Allan Charles Sharpe was one of this city's best known men, and a popular figure. He was 42 years old.

Last night Mr. Sharpe was at the Peterborough Curling Club's rink on Charlotte Street, where his team, skipped by J. T. Braund, was presented with the Neill trophy, one of the most highly prized awards of the year. Other members of the team were E. H. Brown and W. Archibald. H. Darling has taken Al Sharpe's place on the team during the past few games when he dropped out due to ill health. He was not curling last night, but watched games with interest.

Returning home he suffered an attack and was dead almost instantaneously. Although he had complained of pains in his side during the past two weeks and was being treated by physicians, his condition was not believed serious and his sudden and unexpected death came as a grave shock to all Peterborough.

Head Of Business Men.

Al Sharpe was this year's president of the Peterborough Business Men's Association, and was one of the most popular leaders that group has had, enjoying their full support and friendship. In 1937 he was president of the Kiwanis Club here, a club of which he was a member for eight years, during which time he had the signal record of never missing one meeting. Under his presidency, the club, largely at his instigation and through his endeavor, dispatched a train carload of food and supplies to Ohio valley flood victims. A gigantic undertaking, he completed the task within three days after an appeal was made by the Cincinnati Kiwanis Club. Also during that year the Kiwanis Club's wading pool in King Edward Park was completed and turned over to the public. He was the leader mainly responsible for the erection of the pool, according to J. A. McKone, secretary of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club.

Joined 39th Battalion.

A member of the Canadian Legion, Al Sharpe was one of the youngest men to enlist in Peterborough in the Great War. He joined the 39th Battalion here as a bugler and was transferred, in England, to the 2nd Battalion, crossing to France with a machine gun company. At Hill 70 he was wounded in the knee by shrapnel and spent some time in hospital in England. Of six men who were with him at the time the shrapnel exploded, he was the only man not killed.

Sporting circles in Peterborough knew Al Sharpe well, and admired him. He was one of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association's most staunch supporters, and was a member of this year's executive. He was also a member of the Peterborough Curling Club, playing this year on J. T. Braund's rink.

He was born in 1897 in Peterborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Sharpe, 412 George Street, both of whom survive, and he spent all his life in this city with the exception of the years he was serving Canada overseas. He was educated at Central School and at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, and was a member of Trinity United Church.

Surviving besides his parents, are his wife, formerly Mildred Greene, and one son, Carlos, 9; also three brothers: William and Ormond Sharpe, both of Peterborough, and Donald Sharpe in Los Angeles, California, and one sister, Mrs. Walter Batley, in Toronto.

The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon with service at Trinity United Church at 3 o'clock, Rev. G. S. Easton officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake cemetery.

Villages Must Use Pasteurized Milk

Compulsory pasteurization becomes effective on March 1 in a new group of Ontario municipalities, extending the area in which this health law was first applied on October 1, 1938, by the authority of an act of the Legislature passed in February of that year.

Included in the new list of municipalities are the following in this district: Millbrook, Norwood, Omemee, Marmora, Bancroft, Cannington, Deloro, Frankford, Hastings, Orono.

Many other villages and townships have been brought within the scope of the legislation making compulsory the pasteurization of milk.

A. L. Elliott, M.P.P., pointed out to the Examiner that the law was enforced in Peterboro city and adjoining sections of North Monaghan and Smith townships in October, 1938. In the following spring Havelock was added to the pasteurization group, and now Norwood is incorporated in the same ban on raw milk.

Mining of phosphate rock on the Ocean Islands in the South Pacific will be increased this year.

Boosters' Club Is Formed By Business Men

HASTINGS, Feb. 29—(ENS). — Forty business men of Hastings met in the council chambers here Tuesday night and formed a Hastings Boosters' Club for the purpose of benefitting this community as a whole. The meeting was enthusiastically carried throughout and each of the delegates present seemed anxious that such a club should be formed and pledged their full support. William H. Kumpf, manager of the Bank of Toronto, was elected to the post of president of this newly formed organization.

Starting the meeting off, Reeve Lewis Kelly was appointed chairman and J. V. Findly, secretary until the officers were duly appointed. A nominating committee was named to choose men who would later be voted on to the various offices. This committee was composed of Dr. J. H. Hess, Arthur McKenty, Charles Lynch and Charles Plant.

Mr. Findly read a letter from the Booster's club in Millbrook. It was revealed that Millbrook has one hundred per cent membership of the business men in the club and the letter went on to tell how their organization was operated and of the benefits to be derived from the organization.

Mr. Kumpf was elected president from a field of three candidates. Alex Wilson, Hastings' oldest business man, was chosen honorary vice-president.

Other Officers.

J. L. Doherty was elected secretary. J. V. Findly, manager of the Royal Bank, is treasurer. Howard G. Fairman was named first vice-president and Clifford Baker second vice-president. Walter M. Fowlds, Charles B. Plant, A. J. McKenty and E. W. "Eddie" Jones was elected to the executive

J. V. Findly saiad there was a whispering campaign going on in the United States to keep the American tourist trade from coming into this country. He pointed out that the Dominion government was taking steps to overcome this handicap where United States residents were told they might have their cars or money confiscated if they came to Canada because Canada was at war and needed money badly. The speaker suggested as a worthy move for this newly formed club that something be done to advertise the fact that there are no more restrictions attached to visiting this country now than there ever was, the price of Canadian merchandise has not risen, American money brings a premium in Canada, and their motor cars and money will not be confiscated by the Canadian government for war purposes.

Other suggestions offered in the course of the discussion were that the merchants themselves offer specials, probably once each week. In fact the general idea of the club is to entice more people to make their purchases here.

Food Shortage

Peiping, China, Feb. 29 (AP)

HORSE, donkey, camel and even dog meat in considerable quantities are being eaten by the poorer classes here, reliable investigators reported today, because of North China's acute food shortage.

Gordon Charges Are Denied By City Trust

Returning to his attacks on the City Trust Commission, Alderman Gordon asserted last night that the Commission had recently borrowed $70,000 "to play the market."

The statement was made at a meeting of a special committee appointed by the council to make a survey of the city's financial methods, and generally to enquire into "ways and means" as suggested by Alderman Ovens. He was appointed chairman and with him were Aldermen Cotton and Gordon, Mayor Hamilton and City Treasurer Morley E. Shaver.

The committee decided to ask the City Trust Commission for a review and statement of its activities, after Alderman Gordon had asserted that the Commission neglected to make a report of its affairs.

"They exceeded their authority when they borrowed the money," Alderman Gordon said, "and this is not the first time."

Ald. Gordon pointed out $42,844 had been paid in salaries to the trust commission from 1914 to 1939. All that work should have been done by the finance committee and the city treasurer, he contended.

Informed of Ald. Gordon's attack, Vincent M. Eastwood, chairman of the City Trust, described the "playing the market" charge as "definitely incorrect."

"The only time we have borrowed money would be, say, a Dominion war loan issue which might come out in September, but we would not have funds until December," said Mr. Eastwood. "Never was such a thing done at a loss, Mr. Gordon knows that. There is no such thing as playing the market. Borrowings have always been in preparation to buy Government bond issues. Our accounts are open to any taxpayer at any reasonable time. Mr. Gordon has never been refused permission to see them."

Mr. Eastwood said that in regard to a report of the affairs of the commission the city auditor, Edward Humpage, had access to all the commission's records, and that the best form of statement the council could obtain would be an audited statement from Mr. Humpage.

202 Fewer Men On Unemployed List

While number of unemployed registered at the Employment Service of Canada branch here is down by 202 from this time last year, Peterborough industry has absorbed only a comparatively few of these men, Superintendent Bill Mellis said today.

At least 120 of the men who have secured employment have been placed in work in other centres and have left this city, he said. Added to that number are some unemployed who have joined the Canadian Active Service Force.

Despite the decrease, however, there are still a great many men calling daily at the Employment office on King street in search of work of any kind. At the present time no local jobs are open to them and the prospect of immediate work seems remote. Superintendent Mellis issued an appeal to the citizens of Peterborough for odd jobs of any kind to help tide some of these men, most of them married and with families, over a difficult period. They call daily at his office and are eager for any kind of work.

Taylor Figures In 5 Goals Of Pirate Win

HERSHEY, Pa., Feb. 29.—(CP)—It seems to be a pretty safe bet that one of these days Toronto Maple Leafs will be recalling little Billy Taylor of Oshawa to the National Hockey League.

The star of last year's Dominion junior championship series moved down to Pittsburg Pirates of the International-American League for seasoning in mid-season, and has been piling up points with regularity ever since. Last night he figured in five goals as the fighting Pirates came from behind to whip Hershey Bears 7-3.

The victory moved Pittsburg to within a point of the section-leading Indianapolis Capitals who went down 5-3 before Syracuse Stars. Taylor, with a goal and four assists, played a large part in the win, with Don Metz figuring in the same five goals.

Cleveland Barons kept within a game of Pittsburg in the western section by edging out Philadelphia Ramblers 2-1, while Providence maintained their lead in the eastern section with a 3-3 tie with the second-place New Haven Eagles.

Two third-period goals while their opponents were short-handed gave Cleveland their fifth straight victory over Philadelphia. Johnny Polich was given a major at the close of the second period, and the Barons came through with two counters before his return in the third. Philadelphia got half the deficit back when Lloyd Russell scored half-way through the period.

Training Camp Briefs

(By The Associated Press)

LAKELAND, Fla., Feb. 29 (AP)—Young Harold Newhauser, Detroit schoolboy pitcher who was something of a sensation in the American Legion junior tournaments, is winning plenty of attention at the Tigers' camp.

"That kid," said Hank Greenberg, "is going to make a great pitcher."

PASADENA, Calif., Feb. 29 (AP)—Jimmy Dykes, Chicago White Sox manager, may have plenty of problems before and after the season opens, but he is rid of all but one of his holdout worries. Signing of Mike Kreevich and Jackie Hayes yesterday reduce the holdout brigade to a lone sentry, pitcher Clint Brown.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Feb. 29 (AP) — Accustomed to rather sedate spring training, Pittsburg Pirates got their first taste of the methods of fiery Frank Frisch yesterday. On the first day of practice he sent the Bucco batterymen through a five-inning intra-squad game. Bob Klinger's crew defeated Joe Bowman's 12-7.

Their 18th Child

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. William Andrew White were acclaimed two years ago for having a family of 17 children, all living at home. Now they have 18. Their 10th son was born Tuesday night, but White, a treasury clerk, tried to keep it quiet to avoid any "fuss."

Rollie Glover Opens Campaign With Rally In Ashburnham; Canada's War Effort Described

Opening his election campaign in the Ashburnham Community Hall at the corner of Hunter and Mark streets Wednesday night, where he played as a boy, R. M. Glover was assisted by F. D. Kerr, K.C., Dr. E. M. Crough and E. L. Sackville with Max J. Swanston chairman. All the seats in the hall were occupied by an audience of men and women, and a numerous group of young men stood at the rear of the hall. Vocal solos were sung by Mrs. D. Campanero, accompanied by Miss M. McCabe.

Memories of years gone by and of associates of those days in the old "Scotch village" took on new vividness in recollections sketched by Mr. Glover against the contrast of the position to which he was nominated last Saturday. And in the present prospect of the growth of that section of the city across the river, Mr. Glover said it was a great satisfaction to him as an old Ashburnham boy to observe the many new homes that had been built during recent years around the prospering industry of the Western Clock Company.

"It is a great pleasure to me to see so many Ashburnham people at this meeting," Mr. Glover said. "It means a great deal to me because this is the first meeting of my campaign which I never even dreamed of a short time ago. When I hear some of the things that are said about me of late, I am wondering whether I am really the man they describe. I wanted to hold my first meeting in the place where I was born. My home was up the street about a hundred yards in a little white cottage, and I lived there until I was about 33."

Mr. Glover said that some of the things he and his Ashburnham companions did as boys were directly opposite to "the things which speakers say about me now."

"I love coming back to Ashburnham. It is like home to me, and if the new citizens are as happy as I was when I lived over here, I can only say that they are very happy indeed."

Mr. Glover said he knew most of the people across the river, but to the newcomers he suggested that the personal information they would probably want to know about him as a new candidate could be obtained from their neighbors who had known him when he lived in Ashburnham. He recalled some of his lacrosse associates, Joe Begley, Jim and Jack McCabe, Fred Dobbin, George Lipsett and others, mentioned the famous battle with a team from Orillia, and said that hockey was a later attraction to him proposed by Sam Adams. The only other member, still living in Peterborough, of the hockey team on which he had played for years was Chris Graham.

"I have always believed in athletic training of that kind as an important part of the school of life. I believe it brings out those qualities in a young man that remain with him in after life. If he does not play hockey and baseball fairly it is not likely that he will play the game of life any better."

Mr. Glover said that in the direction of the Examiner as its manager and publisher he had too tried to be fair in its public effects, including the news of names that would have deeply hurt innocent families. From the advertisers of the Examiner at that time and from those with whom he had been associated in other affairs, Mr. Glover said that those who did not know him could enquire about him from them.

Mr. Glover frankly stated that as chairman of the manufacturer's committee of the city council, "I did not do much for the city in getting new industries. We did sign a new agreement with the Canadian Nashua Paper Company, although the company's engineers were against the proposition, but John R. Marshall and the president of the company were partial to Peterborough, and I hope the company will see their way clear to make the improvements which I believe they have in mind. I tried to use common sense as a member of the council, and to be fair to the whole city, but deep in my heart there was always a little extra feeling for Ashburnham.

No Political Motive

If I have done anything in this riding to help it as a community, it was only my duty. I certainly did not do it for any political advantage. I never expected to be nominated as a candidate for either the Dominion or Provincial House, but I am in this fight and I tell you the honest truth that I will do my best to win."

Mr. Glover said that if he had the active support of the group of Ashburnham women who had developed the Memorial Park on Armour Hill he would feel assured of success. In regard to the progress of the Western Clock Company he said that its prosperity had not been disturbed during the years of Liberal policies, "and it may have been helped."

The candidate closed his speech by declaring that he was wholeheartedly behind the government in its war efforts and in its commitments to Great Britain, and expressed the belief that when the final story was told of the work done during the months since the nation formally declared war against Germany its critics would be more inclined to compliment it.

True To Parliament

As the main speaker of the meeting Mr. Kerr reviewed the King government's course from the beginning of last September in its war program.

"The Government was true to Parliament, and when it met in special session early last September the Government asked Parliament what it, as the people's representatives, proposed to do."

The answer of Parlament was for a declaration of war, and never in the history of Canada, Mr. Kerr said, were the people of this country more united than on that occasion when, under the leadership and statesmanship of Mr. King, Parliament with a unanimous voice, authorized the Prime Minister "to lead this people into a great war."

The war that began in 1914 was a great problem which Canada was facing for the first time. It was only natural that some mistakes would be made in such circumstances, and Mr. Kerr said he wished to be perfectly fair to Sir Robert Borden, then leading a Conservative government.

"This time, within four hours after war was declared, boards that were planed for emergency began to function. For a short time there was a flurry in the price of sugar, but as soon as a control board got into action we saw no such price increases as those of twenty-five years ago. In being fair to Sir Robert Borden, we should also give credit to Mr. King in being prepared for that sort of thing."

"It has been said of Mr. King that he is even not a war-minded man. Before Canada got into the war, and before you and I knew what was going on, the forts at Halifax and Esquimault were manned, guns big enough to deal with air raiding forces were all along the coast, there were air squadrons on both coasts, and a serviceable navy was on the job. If Mr. King is not a swashbuckler, and he is not, he does things at the proper time that ought to be done, and these things were all foreseen."

Mr. Kerr referred to the first Division of thousands of men that reached England before most people realized that they were ready to go, and only a few days ago another contingent of Canada's young soldiers arrived in the Mother Land, welcomed by the highest and the lowest with the heartiest acclaim as brothers from across the sea. "But it was done with no brass bands and no blowing off steam in the press."

Rogers and Ralston.

Mr. Kerr spoke of the recent statement by Colonel Dewart, who, he said, had the rank of a Brigadier, to the effect that the government had done a wonderful job up to the present. And I would say of Colonel Dewart that he would not sacrifice his military honor and reputation by making a false statement for the purpose of deceiving the electors."

The Hon. Norman Rogers, Canadas Minister of Defence, left his university as a young fellow in the last war and went overseas as a private. "He jumped in and took his luck with the ordinary soldiers and was badly wounded at Sanctuary Wood. He knows the needs and the proper way to look after the private soldier. Would he let the soldier down? I think not."

Colonel Ralston, Minister of Finance, went overseas as a lieutenant, and rose to be colonel of his regiment, and it was said of him that he never sent a man into a position he would not go himself. Is that man going to let the soldier down I think not.

Is "Chubby" Power, the Postmaster General, active in the war work of the Government, who was decorated for gallantry overseas in the last war, is he going to let the soldiers down. No."

Mr. Kerr read press reports by Leonard Tilly, grandson of Sir John A. Macdonald's cabinet, member, describing the coastal defences along the Atlantic, affirming that it was the greatest system of defence this coutry had ever seen, and that in this accomplishment "the full effect of the government's war efforts appears."

Canadien Loss Tonight Means Curtains

TORONTO, Feb. 29.—(CP)—Whoever said trouble comes in bunches wasn't referring to the case of Montreal Canadiens but the plight of the Habitants certainly could be used as a fine example.

As if it wasn't bad enough that they have lost their last five games; have only won two and tied two in their last 27; and haven't won a contest at home since Dec. 14; they now find it necessary to face Boston Bruins at a time when the men of Art Ross are being absolutely merciless in their drive for the top spot in the National Hockey League standing.

Two points behind the league-leading New York Rangers, but with two games in hand, the Bruins could make certain with a victory of losing no ground in their game on Montreal ice tonight against Canadiens. And there's the chance that they might draw even with the Rangers, who play host to Chicago Black Hawks while Detroit Red Wings play at Toronto against the Maple Leafs.

A victory for the Bruins would just about mean elimination for Canadiens, who have a game in hand over the sixth place New York Americans. A victory would place them only three points away from Americans and leave everything riding on a two-game series this week-end between the two clubs.

N.H.L. Governors Decide Upon Playoff Dates

NEW YORK, Feb. 29 (CP)—The National Hockey League Board of Governors decided Wednesday to start the playoffs March 19 and continue them, with games almost every other night, until the Stanley Cup champions are decided early in April.

The A series for the League championship, between New York Rangers and Boston Bruins, will start in New York to fit with available dates at Madison Square Garden no matter whether the Rangers or the champion Bruins finish the schedule in first place.

If the Rangers finish on top the first two games of the best-of-seven series will be played in New York, the next two in Boston and if more are necessary, the teams will alternate between the two cities until the championship is decided.

Series B, between the teams finishing third and fourth, will be on the best-of-three basis with the first two games on the 19th and 21st and the third, if necessary, in Toronto, on the 23rd if the Maple Leafs finish in third place or in Chicago the 24th if the Hawks finish third.

The first two games of series C, also best-of-three, will be played on the 19th and 21st with the third game, if necessary, in eDtroit March 24 if the Red Wings finish fifth. Their opposition will be New York Americans or Montreal Canadiens, who have a slim chance of overhauling the Americans in the three weeks' play remaining.

The semi-final, or series D between the survivors of series B and C, will open on the first hockey night after the participants are decided, and the best-of-seven final for the cup will start either March 31 or April 2.

Toronto Father Eats Last Food In House Drives Sick Wife, 6 Children To Street

TORONTO, Feb. 29 (CP)—Clad in a night dress and with only stockings on her feet, the invalid mother of nine children ran from her home on Adelaide street west last night after allegedly being threatened by her husband.

She ran to Richmond street and hid under the stairway of a building where police found her after overpowering and arresting the husband, Ormond Davidson, 42, on a charge of threatening to kill his wife.

In court today Davidson was remanded for mental examination.

The detectives arranged for food for Mrs. Davidson, and six of their children who were at home. The last eatables in the house, some boiled potatoes, which Mrs. Davidson had prepared for supper, were eaten by her husband after he had chased his wife and children from the house, police said.

Leap Year Birthdays Call For Celebration

It must be a very unusual experience to find oneself without an annual birthday, but it seems there are a number about town who observe their natal day on the 29th of February and are only able to celebrate once every four years.

Miss Hilda Pearson, student at the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, is being kept busy opening letters and reading cards of congratulation on her sixteenth anniversary; William K. Ferguson, who is out of town today, is feeling sad because he is unable to celebrate his 20th with a bang-up party at his home; Miss Phyllis Armstrong of 42 Sophia street is being beseiged with handshakes and back-claps from well-wishing friends—there is a delightful surprise for her, too, but we are not supposed to tell. Two of the younger fry, Master Edward Deal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Deal, 286 Edinburgh street, four years old, and Darrell Ackford, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Ackford, 297 Boswell avenue, who is eight years old, are wondering what the excitement is all about, but liking it anyway.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kent of 493 King street are celebrating an anniversary today, too, they are 36 years married—a family dinner will mark the important occasion, and the fourth anniversary of their wedding is being observed by Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Malby of 303 Rubidge street.

Curiosities Of The Calendar

On reference to almanacs it will be found that January always begins on the same day of the week as October, and the same is true of April and July, September and December. Again, February, March and November also begin on the same day of the week. This, however, is only true in normal years of three hundred and sixty-five days. A century can never begin on Wednesday, Friday or Saturday. Furthermore, the ordinary year ends on the same day of the week as that on which it begins.

Is Amused With Women's Hats

"Aren't the hats amusing?" writes a male commentator in an English magazine. "They're so funny this season that they got me interested in women's hats. I started investigating, and what do you think I found? One worn in 1910 that is two feet wide and has twelve ostrich feathers decorating it. And that isn't all. I have found one worn in the 'nineties' which measures only four inches across."

Furniture Long Term Investment

Furniture is ordinarily a long-term investment and therefore should be examined carefully before purchase. You will want to check on the wood—whether it is solid or merely veneers; on the actual construction of the pieces—the joinings, springs, fillings, padding and tailoring; and on the upholstery — whether it is mothproofed and for how long, if it will stand cleaning and what kind, and if the material is colorfast. Check the measurement of the space you want the furniture to occupy and take color samples along so that it will harmonize or match other furniture you already have for future satisfaction.

To Make Small Room Look Larger

To make a small room appear larger than it really is, have the walls and ceiling done in light colors, avoid any suggestion of clutter by keeping accessories down to a minimum, use furniture in proportion to the size of the room, plain or very small patterned fabrics for draperies and upholsteries, wall-to-wall carpet, or, if a rug, be sure the floor margin around the edges is proportionate, and only a few well-chosen, rather small pictures. Simplicity should be the keynote.

Local W.C.T.U. Meets In Murray Street Church

Murray Street Baptist Church was the setting for the splendid meeting of the local W.C.T.U. held on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. H. T. Rehill, the president in the chair, assisted by Mrs. Manning, secretary and Mrs. A. B. Cunningham, the treasurer. She ably carried out the worthwhile program arranged.

The usual devotions, consisting of a hymn and scripture lesson, read by Mrs. J. A. Spencer were followed with prayer by Mrs. E. Wand.

During the business period, the engagement of a field worker to tour Peterborough district, with a choice of two speakers, Miss Rosamond Duff or Mrs. P. Mulholland, which would tend to awaken much new interest, was discussed.

The Ontario Temperance Federation convention was announced for March 5-6 to be held in Toronto. The treasurer's report indicated an increase in membership and much special work under way.

A delightful solo, "Leave It With Him", sung by Mrs. John Custance brought a comforting message to the workers. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. E. W. Glover. When the statue of Frances Willard was presented to the United States by the state of Illinois to be placed in Statuary Hall, the first statue of a woman to be placed among the figures of the greatest men that had lived in the history of a nation she was declared to be "the foremost woman of the nineteenth century, the most beloved character of her time and under God, a benefactress to the race." This declaration introduced the Clip Sheet commemorating Frances Willard Day and was led by the president, Mrs. Rehill, who was assisted in the memorial by several members.

In many ways it was noted that Miss Willard, the founder of the W.C.T.U. was original above all others. She made great contributions to the progress of the education of women and was the first woman ever to become a college president.

In 50 nations today Frances Willard is honored for her great ministry in the interests of the temperance cause. She was the originator of many of the fine methods of work within the W.C.T.U. that has made it such an educational force for temperance. We women of today can best honor her memory and help the cause she loved by interesting others in the W.C.T.U. work and in these days of crisis it is a patriotic duty.

Combining two interests dear to the hearts of all Christian women, Rev. R. D. Wright of Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church as guest speaker took for his topic, "Missions and Temperance." In his introduction, he pointed out that from ancient times, intoxicating liquors had been used all over the world in almost every race of people.

The earliest missionary endeavors to Christianize Europe came at a time when the use of liquor was a matter of course and so it obtained a strangle hold, particularly on the white races, who, in turn, introduced it to other races. Thus the liquor problem was intensified for our missionaries.

The fact that liquor is used so freely in our civilized countries, also makes the missionary's work more difficult. In dealing with these closely related phases of work, Mr. Wright referred to two specific mission fields, Bolivia in South America and South Africa. In the latter country the natives have been forced into the cities where they live in extreme poverty under wretched conditions. To them the liquor traffic is barred legally, yet to obtain oblivion they resort to home brew, which also brings them a tiny revenue. This constitutes another grave problem for the missionary.

In closing the speaker expressed the hope that W.C.T.U. efforts, coupled with those of our missions may bring about great reform throughout the world.

Mrs. R. E. Clarke Commences Third Term As Regent 57th Chapter

Mrs. R. E. Clarke, regent of the 57th Regiment Chapter, I.O.D.E., was unanimously returned to office for the third term Wednesday afternoon at a largely attended meeting of the Chapter in the Officers' Mess at the Armouries, and spoke appreciatively of the honor bestowed upon her by the members, and of their co-operation during her term as regent. Mrs. H. Dodds, first vice-regent, Mrs. W. Langford, second vice-regent, Mrs. G. H. Cutmore, secretary, and Mrs. F. J. Frape, treasurer, were also returned to office. Mrs. W. Gordon Hall presided for the election. Officers appointed for 1940 are as follows: Press secretary, Mrs. U. E. Waterman; educational secretary, Mrs. C. H. McWilliams; standard bearer, Mrs. G. W. Melton; empire study convener, Mrs. W. Ashby; current events, Mrs. J. Duncan; councillors, Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser, Mrs. W. G. Hall, Miss I. M. Wesley, Mrs. James Turnbull, Mrs. V. J. Tully, Mrs. R. G. Cottrell, Mrs. D. A. Loomis, Mrs. H F. Foote, Mrs. W. H. Ashby, Mrs. J S. Fanning; Mrs. W. Langford was appointed assistant to the war work, convener, Mrs. A. Turner; hospital conveners, Mrs. W. H. Andrews and Mrs. J. Howden; telephone convener, Mrs. H. Dodds; refreshment convener, Mrs. W. Hughes; flower convener, Mrs. R. J. Cottrell; representatives to Local Council of Women, Mrs. D. A. Loomis and Mrs. R. G. Cottrell.

The meeting opened with the Members' Prayer, followed by two minutes' silence in memory of Lord Tweedsmuir. Plans were made for an anniversary tea and homemade cooking sale, which is to be held in the Armouries on the third of April.

Much activity during the year was indicated by the annual report presented by the secretary, Mrs. G. H. Cutmore. Nine new members were added to the Chapter during the year, and two new members, Mrs. G. Todd and Mrs. G. M. Parker, joined at yesterday's meeting. Social activities included an anniversary tea in March at the Armouries; a garden party at the home of Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser, Burleigh Falls, in July; a Remembrance Tea and draw for Kitchen Hope Chest in November, and a Military euchre and bridge in the Legion Hall.

613 Calls were made by the hospital committee, 239 graves were decorated in May, and a wreath was placed on the monument. A bale was sent to the Chapter's adopted school in Minden at Christmas, and parcels were sent to men from Peterborough in the Army and Navy during the year.

Correspondence read included a letter from the Canadian Legion War Service, to which the chapter will make a donation, and from the National Defence at Kingston regarding comforts for soldiers.

Mrs. C. E. Newman gave her annual report of the chapter's adopted school at Minden, and other convener's reports presented included the financial, war fund, hospital, flower, relief, and wool fund. Seventy-three knitted articles have been completed by the wool committee for war work, ably assisted by Mrs. Willis of Hall's Bridge, to whom a letter of appreciation is to be sent by the chapter.

Mrs. W. Hughes and her committee were in charge of arrangements for the tea served after the meeting.

Brief Forecasts Of Early Easter Parades

With the first soft wind and the increasing warmth of mid-day sunshine comes a restlessness which sets the modern Eve to thinking of her 1940 fig-leaves, and a glance at the calendar reminds her that it's not only an early Spring, but an early Easter.

Foreseeing the demands of this earlier season, designers have collaborated in a counter-conspiracy against the depression of wars and rumors of wars with a response to martial music which makes costumes more casual, colors more vital, fabrics more alluring, accessories more enchanting.

In Spring, 1915, we are told, fashions went to Easter parade with a fanfare of color, a heedlessness bravely gay. In Spring, 1940, the Easter parade again will be as gay, as colorful, as a quarter-century ago —yet there will be no gallant echo of fashions of the past, but rather a brilliant forecast of fashions of the future.

This is to be a Spring of contrasts, a Spring that is everything to every woman. Its dictum will please every type because it offers a style for every fancy. You can be smart in a coat with lingeries touches, if you please—pique revers and the like —or you may be just as smart in a mannish tailleur. You may choose navy or black or peasant beige, or you may be very gay in a riot of colors. Perhaps the highlight of the Spring color picture is the accent on pastels. Every conceivable color is muted until you have a delightful selection of misty pastels—aquamist, heaven blue, cloud rose and many others.

In a day or so we hope to go into detail about some of the styles that will be featured during the Easter parade, whether it be in Peterborough or Paris. There is heartening news on the way, too—this year there is a wide choice of ensembles that will look as if they had been especially designed for you, no matter who you are or what your type—so be watching, not only for fashion news on this page, but in the shops you enter, or the attractive windows you pass as you walk to work or out to do the family shopping.

We Noticed

....Local hairdressers who attended sessions of the annual convention in Toronto this week tell us that hairdressing styles will be more natural this spring, far more feminine, and with deep soft waves and big loose curls, fashioned on hair that is much shorter.

....Hair styles, you see, just as clothes fashions, are showing the influence of war. In France women are cutting their hair again—not shingling it—but cutting it from three to five inches in length, all around the head. This allows one to do almost anything one likes, from a swirl upswept to a long hair 'chignon' effect.

....The new length of hair with high pompadour effect formed by soft waves pushed forward on top of the head just fits the gas mask, and as you know, everybody carries one because it is compulsory. New styles in clothes feature pockets for them.

....For evening wear, or when the evacuated women comes home from the country to Paris for week-ends, for the theatre or opera—or when a women wants to look especially pretty for her menfolk, she hides her short hair with little chignons which she wears with feminine clothes of the 80's and 90's. Children's hair styling is also very interesting at the moment—it is taking on a slightly old-fashioned trend.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Vitamin Food Rations Should Be Doubled

The sick toll that the month of February exacts need not be endured; I am convinced that if the vitamin food rations are doubled, and cod liver oil is administered generously, and your out-of-door exercise is conscientiously taken you can escape colds and "flu."

Good old tomatoes are still the cheapest and least destructible of all vitamin foods—that is after milk.

The purchase of a case of tomatoes or tomato juice is strongly recommended—if you have them on hand you will find ways of using them up.

Because I lament the harm done to the precious vitamins in eggs and milk, about once a week this month I have been serving my family different flavored egg nogs—they think they are a soda fountain treat. As much nourishment as you care to provide can be stowed into them.

Emem's Pineapple Egg-Nog

For each person to be served provide 1 egg—if for one undernourished individual use 2 yolks. Let us suppose you have six people for whom you are making this dessert. Beat 6 yolks very well in large bowl, add 3 tablespoons sugar and beat well. Wash and dry beater and beat whites very foamy. To yolk add 2 tablespoons pineapple for each person to be served (1¼ cups for six people) and about 4 cups milk, mix well, fold in whites, pour immediately in 12-ounce glasses, top with a shake of nutmeg and serve.

We realize that egg-nogs made this way are a comparatively expensive dessert—but when you consider doctors' bills, such ounces of prevention are cheaper than the traditional pound of cure.

Tomato Jelly Salad

(More than you need of these little moulds may be made and stowed at the back of the ice box or covered on a tray in the fruit cellar—for they keep well for a few days.)

One pint of tomato juice or strained canned tomatoes brought to boiling point with one slice of onion and half a bay leaf and two whole cloves and boiled 10 minutes. Two tablespoons gelatin soaked in ¾ cup cold water while tomato juice is boiling. Strain tomato juice over soaked gelatin and stir until gelatin is dissolved, then add 2 teaspoons sugar, ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper. Pour into small moulds and allow to set. If desired when it is cold and before it is set add 1 cup finely diced celery or bits of chopped pimientoes, or green pepper, or parsley or strained canned peas, or little bits of leftover cold meat. Serve on crisp lettuce with mayonnaise or boiled dressing—2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice make a nice addition to this tomato jelly when it is cold and just before it begins to set.

Cracker Tomato Soup

One No. 2½ can tomatoes, 1 pint boiling water—boil these together and add ¼ teaspoon soda. When they stop foaming remove from heat. Heat 1 pint whole milk to scalding point. To the tomatoes add a 'roux' of 3 tablespoons butter mixed with 1 tablespoon cornstarch, and stir until it thickens without putting back over heat. This cools the tomato enough to add the milk at a temperature of about 175 deg. Fahr. Add the hot milk and keep soup warm for about 5 minutes—add salt, pepper and a pinch of spices if desired. When it begins to simmer add ½ cup sifted cracker crumbs.

Emem's Vitamin Salad

Equal amounts of shredded raw peeled, beets, carrots, cabbage, celery. In salad bowl arrange four large cupped lettuce leaves, in each one place a pile of vegetables—one kind of shredded vegetable in each cup. Top each with ring of pepper or strip of pimiento or parsley. At table pass either mayonnaise or boiled dressing.

NOTE: If you prefer to mix the above salad it is delicious—but some folks don't know they like raw beets and would refuse this salad if the beets were combined in it.

Lemon Jelly and Banana Salad

To make the lemon jelly soak 2 tablespoons gelatin in ½ cup cold water for 10 minutes, and dissolve in 1 cup boiling water. Add 1-3 to ½ cup sugar and stir until dissolved; then add ¼ cup lemon juice and strain into individual moulds, that have first been rinsed out with cold water, and chill.

On individual salad plates place well cupped dried lettuce leaves. In centre place 1 small mould of lemon jelly. On both sides place half of a banana (sliced lengthwise, and brush cut surface of banana with clear fruit juice to prevent browning. Garnish with sliced cherries. Pass fruit cream dressing or mayonnaise, and cheese crackers.

Clothes iron much more easily if they are hung up carefully, pinned securly with plenty of clothes pins, and shaken occasionally to remove wrinkles. Never let woollen garments freeze. Dry them in the house in very cold weather.

DOROTHY DIX

Clothes Make the Man but His Wife's Attire Plays an Even Greater Part in Making a Man's Career, So Always Look Your Best When You Meet His Friends.

Dear Miss Dix—My husband is in the process of working up in the world, and it is just a matter of a short time now until his position will involve our having many social contacts. We have always been bookish people and have been so busy trying to get ahead that we have had very little time for society, and so I feel very much out of things. My husband is the kind of man who could go anywhere, and if he could not do the things that others were doing he would make himself so interesting that nobody would care and would rather listen to him talk. But I am a different proposition. I am quiet and somewhat shy. So would you advise me at my age, 34, to take dancing lessons (since I will be asked to dances) and to learn to play a good game of bridge and tennis? Another thing is clothes. My husband contends that if you have an interesting personality you don't need to dress up, that people don't like you for your clothes. That may go for him, for people seem to like and respect him in spite of his being rather sloppy. But when I am shabby it takes the last bit of pep out of me. My husband never gives me any money and tells me to buy myself a dress. Maybe he expects me to pinch the grocery money, but I would feel that was dishonest. Surely my work in the house entitles me to buy things without stealing.

ANSWER

Perhaps you do not realize it, but you have come to the most crucial point in your life, and on the decision you make now rests the whole future of your marriage. Your husband is on the up-and-up and you can climb with him or you can let him leave you at the bottom of the ladder while he goes on alone and you become one of the forgotten wives of successful, self-made men of whom we never hear until we read in the papers that they have been pensioned off and divorced to make room for some glamorous debutante more in keeping with their new imported furniture.

Up to now you have been everything to your husband. You have cooked his dinners and washed his shirts and encouraged his ambitions and scrimped and saved to help him get where he is, and he has no thought of your not always being by his side. But, without his realizing or intending it, you will drop out of the picture if you don't make a long, hard, determined fight to keep your rightful place in it. And to do that you must keep in the running by making yourself attractive so that people will ask you because they want you and not because they have to ask you because you are your husband's wife.

So, to begin with, in spite of all that your husband says to the contrary about the value of clothes, get yourself the smartest wardrobe you can possibly afford. If you doubt your taste, don't trust it. Have a heart to heart talk with the head of some specialty shop and get her to pick out for you a street suit, an afternoon dress and a party dress that will bring out all of your best points. And go to a good place and have a hair-do.

Don't appear before any of your husbands new friends until you are properly dressed, because first impressions are lingering ones, and it may take you years to live down a sloppy, out-of-date, basement-bargain-looking outfit. Women judge other women by their clothes and they don't bother with one who is a frump and who would ruin any dinner table by her appearance. More than that, no woman is ever at her best when she knows she looks sloppy. A wit once said that there was more moral stamina in a Paris gown than there was in the firmest religious principles. And it is true.

After you have arrived and people have found out that you are intelligent, well read and a witty and entertaining conversationalist you can afford to economize on your clothes, but not now when you are knocking at the doors of society.

And then learn to do things. Take dancing lessons. Take lessons in bridge and tennis. Be one of the people who fit into any sort of group and you will be welcome. But no man is going to ask you to dance a second time if you tread on his feet, and you will be left out of the bridge foursomes unless you can play a game that makes it interesting to your partners.

If you will follow these rules you can keep up with your husband. And it is up to you to do it or be left behind. And, oh, yes, don't forget to tell him that he is making a great mistake in not realizing that clothes are just as important in making a man's career a success as they are in a woman's.

Tired of Being Big Sister

Dear Miss Dix—Please tell me if I should be dismayed or thrilled when the boy of my dreams tells me I am like a sister to him. I can't figure out whether this is a good or bad sign. I am rather popular with boys, but on every date they pour out their troubles to me and ask my advice on their love affairs. I am getting tired of this and don't know what to do.

WORRIED GIRL

ANSWER:

When a boy tells you that he regards you as a sister you had as well abandon hope of his ever being anything more than a brother. So give him the air and hunt up a new prospect whose sentiments are less fraternal. For no boy looks upon his sister as a figure of romance, and he always wonders what it is that other lads see in her that makes them hang around the house and spend money on dragging her out to dates.

Of course, it shows that you have a lovely character and that there is something sweet and maternal about you that causes all the boys to make you their confidant and sob out the story of their blighted loves on your shoulder. But there is no percentage in it for you and the sooner you resign the job of being Public Comforter the better for you. This will require tact on your part. For a date is a date, even if you do have to listen to Tom rave over Sally's complexion that you know is synthetic, and it won't do to tell him bluntly that she buys it at the drug store.

But, on the other hand, there is no use in being too enthusiastic about Sally and join in his song of praise. Your cue is to act a little bored and throw a few well-directed dashes of cold water on his rave, the while you call attention to your own charms. And it won't do a bit of harm if you work so assiduously at incense-burning that he will go away feeling that while, of course, Sally is a pretty girl and all that, you are the only one who has ever really appreciated what a wonderful, intelligent, sophisticated man of the world he is.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, March 1.

The major planets are found in a very propitious position on this day, encouraging the most cherished desires and ambitions, both in personal and business affairs. It is a time for reaching toward high goals with the assurance of the friendly support and co-operation of employers, superiors, and other influential personages whose assistance may be desirable. Friendship, promotion, and the wise counsel of elders may be counted on.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a most prosperous and progressive year, with the fondest hopes and wishes realized, both in purely private and business relations. It is a time for forging ahead with confidence, as elders, superiors and those in high places are ready with friendship and preferment. Esteem, honors, and financial gain are indicated.

A child born on this day may be splendidly endowed for attaining its highest ambitions in life, whether personal or business. It may have fine talents, sound character, and humane and generous principles.

To refinish the worn or frayed edges of a rug, buttonhole the edges with heavy yarn or place a heavy cord along the edge and bind it to the rug with yarn.

FASHIONS

It may sound a bit previous to be talking about the Easter Parade, but before we know it the day will be here. If you don't want to be caught napping, you will find that this is the dress you will enjoy making and wearing. Sleek princess lines that reach out to your shoulders and make them broad and straight. Peg-top pockets are all the rage with the younger set. They are a new style that gives you a fresh, spring-like look and are easy to make, too. Of course this same dress can be made without the pockets, if you wish, but do not omit the crisp white bow under your chin.

Style No. 3172 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 years. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards of 39-inch material, with ⅛ yard of contrasting for bow.

DINNERS OF THE WEEK

(By Mary Moore)

SUNDAY:
Chilled Apple or Grape Juice
Chicago Ham (see note)
Potatoes au Gratin
Shredded Buttered Green Beans
Waldorf or Head Lettuce Salad
Mayonnaise
Apricot Snow Custard Sauce
Coffee

Note.—To make Chicago Ham mix 2 tablespoons brown sugar with 2 teaspoons dry mustard, and rub into a slice of ham 1½ inches thick that has been gashed lightly. Mix 2 tablespoons vinegar and ¼ cup water. Pour over the ham and bake slowly in greased pan about 45 minutes. Do not allow heat to increase over 300 deg. F. or this will begin to burn.

MONDAY:
Neapolitan Spaghetti (see note)
Salad Bowl Salad; Pulled Lettuce, Parsley
Grated Carrots, Shredded Celery
French Dressing
Butterscotch Meringue Pie. Coffee

Note.—If you purchase your ham for Sunday thick enough there may be enough left to grind for the tomato sauce for the spaghetti. Saute about 2 onions in some cooking oil and if you have a green pepper on hand add about 2 tablespoons of it chopped. Then add about 1 cup of any kind of meat, fresh or cooked, chopped or minced, and stir for about 2 minutes, then add about 1 can of tomatoes, and cook slowly until slightly thickened. Season with salt and pepper and a little cayenne or hot paprika and boil spaghetti in plenty of water for about 20 minutes, drain well, serve in centre of hot dinner plate, cover with generous portion of Neapolitan sauce, sprinkle top with cheese. This is such a delicious meal no other main course item is necessary if plenty of salad is provided.

TUESDAY:
Shrimps fried in Batter (see note)
Hot Canned Tomatoes
Potatoes in Parsley Cream Sauce
Canned or Fresh Grapefruit and Banana Fruit Cup
Toasted Crackers. Cheese. Coffee.

WEDNESDAY:
Baked Spareribs and Sauerkraut
Baked Stuffed Potatoes
Pineapple and Cheese-stuffed Prune Salad
Melba Toast Coffee.

THURSDAY (Economy Dinner)
Six-Layer Dinner (see note)
Cole Slaw
Canned Cherry Pie. Hot Tea

NOTE.—In a greased or buttered large casserole place a layer of each of the following in order given, seasoning each with salt and pepper: 1 cup raw diced potatoes, 1 cup of sliced raw onions, 1 cup sliced raw carrots, 1 lb. raw hamburger or other fresh meat, ¼ cup uncooked washed rice, 1 cup tomatoes (raw, canned or juice), 1 pint boiling water. Cover and bake 1½ hours at 325 degrees Fahr. Serves eight.

FRIDAY:
Minnie's Cheese Omelette (see note)
Buttered Boiled Rice
Chopped Buttered Spinach
Orange Charlotte Coffee.

NOTE. — Separate whites and yolks of 6 eggs (to serve four) and beat whites until frothy but still liquid enough to pour— not stiff. Beat yolks very well, and add 1 cup grated old cheese, ½ teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, and at the last moment 2-3 cup boiling water, stir well, fold in whites and pour into preheated pan well coated with cooking oil and reduce heat to medium low. Cook until when you tip pan, none of the liquid will run to the side of pan. Place in oven under broiler to dry off and brown top slightly. If you like it very cheesy serve with additional grated cheese.

SATURDAY:
Cecils (Beef Balls Baked in Tomato Juice)
Bakes Squares of Hubbard Squash
Mixd Peas and Carrots Buttered
Banbury Tarts with Whipped Cream. Coffee

FIGHT COLDS

by helping nature build up your cold-fighting resistance

If you suffer one cold right after another, here's sensational news! Mrs. Elizabeth Vickery writes: "I used to catch colds very easily. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery helped to strengthen me just splendidly. I ate better, had more stamina, and was troubled very little with colds."

This great medicine, formulated by a practicing physician, helps combat colds this way: (1) It stimulates the appetite. (2) It promotes flow of gastric juices. Thus you eat more; your digestion improves; your body gets greater nourishment which helps nature build up your cold-fighting resistance.

So successful has Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery been that over 30,000,000 bottles have already been used. Proof of its remarkable benefits. Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from your druggist today. Don't suffer unnecessarily from colds.

Mother, Mix Your Own Cough Remedy. It's Fine.

Gives Quick Relief. Saves Money. Easily Mixed.

This well-known home-mixed medicine costs very little, but it gives delightful, swift-acting relief from coughs due to colds. It takes but a moment to prepare—it's so easy a child could do it. And it saves real money.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a 16 oz. bottle and add your syrup. Thus you make 16 ounces of really splendid cough remedy—and it gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money. It never spoils, lasts a family a long time, and children love its taste.

And for quick, satisfying relief, you'll say it's really splendid. It has a three-fold action. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear air passages. You'll be delighted by its prompt, pleasing results.

Pinex is a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, a well-known and reliable soothing agent for winter coughs. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

SYNOPSIS

Characters as you meet them:
JANIS SHELDON—Orphaned stenographer who inherits $20,000 and is in Hollywood seeking a picture career.
ROCK CONOVER—Former prison guard, who is also seeking a picture career.
LUCINDA HOLLENBECK—Woman about town in Hollywood, who makes her living from commissions on sales to gullible people she steers into the shops.
MARY BLACK—Successful Star.
DR. STEPHEN BLACK—Brother of Mary.

YESTERDAY'S ACTION

Janis, accompanied by Lucinda, has been looking over the home of Dr. Stephen and Mary Black with the idea of leasing it. Janis finally decides to take the place and signs the lease. That evening Janis is on a seashore party with Rock and the others. Rock declares his love for Janis and she is moved by his persuasiveness. He asks her to marry him immediately.

CHAPTER VII

He clasped her so tightly now that she cried out for mercy. He kissed her again hurriedly, held her off so that he was looking directly into her eyes. She saw his face clearly outlined in the eerie light, imagined there was nobility in it, even in his narrow chin. She thought she read high ideals, love in his dear eyes and all of a sudden, this man was everything she wanted in the world. Yet an irritating imp of caution whispered guardedly in her consciousness.

He was holding her taut now with his hynotic stare. "Let's team up, Janis—right away."

"You mean——"

"Get married—now—tonight."

JANIS drew back from Rock half-frightened when he had made his quick proposal.

"I—I couldn't marry you—not tonight, Rock. In a few months—if we still—still care——"

"You might be interested in marrying me after I've made a hit in pictures, you mean." He sounded angry.

She ran a hand caressingly up the lapel of his coat. "You're being horrid, dear. I only think—we shouldn't rush into things—but please believe, Rock—I do love you."

"If it's my income that bothers you," he said, in a brighter tone, "I'm making enough to feed us. You've got the house to live in for a year. Besides, if you're my wife, I can ease you into a picture now and then."

"But, Rock—I'm not terribly rich—not really."

"You're spending plenty then," came from him thoughtfully. "Better let me take care of things for you. Lord knows what Lucinda will get you to buy next. A car—mink coat—what else has she suggested?"

Janis thought of the three thousand she had lately spent for a car, twenty-five hundred for a mink coat, several hundred dollars for new gowns and accessories, and felt almost guilty. Of course, she had needed the car and the gowns, and the mink coat was really a bargain at a sale. Lucinda was forever reminding her that she couldn't hope to get on in pictures unless she looked the part, and now she was ready to blossom out handsomely.

"But I needed so many things, Rock—and Lucinda has been awfully kind about taking me to shops where I could pick up bargains."

He'll Boss the Purse

"Well, from now on, your spending spree is out. Lue's too smart sometimes. I'll have to talk to her."

"Come and get it!" shouted Joe now.

"He would break up our party," protested Rock. But he laced his fingers through Janis' and swiftly walked her toward steaming hot weenies and coffee.

And Janis knew that only a hurricane of calamity could toss her from this man or prevent her unruly heart from eventually responding to his heady insistence. She only wondered how long she could hold out against marriage, fight against herself, her own turbulent desire to belong wholly to Rock Conover.

Within a few weeks Janis had become accustomed to being the mistress of a luxurious home. She had even contrived to manage Maud, the temperamental colored woman who cooked superbly and kept the house immaculate unless she had been out the night before and brought on her "rheumatiz."

Learning to drive the new w[illegible] coupe had been simple for Ja[illegible] compared with the task of feeding choice food to more strangers than she cared to count. But Lucinda declared this generous entertainment was necessary, maintaining that in one way and another all the people she invited to Janis' parties could later be used as ladder to Janis' success.

Abbie Turner, motion - picture scout, had been singled out by Lucinda as specially desirable to have around, and Janis had been exceedingly nice to her on a recent evening.

Ever since entertaining Miss Turner, Janis had been keyed to high expectancy. She hoped she had made the right impression on Miss Turner, who had promised to give her a ring some day soon.

The party had been so hilarious that Janis had worried about M[illegible] Black's valuable furniture. Swing glasses and burning cigarettes were threatening to ruin furniture, rugs and even the top of the ivory grand piano.

Janis knew that something must be done to limit these destructive gatherings; also, a way must be found to keep out party-crashers, who came in increasing numbers now with the utmost urbanity.

Lucinda and Eve only laughed, and suggested that Janis get used to the ways of folk in a big town. If not, she'd be voted narrow and be avoided by everyone.

Janis was worried. Her bank balance was discouraging to look at, and a little alarming. She must get to work at an early date or be facing difficulties. She hoped Miss Turner would soon arrange an opportunity for her on a movie lot.

And at last one morning when Janis was resting on the chaise longue in the blue-and-gold sitting room formerly occupied by the famous Mary Black the [illegible] expected call came through.

"Miss Sheldon?"

Called For A Test

Janis recognized Miss Turner's voice and her heart leaped.

"Yes," she wavered through the mouthpiece.

"This is Abbie Turner. Can you go with me tomorrow at 9 to D.M.O.—for a test?"

"A—a test. Oh, that's wonderful, Miss Turner. Yes—thank you—thank you so much."

Abbie Turner, well aware of the pitfalls ahead of a movie-struck girl, snapped back, "Don't count on it too much—you can't tell about anything—until you've been put through the mill. I'm warning you, my dear."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

ONCE IN FOUR YEARS

THERE ARE some kinds of hands you don't expect to see as often as the 29th of February rolls around. When they do arrive, you are likely to miss the point on them, but you are not likely to forget them. The only trouble about what you learn from them is that you will have to wait an inordinate time before you can use it. Unless, of course, it makes you more alert to probe the possibilities of other unusual combinations and types that come along.

That was pretty bizarre bidding, especially South's 3-No Trump call as soon as he heard about the spades, counting on running a lot of clubs. As it turned out, South could have made his small slam contract, in view of the defense he got, but he fumbled it.

West, who had restrained himself from doubling, led his diamond A. When South false-carded with the diamond 9, West read his partner's 6 as possibly an encouraging card from a hand also containing the 4, and so repeated the diamond suit with the 2.

South, disgusted at his own bad bidding, saw that his club string was blocked, as he had no re-entries to his hand. So he took four diamond tricks, discarding useless spades and hearts on them, then four club tricks in dummy and two major aces, conceding a two-trick set.

It then dawned on him that he could have discarded the dummy's four high clubs on his diamond tricks, then run his own clubs and made his contract.

Sault Ste. Marie, Feb. 29 (CP)

HON. R. J. MANION, National Conservative leader, today outlined his views on party designations in the following statement:

School Heating Plans Are Shelved At Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 29.—(ENS).—The proposal to install a new central heating system in the public schools has been shelved for this year, it was announced at a meeting of the Board of Education held Monday. Chairman of the Property Committee W. Roy Loucks told members that his committee had met with a special committee from the Council and had gone into the matter carefully. The recommendation that the old furnaces could be made to hang out for another year was adopted, it being pointed out that the schools could be kept sufficiently warm providing extra help for the caretaker was provided. Mr. Loucks re-asserted that during extremely cold weather it was necessary for the caretaker to begin firing the furnaces at 2 o'clock in the morning, which was more than they could expect one man to do and remain on the job all day.

With reference to the council's request for the board's estimates for the year, Chairman A. G. Thompson asked heads of various committees to go into the matter preparing their requisitions in order that they would be ready for council.

The report of School Inspector A. A. Martin was read and he made several recommendations regarding the extension of manual training and home economics in the public schools. He congratulated the staff and praised the general efficiency of the schools. High School Principal E. H. Greig gave a financial report of the High School commencement, declaring that after all expenses had been met a balance of roughly $60.00 would be left. A motion was made recommending the purchase of a new piano for the public schools, and the matter was left in the hands of the property committee with power to act.

Best Informed

Berlin, Feb. 29 (AP)

GERMANY'S press department chief, Otto Dietrich, claimed in a speech to a group of editors at Wiesbaden today that readers of the controlled German press are the best informed in the world.

Dietrich, who also is Adolf Hitler's personal press relations officer, said Germany had devised a new form of war reporting by organizing correspondents as soldiers in "propaganda companies" and making them serve at the front to report "honest" first-hand experiences.

Stratford Area Man Asked Question Shot Before Answer

STRATFORD, Ont., March 1 (CP) —James Crawford, 41, Prospect Hill Service Station operator, was charged today with the murder last night of Amber Carter, 39, and was remanded for trial to March 8 in custody.

Carter, father of two children, was shot as he stepped from his automobile at the rear of his home by a man who asked "Where have you been tonight?" Carter died a few minutes later and Crawford was taken in custody shortly after.

Police said two discharges from a shotgun struck Carter in the chest and leg.

Circumstances surrounding the shooting were vague. Carter returned to his home about 11 o'clock last night from Stratford where he had spent the evening. He was accompanied by James McWilliams, an uncle who resides at the Carter home.

London provincial police hurried to the scene early to-day when they received a telephone call from a man who said, "I have just shot a man."

McWilliams told police that after he and Carter stepped from the car at their farm house the form of a man who evidently had been concealed behind another car parked nearby emerged from the darkness.

One Question Then Shots

"The man said 'where have you been tonight?'" McWilliams told police. "Then there were two shots close together. I saw Amber fall over and the man who fired the shots ran down the laneway."

Frank Ruston, a neighbor who was visiting the Carter home, helped McWilliams bring the wounded man into the kitchen where he died a few minutes later.

Provincial Officer John M. Douglas of Stratford, notified that Carter had been shot, also was informed that a man, believed to have gone berserk, was running about the neighborhood with a shotgun. Provincial Officer Douglas communicated with the district office of the provincial police at Kitchener and a detail was despatched to the scene.

Nazis Making Magnetic Mines Since 1938 Volunteer Explosive "Death Defiers" Reveal In Stripping One Found Off Coast

LONDON, March 1—(CP Cable).—Germany started manufacturing magnetic mines as early as 1938, it was revealed today when a full description of one of the underwater terrors was released from official quarters.

Four men risked their lives to examine the mine after it was dropped from a German seaplane near Shoeburyness in the Thames Estuary. It was a 1,500-pound pear-shaped affair, with two detonators, one set to fire a 700-pound force of high explosive on contact with the other governing magnetic appliance.

Germany has dropped many magnetic mines in shallow water along the east coast and planted others by submarine. They are only effective in shallow waters. Below 50 fathoms they are useless.

In effect, this is how they work: The magnetic field of a steel ship passing directly overhead releases a magnet, which then makes contact with the detonator firing the mine. The contact detonator would operate if the mine were dropped on the deck of a ship from a seaplane but it is not sufficiently sensitive to fire the mines when it strikes water.

Outside the case of the mine is aluminum. A parachute is used to break the speed of the mine's descent from the plane. They are usually dropped from a height of 1,500 feet on moonlight nights when pilots are able to distinguish landmarks.

The date 1938 was found stamped on several parts of the recovered mine when it was finally dismantled. It was spotted in the water late at night. Men were set to watch it but warned to keep well away.

As soon as daylight broke the mine was photographed from all possible positions and drawings made to scale. Non-magnetic tools were forged to fit the projecting appliances.

By this time it was noon. One man, a naval lieutenant, offered to risk his life in dismantling the mine. As soon as he disconnected one portion he went back to the

Berlin Report Claims Warships Attacked Some Big Ships Sunk

BERLIN, March 1—(AP).—DNB, German news agency, claimed German air bombers attacked "numerous" British warship, convoys and armed merchantmen this morning and that several large vessels were reported sunk.

The place of the attack was not given.

The agency said direct bomb hits "caused the sinking of several ships, another was set afire and one convoy was dispersed."

3rd Raid Over Britain In Week.

LONDON, March 1.—(CP).—German air raiders attacked fishing boats and other shipping along the east coast of Britain from Yorkshire to the Thames Estuary to-day.

The German raids followed by a few hours Royal Air Force flights over Northwest Germany, Baltic ports and Berlin, the third this week.

A British pursuit plane drove off German planes which bombed and machine-gunned the fishing boat Courage. Several trawlers engaged in fishing were attacked off Yorkshire.

A trawler and a drifter went to the aid of a vessel which sent an SOS and a Norwegian ship, badly damaged and listing heavily, managed to reach an east coast port after sending distress signals. She was believed damaged by German air attack.

One man was killed and 11 persons were missing after an unnamed Italian steamship was mined in the North Sea.

The raids on the coast brought anti-aircraft guns on the Thames Estuary into action, but at the moment that headlines in all evening newspapers were telling of attack

'No Security For World With U.K. Holding Suez And Gibraltar'

BERLIN, March 1—(AP). — Germany is not prepared to discuss peace unless Great Britain's "stranglehold on the economic life of the world" is broken—this is understood to have been the central theme of the first talk today between President Rooseveit's fact-finding emissary and Adolf Hitler's Foreign Minister.

Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop is understood to have told Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State, unless Britain's dominant position is ended Germany refuses to entertain American ideas concerning elimination of autarchy, regimentation and totalitarianism from the post-war economic world.

Men in Von Ribbentrop's confidence developed this idea so strongly to this correspondent that there can be little doubt that Von Ribbentrop himself gave this line of talk to Welles, with whom he conferred soon after the American's arrival this morning.

It is understood the main purpose of Welles' talk with Von Ribbentrop was to prepare the ground for his meeting with Hitler probably tomorrow.

World In Stranglehold.

In developing the thesis that Britain has a stranglehold on the world Von Ribbentrop is believed to have told Welles that so long as Britain holds Gibraltar and the Suez Canal, for example, there is no security for the rest of the world.

Germany, in the Foreign Office view which undoubtedly was communicated to Welles, would rather fight to the bitter end than agree to a compromise.

High Standard Of Men Doing Splendid Job Says General, Munching Sandwich, With Hastings Regiment On Manoeuvres

ALDERSHOT, March 1—(CP Cable).—At the conclusion of a three-day tour of the Canadian training camp here which gave him a close-up view of every phase and detail of individual preparedness and the operations of the troops, General J. W. Wilcox, inspector general of infantry, today left this message of tribute:

"I am exceedingly pleased with the high standard and the progress in training displayed by the Canadians who come directly within the scope of my department. They are doing a splendid job and I take away a feeling that they have the most profound knowledge and solid grasp of the important work they have in hand."

The general's words of praise came after he had inspected Brigadier A. A. Smith's First Brigade, embracing such crack outfits as the Royal Canadian Regiment, the 48th Highlanders of Toronto and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Previously he had visited the two other brigades of infantry and the machine-gun personnel.

Throughout the tour there was no semblance of ceremonial. The Inspector General wanted to see the men in their everyday routine job and that is what he got—right from fatigue duties to full-dress field manoeuvres.

At the camp of the Royal Canadian Regiment, first call on today's program, the General strolled alond the parade grounds as the squads went about the business of Bren-gun drill, raking the "enemy" divisions with feigned bursts of fire.

He stood by while another company listened to a lecture on the theory of small arms and grenades, while a short distance away a platoon was receiving expert instruction in defence against gas and in personal decontamination.

A short motor ride into the countryside brought the Inspector General to the 48th Highlanders settling defensive work, consolidating outposts and bridging streams. Orders barked at intervals as groups of men, whose uniforms were blanded so perfect-

Reds Shelling Viipuri Into Rubble

Mile Off Says Moscow; Fierce Battles Rage Above Troops

By IVES DUGUERNY
(Copyright, 1940, by Havas News Agency.)

HELSINKI, Mar. 1 — (AP). — The Red army's efforts to push across the Bay of Viipuri in an encircling drive an Viipuri itself continued in conjunction with heavy attacks along a line due east of the city, the Finnish high command announced to-day.

The Red army continued its persistent battering of Finland's Mannerheim Line, striking at both extremes under a continual protective barrage from warplanes.

Unusually heavy air activity was reported in the daily communique, covering action yesterday, with "fierce air battles" in which the Finns said they shot down 14 Russian planes and lost four themselves.

(A Red army communique last night an yesterday's action reported the Russians were a little more than a mile from Viipuri and were closing in from the south and east in a "developing" offensive.)

The Finns said their air force carried out several reconnaissance flights "and bombed a certain air base, a traffic junction, and enemy trains."

"Both in the home area and the war zone there were numerous fierce air battles." The Finns said that "several hundred enemy planes were estimated to have flown" over the home area.

"According to information available so far," said the communique, "an aggregate of 14 civilians were killed and 16 wounded." The greatest loss of life was said to have occurred at Savonlinna.

As the Russians approached Viipuri the city was a deserted, bomb-shattered ghost port.

City In Ruins.

VIIPURI, Finland, March 1. — (CP-Havas).—Powerful Soviet forces, constantly being strengthened by fresh troops, drove perilously close to-day to Viipuri, normally the third largest city of Finland, now a mass of ruins.

Under the tremendous pressure of the Soviet drive, which at last reports here has brought the Russians scarcely four miles from Viipuri on the railway line north-east of Kaemaerae, the Finns were falling back in good order to new positions close to the rear fringe of the Mannerheim Line defences.

When this correspondent arrived here yesterday a tremendously heavy cannonading, which had been going on for several days, was turning the ruins of Viipuri and the surrounding villages into a mass of rubble.

The offensive is costing the Soviets heavily in men and material but everything indicates that the Russians refuse to take the cost of the drive into account.

The attack on Viipuri is now near its culmination. The Russians also are driving against the islands in the Gulf of Viipuri, over the ice.

The problem for the Finnish high command is to hold the positions considered the most advantageous. The Finns still can fall back to the natural defences above Viipuri without serious aggravation of the situation.

In the immediate outskirts of Viipuri there is not one village un-

Rumania Swells Her Army By 200,000 Men

BUCHAREST, Mar. 1 — (AP). — Two hundred thousand citizen soldiers answered Rumania's call to the colors to-day, raising her army to 1,600,000 men against a possible broadening of the war in the spring.

A minimum of confusion attended the concentration because the new contingents of sheepskin - coated peasants and drably dressed urbanites had been informed months beforehand of the frontier points where they should report.

At the same time, Rumania announced that "great numbers" of peasants soon may be released from the army for sowing crops. Their places will be taken during one-month leaves by non-agricultural conscripts.

The heaviest concentration of Rumanian strength is along the Russian border where a fortification program has been hurried.

There are, however, no immediate international signs of trouble for the Balkans.

Only last night Premier Refik Saydam of Turkey told his countrymen emphatically that Turkey's relations with Soviet Russia are "normal and good." His broadcast from Ankara was regarded as notice that Turkey would stay out of war unless her security is threatened.

UK Puts Clamps On Italy's Nazi Coal Import

LONDON, March 1.—(CP)—Detention of German coal exports to Italy by the Royal Navy will begin at midnight tonight, it was disclosed authoritatively today.

Sources close to the Ministry of Economic Warfare emphasized, however, that it was "not in any way a reprisal for the temporary difficulties which have arisen in British-Italian commerical and financial talks in Rome."

Several Italian ships now are in Rotterdam, Holland, loading German coal and unless they sail by midnight they will be detained by British naval patrols.

The usual route of German coal exports to Italy is up the Rhine to Rotterdam, thence to Genoa by ship. The seaborne traffic amounts to about 6,000,000 tons a year and between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 tons more move by land.

Circles close to the foreign office and the Ministry of Economic Warfare emphasized that the Italian government had been warned that German coal exports to Italy would be subjected to export control shortly after the order-in-council for the two-way blockade was signed last Nov. 27.

Informed British sources, however, said that interrupted war

Dutch Seeking To Bolster Neutrality By Curbing 'Gift Package' Export

AMSTERDAM, March 1—(AP).—The Netherlands, with her normal life and trade dislocated by war next door, sought today to bolster her neutrality and resources by curbing traffic in "gift" packages of foodstuffs to Germany and elsewhere.

Under regulations going into effect today the Netherlands post office accepted only packages addressed by an individual in the Netherlands to a person in a foreign country. Thus the government barred the sizeable business in foodstuffs which some firms have been doing on orders from the United States for delivery to families in Germany. To a much smaller extent, similar packages have been going to Great Britain.

Without a permit, an individual Netherlander—not a company—may ship food to a maximum of three kilograms (6.6 pounds) but not exceeding one kilogram (2.2 pounds) each of butter, cheese, meat and condensed milk and 250 grams (between eight and nine ounces) each of coffee and chocolate.

Heretofore it has been possible for an individual to send five kilograms (11 pounds) of butter and cheese each week.

For all the increasing strain both the people and the governments of the Netherlands and Belgium exhibit calm faith that they will escape direct entanglement in the conflict.

Pressure Grows.

To the low countries six months of war has brought growing pressure from the belligerents, mobilization of manpower, huge expenditures for defence, recurring periods of uneasiness over reported threats of German invasion, sinking of ships by German submarines and mines with casualties, increased living costs, numerous violations of neutrality by belligerent planes and dislocation of trade by blockade.

The most recent concern of the low countries was evoked by information of German military activity along Germany's western neutral border, including troop movements, construction of new barracks and continued strengthening of frontier positions.

In Berlin yesterday authorities claimed the reports grew out of "land amelioration" work by labor corps and that no new fortification work is under way.

While the Netherlands and Belgian governments rely on the promises of Adolf Hitler to respect their territorial integrity the defences of the two countries including inundation lines are built to resist any invasion aimed at turning the flanks of the Maginot Line or the seizing of North Sea ports.

See Nazi Attacks An Attempt To Bleed Britain

LONDON, March 1 (CP)—German air attacks on shipping "apparently are part of a long-term attempt to bleed Britain," an authoritative British aviation source declared today as the half-year point was reached in the war.

"The essence of the German plan," said this aviation authority, "seems to be to strike at Britain in a way in which Germany cannot well be struck in return and to refrain from measures which would invite immediate and overwhelming counter-attack."

German hopes for success of such a program may be dispelled, however, he said, in recalling that last month Lord Chatfield, minister for defence coordination, declared British air power would be brought into play at the right moment.

Failure of Germany to launch mass attacks which Great Britain expected during the first weeks of the war was bolstered confidence in the nation's anti-aircraft defence and has permitted expansion of the Royal Air Force without the disturbance of major fighting.

"The Allies' growing air ascendancy is backed by the Great Dominion air training scheme now getting into stride, chiefly in Canada," said the aviation source, re-

3 Quebec Fliers Found Dead In N. Labrador

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., March 1 (CP) —Word received in St. John's today from Hopedale in northern Labrador said the bodies of three Quebec Province men missing since last September had been found near there. The three were on an airplane flight in the Labrador area.

In the party were pilot Joseph Fecteau of Montreal, G. H. Davidson of Montreal and J. C. Cote of Three Rivers, Que. They were reported missing Sept. 12 last.

No details of the finding of the bodies was available immediately.

Hopedale is about midway between Hudson Strait and the Strait of Belle Isle. The inland area is heavily wooded.

Her Own Destiny

BOMBAY, India, March 1 (CP)— The working committee of the All-India Congress Party, meeting at Patna, adopted a resolution today stating that India must shape her own destiny.

"Indian freedom cannot exist within the orbit of British Imperialism," the resolution stated, "and Dominion status or any other status within the imperial structure is wholly inapplicable to India."

France Decrees 3 Dry Days A Week Shuts Pastry Shops Half Time

PARIS, March 1—(AP).—Three "prohibition days" a week were decreed today as the Government announced details of its wartime program for civilians.

Among 17 decrees published in the official Journal were these:—

Public sale and consumption of alcoholic drinks to be forbidden on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Pastry shops to be closed Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Friday.

A general census as a prelude to the issuance of ration cards to be completed by April 1.

Ministries were authorized to issue notices later of products, sale of which will be restricted. First commodity to be rationed is expected to be bread.

The decrees are part of the general belt-tightening program announced yesterday which included a gold revaluation bookkeeping operation that put a 2 2per cent higher value on France's gold supply and provided nearly half of a 50,000,000,-000 franc (about $1,226,250,000) addition to her war funds.

Other decrees suppressed the sale of luxury chocolate and breads, ordered prices maintained at the level of September 1, 1939, provided for rationing of gasoline on a monthly basis, ordered restaurants to limit meals to two plates of which only one can be meat.

A Gold Shift

Revaluing the gold reserve at the rate of 43.8 francs to the United States dollar, instead of the old 35.8, brought the official value more nearly into line with current exchange quotations.

(Parity of the franc as of Nov. 12, 1938, when it was devalued, was approximately 2.65 United States cents, but foreign exchange yesterday quoted it at about 2.23 cents.

(The franc was quoted at 2.47¼ cents Thursday in terms of Canadian currency, or about 40.4 francs to the dollar.)

Finance minister Paul Reynaud said the old rate was "below the real value of the gold" held by the bank of France.

A decree published today in the official Journal—which makes it law—tells how Reynaud and the Governor of the Bank of France worked out the 50,000,000,000-franc transaction:—

The bank agreed to lend the State 20,000,000,000 francs in currency, taking as security non-interest-bearing bonds renewable every three months until the loan is repaid. This involves no gold because it will be paid in paper money.

The bank also agreed to lend the

Manion Promises New Livestock Board And Probe Of Relations With Packers

TORONTO, March 1.—(CP).—Conservative Leader Manion will set up a livestock board to regulate and control the industry if he is elected to power in the March 26 general election, he said in a statement issued here today.

Dr. Manion's statement:

"All over Canada, I get complaints from livestock men and particularly from hog raisers, that they are being unfairly dealt with in favor of the packers.

"This is a complicated question on which I naturally am not an authority, but I am very much impressed with these complaints which are far too widespread to be ignored.

"Therefore, I am determined that immediately after the election, I shall have a fair and very complete investigation made into the whole livestock industry and its relations to the packers.

"If injustices are found as claimed, they will be rectified at once. In addition, I intend setting up a livestock board, on which the government and the packers will be represented, but on which the livestock men will predominate. This board will regulate and control the industry."

Poles Expect 4 Million To Be Shifted From Homes To New "Polish Area"

WASHINGTON, March 1—(AP) —"Poland will live again!"

Inspired by that stirring phrase from their national anthem, Poles who escaped the German-Russian invasion of their homeland are planning the rebirth of the Polish republic—after the war—from their exile capital, Angers, France.

That same phrase, says Count Jerzy Potocki, the Polish Ambassador to the United States is singing in the hearts of 35,000,000 Poles living under their conquerors' rule in their homeland. The Allies plan to reconstitute Poland as a nation.

The Germans have annexed about one fourth of Poland to the Reich. A German victory in the war would mean the only Poland of the future would be a "puppet' state composed roughly of one fourth of its former area and a population of 12,000,000. Russia has seized slightly more than one half and is incorporating it into the Soviet Union.

The proposed "puppet state," now tailed the "general government" is ruled by Dr. Hans Frank as Governor General.

Establishment of public order in the German-occupied areas provided a bloody chapter in Poland's history.

Polish sources claim that 188,000 Poles were executed.

The "Sicherheitspolitzei," uniformed police drawn from the Gestapo (German secret police) who were assigned to "mop up" in the wake of the German army, admit executions — without specifying the number—on charges of Polish sniping and the murder of 5,000 German residents of the areas before the German army marched in.

Large-scale transport of Poles and Jews from the areas annexed by Germany into the "general government" area still is in progress.

German reports are that approximately 1,000,000 Poles and 500,000 Jews are to be transported to "their birthplaces" in areas outside the German Reich.

Polish sources contend that more than 4,000,000 are to be deported from their homes and huddled into the "Polish area."

The territory of the "general government" is treated as foreign territory as far as customs, communications, finance and currency questions are concerned.

The railways, postal service and banks are German-named and German-administered.

On assuming authority, Frank instituted control of commodity prices, rationing of foodstuffs, compulsory, although paid, labor to restore communications and clean up debris,

Premier, Cohorts Warn Of War Horrors In Spring

(By the Canadian Press.)

Ominous predictions that the real horrors of war will break this spring and happier references to such things as the visit of the King and Queen last spring provide sharp contracts in subjects discussed before the voters in the current Dominion election campaign.

Through the speeches of several Cabinet Ministers recently has run a thread of warning that the conflict soon will break in all its fury and last night Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Transport Minister Howe again mentioned it as a probability.

At Prince Albert, Sask., where he was nominated again as Liberal candidate, the Prime Minister said the spring will bring an offensive on a scale "to make us suffer such agony of spirit as we have never known." Mr. Howe said in a London, Ont., address that Canadians will know

Afterwards he was invested by the King.

As soon as the lieutenant had removed the detonator all four experts on mines crowded round in the belief it was perfectly harmless. They prodded this part, hammered that, and removed a third.

Finally one of them found a second detonator and only then it was discovered what a narrow escape they all had—the first detonator to be removed was the contact detonator and the one still in the mine was the one controlling the magnetic mechanism. It was removed without further delay or harm.

On his way to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Operations General Wilcox halted briefly by the roadside to chat with Major H. F. Seymour of Montreal, whose Fourth Field Company of Engineers was "digging in" and putting finishing touches to yawning tank traps.

Dishing out rations from huge dixies were Private James Young of Madoc and Stanley Dalnard of Stirling, Ont.

State 30,000,000,000 francs in gold against three-month treasury bonds bearing ordinary interest.

The gold reserve of 97,273,000,000 francs was raised in value 21,400,000,000 francs, however. Thus only 8,600,000,000 francs of the 30,000,000,000-franc loan actually comes out of the newly-valued gold stocks.

Some Secret Funds

The loan will be put in the exchange stabilization fund, Reynaud said in announcing measures last night. In addition, he said, "a fraction of our war chest" of bank of France gold will be put aside as a secret fund to finance purchases from abroad.

About 400,000 men will be sent to the farms, through the assignment of farmers of the military classes of 1912 to 1918, inclusive, and Polish and Czech refugees.

New decrees also provide for coarsening of bread with bean meal, closing of cake and pastry shops, three days a week, placing of women in munition plants, abolition of customs duties on farm machinery, government distribution of fertilizer, and easier taxes for landlords who are losing rents because of the war.

Welles Arrives In Berlin To See Hitler

BERLIN, March 1 (AP)—Sumner Welles, United States under-secretary of state, went to the foreign office within a few hours of his arrival here today for conversations with foreign minister Von Ribbentrop.

It was believed that Welles, here on a fact-finding mission for president Roosevelt, would see Adolf Hitler tomorrow.

Welles, who opened his tour of European capitals by visiting premier Mussolini of Italy, was accompanied to the foreign office by Alexander Kirk, counsellor of the United States embassy, after air raid sirens had shrieked an unintentional martial note to his greeting in Berlin. (In London it was announced Royal Air Force planes had penetrated Germany to Berlin during the night.)

Enlarging Railway

Aside from the calling of the 200,000 new soldiers, these are Rumania's latest preparedness steps:

Issuance of a decree for an immediate $16,000,000 enlargement of the railway system for "strategic and industrial purposes."

An appeal through brightly colored posters for further contributions to the army loan of 20,000,000,000 lei ($126,000,000) which now is more than half subscribed.

Enlargement of the air force to nearly 1,000 planes with the delivery of 60 bombing and pursuit planes made in Great Britain.

Long lines of tank cars containing aviation gasoline are stationed on sidings in Transylvania and other areas of Rumania where airdromes lack storage facilities. Rumania's ban on exports of aviation fuel and lubricants — a measure which strikes Germany heavily—was finally published officially yesterday.

Rumania is purchasing arms from both sides in the war. While British shipyards are reported completing three torpedo boats for her, Germany is delivering heavy artillery from the Skoda works.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be soured at once. For this purpose get from McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Stores or any druggist a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost —(Advt.)

Britisher Donat Hollywood's Man Of The Year

HOLLYWOOD, March 1.—(AP)—Robert Donat, talented British star, is Hollywood's man of the year.

But for Mr. Donat, who turned in a magnificent performance in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," the current sensation, "Gone With the Wind," would have swept the field last night in the motion picture Academy of Arts and Sciences' 11th annual selection of premier film accomplishments.

"G.W.T.W." did all right, anyway. It took eight of 16 possible awards, including those for the best production.

Only Mr. Donat, among the principal contestants, survived the big gale. He edged out Clark Gable as the outstanding actor. The industry—from producer to obscure electrician—named him for his masterful portrayal of 50 years in an English schoolmaster's life. Donat at present is in England.

Vivien Leigh made the top acting awards a sweep for England. The British girl, who came here almost unknown and skyrocketed to stardom as the fiery southern Scarlett O'Hara, was on hand to accept her "Oscar," as film folk refer to the gold statuettes.

Director Honored

Victor Fleming, whose direction of the film brought him top honors in that class, was ill with influenza. But smiling proudly was Producer David O. Selznick, who made Margaret Mitchell's novel of the Civil War into a picture, as he took the Irving Thalberg Memorial award for "the most consistent high quality of production achievement by an individual producer."

Hattie McDaniel, memorable "Mammy" in "Wind," captured the prize as the best supporting actress and became the first Negro ever to be honored by the Academy. Other awards given those connected with the production included:

The late Sidney Howard for the screen play; Lyle Wheeler for the art direction; Hal Kern and James Newcom for the editing, Ernest Haller for the color and William Cameron Menzies for special color effects.

Want To Have Hall Used For Dancing

HASTINGS, March 1.—(ENS). — When council convenes here Friday night a delegation of two representatives from every society and club in Hastings is expected to wait on council in an effort to have the town hall put in shape for dancing and to have its interior redecorated. More than a month ago, the proposed move was talked of but nothing came of it. The Examiner was assured that the move is supported by a goodly number of local societies and clubs and that a large delegation should be present at Friday night's session to impress council of the need of repairing the hall.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, March 2.

Despite the menace of trickery, duplicity and subtle pitfalls, this should be a day of very definite progress and great personal happiness. A determined effort to succeed by hard work, perseverance and sound principles will be crowned with prosperity, stabilized fortunes and the recognition of elders and superiors. But be wary, discreet and sagacious every step of the way, as treachery menaces. Much personal happiness also obtains.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which there may be very decisive steps in the direction of putting the affairs on firm foundations through industry, sound initiative and practical principles. This will give much stability to the fortunes, increase the possessions and gain the attention of superiors. But in all be alert to deception and fraud, and discreet in all particulars. Sign papers cautiously.

A child born on this day may be industrious, responsible, deep, and shrewd. It may have high principle and sound character. Practical, capable and earnest, it should make a fine success of its life. Social and affectional qualities should not be missing.

Tribute Is Paid Al Sharpe By Kiwanis Club

The Peterborough Kiwanis Club today paid tribute to the memory of Al Sharpe, president of the club in 1937, who died unexpectedly on Wednesday night.

J. L. Pettit, also a past president, spoke in glowing terms of Al Sharpe's service to Kiwanis and to his city. Loyalty, he said, had been the keynote of his life and was evinced by his service in the Great War, his leadership in Kiwanis, and his devotion to home and business. "He possessed much more than does the average man, that fidelity to this association that we call Kiwanis spirit," he declared. He referred to his term as president of the club and to the work accomplished at that time. "We are all oppressed by his loss. The people of Peterborough are feeling keenly the fact that Al is with us no more," he said.

King Afraid To Face Parliament Denton Massey Charges At Bone Rally In Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, March 1. — (ENS)—That Mackenzie King had dissolved Parliament "because he didn't have guts enough to face it" was the charge levelled against the leader of the Liberal government by Denton Massey who was principal speaker at a meeting held here in the interest of Jamieson Bone, National Conservative candidate for Northumberland.

Referring to Mr. Bone as a blunt spoken Scotsman, Mr. Massey commended him to the electors of Northumberland as a man who was not afraid to say what he thought. He lashed out at the King administration condemning what he called "a government of inaction" and claimed Mackenzie King was "a political cork screw who could wiggle himself out of the most embarrasing situations". Canada needs statesmen whose interests are with Canada rather than with the fortunes of a political party. Urging the people to accept a National Government Mr. Massey declared that what Canada needs in times like these is a "government with no political strings and free from obligations."

"These are days that are pretty serious and during my travels in the present campaign I have been deeply impressed by the size and type of audience which has been present and only proves that the people are taking a greater interest in the affairs of this nation than ever before. Remember to vote in the best interests of Canada on March 26th," he warned.

Want Soldiers Equipped

Condemning pacifism, Mr. Massey said that what was wanted was aggression and not lethargy in our war effort. "You want your soldiers equipped with the very best there is and I'm not thinking of the army, the navy and the air force but rather of the soldier, the sailor and the aviator as human beings and individuals who deserve the best and are not getting it and have not been getting it. In the last war many men went overseas who had never seen a machine gun and now there must be thousands to every regiment. When you hear supporters telling of the King government's war effort, don't listen to them, ask the soldier, he's the one who really knows. Why must we have such secrecy and censorship today if everything is as fine as Mr. King and Mr. Rogers says it is? Why should it be kept secret? Why can't I stand on a public platform and tell the facts? It's because if they were made known they would bring comfort and succour to the enemy", said Mr. Massey.

Of the dissolution of Parliament on January 25th, the speaker declared it was actually funny. "Yes," said Mr. Massey, "it was funny to someone with a perverted sense of humour. Here were your representatives from every section of Canada assembled for a session of Parliament, some of them coming for thousands of miles only to be told after assembly that it had been called off. Mr. King had told Mr. Manion there was to be another session of Parliament before dissolution but he ordered its dissolution following the resolution by the government of the "naughty Mr. Hepburn." This was not only an insult to the electoral representatives of the people but to the entire Dominion of Canada. Mr. Massey declared that though he had a great respect for the province of Ontario it was no more important than the rest of Canada and therefore the Federal Government should not have been dissolved merely on Hepburn's and Drew's say so. The real reason why Mr. King ordered Parliament dissolved was that he didn't dare to face it."

Returning to the "unusual procedure" involved in the dissolution of Parliament Mr. Massey declared Mr. King has resorted to a trick in an effort to shut off debate by the leader of the Opposition after he (King) had delivered an hour's carefully worded speech. He criticized the statement of Minister of Defence Rogers who claimed the reason Canada was not prepared for war when war broke out was that had the money been spent for defence and there had been no war the money would have been wasted. "This is just as sensible as to say that if we spend money for war now and it is over in the summer it will have been wasted." Parliament voted 188 million for defense. "We spent one-half of what we voted. Where was it spent? or was it spent at all? The least we can expect is the truth from the public platford and I take serious exception when statements are made regarding the air training scheme that are not in accordance with the facts."

Fraser's Waterloo.

In his address Mr. Bone, the candidate who was introduced by Mayor F. F. Long declared that though Bill Fraser might be the Napoleon of Northumberland, Bonaparte had met his Waterloo and so would Fraser.

"Bill referred to me as a foreigner and I'm surprised that a man with a Scotch name like Fraser should descend so far. Up to now he has only a wishbone; this time he is going to meet backbone. Money will not buy his way into Heaven or parliament.

"Mr. Ralston sanctimoniously asks everyone to 'save and eschew waste in every form so money will be available for war purposes," but after the war broke out—since last September—purely with this election in view, they have frittered away millions of dollars of the people's money in useless and unnecessary pork barrel public works. I have a list in front of me nearly a yard long, including the Tweed post office which was refused. This is pure sabotage and by the same government of this country which now asks a further four years' trial.

"I say advisedly that the King government was the most useless, the most extravagant, the most inefficient and most crooked in the history of Canada. The record of Ian Mackenzie could not be excelled outside of China. No schoolboy, and indeed no other idiot could have beaten Ian Mackenzie in pure stupidity, recklessness and improvidence. Premier King condoned all this money business and he and his wooden cabinet should be relegated from now on."

Braund Rink Wins The Neill Trophy With 42 Rinks Entered In Big 'Spiel

John Braund wins again!

The club slogan of "Hook up with Braund and get in on the prize list" still prevails. On Wednesday night after being down 9-2 at the half way mark, "J. T." gathered his forces together in the northeast corner of the rink, gave them a heart to heart pep talk and then went on to score the last six ends and win out over N. Hawley's quartette by the score 12-9—and by so doing earned the right for the rink to hold the Neill Trophy for one year. This is the second major bonspiel that "J.T." has won within two weeks. The last one being the Canada Packers Trophy on Feb. 16th.

The game started off with Norm's boys taking the lead, and they held it up till the sixth end. About that time Braund's hired help began to find their legs and kept on plugging away till they finally tied the score and from then on they led the way home by three shots. It was a well played game and was enjoyed by a capacity crowd.

Vice President T. A. Mackay introduced C. Blewett who on behalf of The Robert Neill Co. presented the Neill Trophy to J. T. Braund's rink. He paid tribute to the committee who had worked so hard in putting over this the biggest 'spiel in the 21 years' history of the trophy.

The finals in the consolation was played last night and G. Green, oldest of the famous "Green Bros." skipped his rink to victory over W. A. Pratten by the score of 18-12. In presenting these prizes, President G. D. Carlisle complimented the boys on coming through after such a heavy grind.

Behind the Glass

It was the biggest entry ever in the history of The Neill Trophy, 42 rinks competing.

There were 41 games played in the main event and 40 in the second event and only one default.

Lakefield did well, with nine rinks entered.

It was sure good to see Bob Edmond's, Millbrook and Jimmy Redpath of Lakefield competing. These two youngsters have been coming to Peterborough to curl for years and years and years.

The competition started Monday, Feb. 19 and finished last night. It took exactly eight nights play.

There were 16 games won by the margin of one point and two extra end games played during the series.

The draw was in the hands of the schedule committee supported by Sect H. F. Foote and they made a real job of it.

Cobourg Team Beaten 6 to 4

CAMPBELLFORD, March 1 — (ENS)—Campbellford Juveniles took the first of their home and home series with Cobourg by a 6 to 4 score here last night by showing a superior combination play and back-checking technique than the winners of the Cobourg Church League. Though both teams got a bye into the O.J.H.A., playdowns the visiting squad has been organized since early in the season while the locals have only recently been whipped into shape by their manager, Owen Hendy.

Despite the fact that the affair looked like a one-man show so far as the winners were concerned as Joe Kelly registered the entire six tallies, Dunk and Milne also looked good for the homesters while Farrell played stand-out hockey as well. The home squad will now take a two-goal lead into their return match in Cobourg next Thursday. The contest was fairly clean, with only five penalties being awarded, Farrell and Boundy providing the single incident of the evening when they began exchanging punches early in the first frame. During the first two stanzas play was somewhat draggy, the locals having the edge on the play when their first string of Farrell-Kelly and Dunk was on the ice. Not until the final stanza did the visitors really threaten Donald by raining in on the Campbellford net and though he stopped a couple of hard ones from Cullen, the starry Cobourg forward managed to slap one home on a pass from Parkinson at the 18-minute mark.

With this issue, Assistant Editor No. 4998 takes over the helm to put forth his views and news on the club championship events held last week-end at Nassau and Bethany or shall we say "The Sun Valley of Ontario."

The junior and student events which were run off were a howling success and any club that can have five entries in the junior girls' cross country race is certainly going places. It looks of if, in the very near future we will have a great many competitive skiers. This is largely due to the work of Lahring Parsons and Bob White.

The senior jumping was at its usual high standard and a vote of thanks is given Ott Laderach and his hard-working snow heavers, who worked Friday night and Saturday morning in order to get both jumps in shape and to set the cross country courses.

The senior downhill and slalom events, held at Bethany on Sunday, were the best yet, and Toby Westbye receives our whole-hearted congratulations for having won the combined event in spite of being handicapped with the wind resistance of his up-standing hair. This proves that anyone who really goes out with his or her mind made up to ski can get places.

And in handing out the "thankyous" we must not forget our untiring and enthusiastic president, Red Eastwood, who, with the cooperation of his assistants and all Wilson and Jack Martin of Toronto, conducted eight events in two days without a hitch, and, when you figure that there were about seventy-five competitors all told, this was a big job which was handled in a big way.

Winners of all events over the week-end were listed in The Examiner on Monday evening so we will not repeat here. However, after next week we will try to get a condensed list of winner in all events for the year to be mailed out with the Telemarker.

Senior Cross Country and Class "C" and "D" will be run this week-end at eBthany. Cross country Sunday morning and downhill in the afternoon.

Since this writer is not familiar with the Better Names Contest, we can't give you any news on this just now. However, seems like the name "The Sun Valley on Ontario" is very appropriate and our guess is that it will stick along with "The Bethany Alps.

We noticed Mr. Fred Roy at Bethany on Sunday taking numerous shots both in motion and "stills." Mr. Roy must have some wonderful action pictures there of the downhill and slalom races and we certainly hope the executive will see to it that these are shown at the annual club banquet in March.

Bethany is in full swing on Wednesdays now, with the tow in operation. Won't be many more, so let's get in there now.—Assistant Ed. No. 4998.

Don Pinch Wins Swimming Shield

Last night, after counting up the points awarded during the months of January and February at the Junior Y.M.C.A. Swimming Club training periods, Donald Pinch, lanky East City swimmer, was presented with an elaborate shield recently acquired by the Junior Club for monthly competition amongst its members.

A point system was drawn up taking into consideration attendance, improvement and competition and at the end of each month the member with the most points is allowed to hold the shield for the following month.

In winning the award, Pinch not only gathered the high total of 27 points but led in attendance with 17 out of 18 nights. His nearest rival was Gordon Wallace with 24 points and who was outstanding in being the only one to win two events during the month. Warren Marshall was third with 21 points.

Gordon Minty, "Y" swimming coach, is very anxious to hear the past history of the shield which was found among several old trophies and is dated 1908. It is about fifteen inches high with a black wood base and a heavy bronze plate with maple leaves around the edges and a bronze swimmer in the centre. If there are any old-time swimmers who know anything about the trophy, get in touch with Gord Minty as soon as possible.

Checker Champion

Alton, Ont., March 1 (CP)

ANGUS CRAWFORD of this Peel County village is worthy holder of the Canadian checkers championship.

At the annual tournament of the Alton Checker Club yesterday, Crawford played 12 opponents at the same time. He won 11 of the games and drew one. Later he played two games at the same time without seeing either board. He called off the moves by numbers and won one game and drew the other.

Montreal's Ace Holds Crown In Cross Country

BANFF, Alta., March 1 (CP)—Gault Gillespie of St. Margaret's Ski club, Montreal, Thursday defended his Dominion cross country Ski championship at the 1940 tournament here when he negotiated the 11-mile course in one hour, 41 minutes and 11 seconds to nose out Viateur Cousineau of St. Margaret's.

Gillespie triumphed over Cousineau with a margin of two minutes and 6 seconds and was five minutes and 44 seconds in front of the third finisher, E. Ellingrud of Hollyburn club, Vancouver.

Every variety of ski travelling was necessary over the sticky and cloggy course that softened following a Chinook wind.

Alf Brenner of Toronto, Hans Gunnarson of Revelstoke and Ted Zinkan of Kenora, Ont. failed to enter the event, opening competition of the four-day meet.

Don Montgomery of Temiskaming, Ont. dropped out at the end of the first lap, as the strong west wind and the low drifting snow made the task an arduous one.

Remember When—

A scant 10,000 fans watched 270-pound heavyweight boxing champion Primo Carnera, win a 15-round decision over Tommy Loughran at Los Angeles six years ago tonight. The giant Italian was pushed off his throne three months later by Max Baer, and never really threatened again. Worn out, he now lives in Italy.

Mr. Hepburn Says "No"

Ontario Tobacco Growers' Association wants the provincial government to control acreage, but Premier Hepburn is against it. The growers also want the Dominion Government to see what help can be given to marketing a surplus of 17,000,000 pounds.

We seem to be developing a habit of taking everything to the government when things do not go right. It is not at all likely that tobacco farmers consulted with the government when they were adding to their acreage in the southwestern part of the province. They appeared to go ahead on the understanding that all they had to do was grow more and they would be able to sell it all.

It may be hard enough for the growers to work themselves out of the situation into which they have taken themselves, but we believe that is what should be done. It is hardly possible that people can continually keep success to themselves and then ask the government to use public funds to share their distress.

It Seems Absurd

Possibly it is no concern of ours what candidates run in the Alberta provincial contest on the 21st, but when one man gets a nomination as an anti-war candidate the thing becomes of general interest.

This one man is Gus Maki in Rocky Mountain riding, and he is described as a Finnish-born farmer, running under the auspices of the Farmer-Labor nomination, and all we are told of him is that he is on an anti-war platform.

What a candidate for a provincial election has to do with the war is something we do not know, unless this man in Alberta has been reading of the war criticism in the Ontario Legislature and has come to the conclusion that provincial legislatures run everything.

Or it may be he has reason to believe there is anti-war sentiment in his riding and he has decided to make use of it to speed his efforts. But looked at from any direction the idea seems not far removed from being absurd.

Dropping a Good Name

Campaign material is being sent out now from the "National Government Dominion Publicity Headquarters," and there has been comment regarding the name "Conservative" having been dropped. There are a large number of candidates across the country who were nominated as Conservatives, and there has been no convention which has called for the elimination of the word "Conservative." We take it that Dr. Manion has considered it the proper thing to do.

Certainly no person should feel called upon to withdraw the name "Conservative," or to apologize for it. It has produced some great prime ministers and some splendid statesmen in the history of this country, and a Conservative government would be just as capable of carrying on at Ottawa as would a National government.

The Brantford Expositor, a paper of independent thought, does not believe it was politically wise at this late hour to obliterate the name "Conservative." The Expositor continues:

> "Both those staunchly Conservative and those as staunchly un-Conservative,, will be perplexed and annoyed by the move. And those who have been consistent in their advocacy of a government that would be National in more than name only, a National Government including—but not erasing—Conservatives and Liberals, will, with full justification, demand to know by what right Dr. Manion appropriates that title."

The Hamilton Spectator, a newspaper with Conservative leanings, is convinced that when Prime Minister King made it plain that he was not going to have anything to do with the formation of a coalition government, Dr. Manion should have accepted that as the standard of battle. Mr. King made it clear it was going to be a straight party fight, and the Spectator believes Dr. Manion "standing for what the Conservative party has stood for so splendidly in the past, should fight the election on the lines laid down by the party in power." The Hamilton paper believes the people know and respect the Conservative party, but they do not know the National party. For that reason it is considered to be a tactical error to have abandoned the "Conservative" part of the name on the eve of an election.

Why Investigate

City Council of Kitchener included $1,000 in the year's estimates for an investigation into affairs of the police department. The alderman who brought the matter up last year is now mayor. The feeling expressed at the meeting was that all the publicity of last year had done the community no good, and Ald. Gordon, who was mayor last year, was certain it would be worth $1,000,000 to have the situation cleaned up.

The view expressed by Mayor Meinzinger was that by the time the investigation was completed there would be few members of the present police department left on the force because "It's rotten from the top down."

So a small deputation will interview the Attorney-General to see if plans can be made to inaugurate a full investigation of the police department. One would be right in assuming that as far as the Mayor is concerned the investigation is going to be useless because he has already pronounced his own verdict.

A Silly Request

Mae Murray, former screen actress, is suing her former husband, Prince David Mdivani, and is asking $1,000 per month for the support of their son, now in his late 'teens.

We doubt if there is general interest here in the case, and to most readers it will be just another movie tribe squabble. Nor is it possible to grow too tender when the actress asserts that after they were married she had to support her husband.

But it does seem out of line with everything that most people know and experience to be suing for $1,000 per month to support a young man who is getting toward the point where he ought to be doing something about supporting himself and looking after his mother.

Possibly the moving picture world knows nothing about that rather old and yet wholesome method. But $1,000 a month for a young man! It's one sure way to spoil him.

He Had a $400 House

From Gananoque comes the report of a family being cut off relief on an order by a provincial inspector. In the family are husband wife and three children, the youngest being a baby of four months. When investigation was made it is stated the baby had for 24 hours been given nothing but water, and other members of the family had only some bread.

The reason for striking the family off the relief list was because the man owned a house worth $400 which he had built himself. He is a plumber by trade and unemployed for some time. The local authorities had accepted the family as eligible for relief, but when the provincial inspector came he said the province would make no contribution to relief for the family and the town would have to assume responsibility. It is claimed the $400 house was the point at issue.

The whole thing seems to hinge on whether the local officials or the provincial inspector was right. The province has its own inspectors, and that is right enough because the province is contributing to the expense of relief, but as a rule we would prefer to accept the opinion of the municipal authorities. In nearly every community where relief has been recognized and organized for some years there is in existence a rather honest form of inspection. Local investigators know the circumstances in which their people have been placed; they know too all efforts which such people have made to try and do something for themselves. In the case at Gananoque they would know all about the unemployed plumber and the manner in which he had erected a small home for himself and his family.

A provincial inspector would not in his own right know of these details. All he would see would be that the man owned a house and therefore was not eligible for relief. Just how the ownership of a house can put food and provision in the house while the husband is unemployed is rather difficult to understand. Cutting a family off relief in the middle of a hard winter only makes matters worse.

Why So Much Speed?

There was something reported in the papers about some Indians who had a matched race, the purpose being to find which team could the more rapidly drive a crosscut saw through a 21-inch beech log. Perhaps 21 inches does not sound like a long distance when you say it but when you negotiate that stretch on one end of a cross-cut saw the distance is actually very great.

All this has been taking place on Walpole Island, and we learn the winning team made the cut in 73 3-5 seconds while the second team of contestants were but one-fifth of a second behind.

On Lot 4, Concession Ten, there was a cross-cut saw and also a bucksaw, but we can recall of no time when there was a great burst of speed, or when seconds were made to appear fractionally important. It was in the winter that the cross-cut saw found opportunity to earn its board and keep for the rest of the season. There were no timekeepers back in the bush. We went back there soon after the chores had been completed and the morning housekeeping had been attended to for the horses and cows, and the only thought of time was the one which suggested that it would be unwise to miss the noon-hour signal for partaking of sustaining victuals.

Just how long it would have taken to cut through a 21-inch beech log we have not the remotest idea, but it would have been far in excess of 73 seconds. Tut, tut—it would take that long to get a good place to stand and get set to start, or if the log was low it would take quite a bit longer to find a comfortable place to kneel. If the dog happened to stir up a couple of rabbits it was all right to go and see how things were going in the chase. We knew the rabbits would get away but it was all right to go and have a look.

There's something about racing through a beech log in 75 seconds of which we can't approve, not even if there's a prize at the other end. It establishes the fact—and in the presence of witnesses—that it can actually be done in remarkably short order. It makes it difficult after that to use the cross-cut with any degree of comfort because that miserable standard has been set. We're mildly thankful that they never introduced any of those speed contests along the Tenth. Getting out a bit of wood was rather a comfortable sort of job and no one complained when you took time out to straighten up the spine.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Hair dressers in Toronto were told the boyish bob was likely to come back again and a good many ladies will be feeling rather cut up over it.

Hon. Norman Rogers says Dr. Manion is hurting himself and his cause by making reckless statements. But surely Mr. Rogers is not inclined to sit up nights worrying about that.

In New York state fishermen over 70 years of age can have all the fish they need without having to purchase a fishing license—that is if they can catch them.

Alex. Graham of Bruce county is 93, but he has had but 23 birthdays. But when the folk did give him a birthday present they should have been able to make it a whopper.

They have arrested a farmer and charged him with bank robbery near St. Thomas. Surely farmers have trouble enough now without going into that sort of business.

A merchant in London refused to sell a customer potatoes unless he also placed an order for groceries. He was fined £5, the customer having happened to be a food inspector.

Prime Minister King in one of his addresses said that it was clearly the aim of Dr. Manion to try and defeat the Government. You know, we'd been thinking the very same thing ourselves.

Kitchener Record notes that the dial system is being placed in Kitchener and Waterloo, twin cities, and concludes that when it is finished the people will be able to carry on dialogues. If we'd been as smart as the fellow in Kitchener we'd have thought of that wise crack when they were putting the dial phones in here some months ago.

A. L. Thompson will be the candidate for Kent Liberals. He was nominated last August, received an acclamation in a by-election on December 18 and was actually in the House for four hours on the day an election was announced. Apparently he liked what he saw for he is prepared to make another bid for the seat which he had to leave before he had it well warmed.

PUNCTUAL

¶ Aunt Phoebe's a wonder in a way, she does her housework every day; she's early to begin; she hits a fairly steady pace, and nothing's ever out of place, just like a new-made pin.

¶ Each day is laid out like a chart, with resting spells quite far apart, seems busy all the time; I've often told her she should quit, and for a time should rest and sit, and rest her bones and spine.

¶ But Monday is her major day, she gets the family wash away, she's up before the sun; she has to get it on the line, and put it there right sharp at nine, 'fore neighbors have begun.

¶ There is one neighbor two doors off, at her Aunt Phoebe's inclined to scoff, she forecasts trouble soon; she knows she throws away her time, her washing's never on the line, until it's nearly noon.

¶ I know the lady fairly well, and think that she is rather swell, her home is always neat; her husband's happy as can be, in fact he often walks with me, when I come down the street.

¶ But Aunt Phoebe has no use for her, toward her place she would not stir, I know that's safe to state; Aunt Phoebe has judged her long ago, by one lone standard that she'll know—her washing comes out late.

War May Reach The Near East As Spring Comes

ACROSS the brackish water of the Black Sea, down the Dardanelles and over the islands of the Aegean Sea, there swept a series of violent storms last week. Boats huddled in the little Balkan ports, snow clogged roads, and 50-mile-an-hour gales tore down telephone and telegraph lines. For one day Turkey was cut off from all communication with the outside world. Immediately, from other Balkan capitals, came reports that the government had proclaimed a state of emergency, preliminary step to a declaration of war, and that there had been clashes on the Soviet frontier in the Caucasian mountains.

By the next day communications with Ankara were restored and the "border clash" turned out to be an unintentional frontier violation by Soviet troops, who surrendered their arms peaceably. The Turks later returned the arms, and both countries withdrew their soldiers to less provocative distances from the frontier. Nor had the Turkish Government declared a state of emergency. But it was busy preparing, militarily and economically, and Istanbul newspapers candidly predicted that the war would reach the Near East by spring.

Ever since the arrival of the new Anzac expeditionary force at Suez on Feb. 12 Turkey has been preparing with increasing speed. Last week the Supreme War Council met in a session that was to last for one week. It had two tasks: one to arrange for closer co-operation between Turkey and the Anglo-French armies in the Near East; the other to mobilize Turkish industry under a War Defense Act passed by Parliament last month.

The Turkish press also continued to attack Russia because of the invasion of Finland, and to declare that any encroachment into the Balkans would bring immediate Turkish intervention. These warnings coincided with reports of blackouts in Russia's vital oil center of Baku, and of a Turkish military mission to Rumania.

FOR RUMANIA such promises of aid would ordinarily be good news. But last week that country was in one of the tightest spots of any neutral since the opening of the war. The struggle for its oil was approaching the climax.

Last December King Carol agreed to supply Germany with 130,000 tons of oil a month during 1940—a considerable boost from the 1939 level and double 1938 shipments. Britain and France did not protest at first. Companies with Allied capital controlled enough of the Rumanian fields to make such exports impossible. Then last month Rumania announced formation of a government commission to control the entire industry—and presumably compel French and British corporation to ship to Germany.

The Allies immediately put quiet but ruthless pressure on Carol. Rumanian ships were held at Gibraltar and Malta. Rubber shipments piled up on Suez docks until the single tire factory in Rumania—which supplies the army—was forced to shut down. Other Rumanian vessels found it difficult to obtain British navicerts to get them through the blockade. In London, export licenses for shipments to Rumania were not released. And it was intimated to Bucharest that the Allies were "reconsidering" their guarantees of Rumanian independence.

The economic squeeze worked even better than the Reich's often-repeated threats of "other action" if Carol didn't come through with the oil. Last week Viorel Tilea, Rumanian Minister in London, handed a note of explanation to Foreign Secretary Halifax which the British unofficially admitted was "satisfactory." Two days later Rumania banned the export of aviation gasoline, and next day new army recruits were ordered to report immediately instead of on Mar. 1.

Germany ordered its economic trouble shooter, Dr. Karl Clodius, to hurry from Rome to Bucharest. But this week his visit was suddenly postponed. In addition to Carol's apparent spurt of defiance toward Germany and his willingness to make concessions to the Allies, he had other worries. Deliveries of oil to the Reich in 1939 fell short of the agreed total by 450 tons, and January shipments amounted to only 38,000 tons instead of a stipulated 130,000. Also, the Reich has begun to pile up reserves of Russian oil in Rumania—three ships arrived at Constantza from Baku last week. To transport this to Germany this spring, Berlin will need vigorous co-operation from Bucharest. And most of all, it will need peace in the Black Sea area.

THE OTTAWA WAY

CITY COUNCIL at last seems to have found an effective way to get rid of slot-machines, pin ball games, punch-boards and other questionable devices of the kind. A bylaw was passed, under which holders of such corporation licenses as those for lunch counters, restaurants, poolrooms, barber shops, the sale of cigarettes and the sale of milk, would face automatic suspension of license if a slot machine or pin ball game were found upon their premises.

A bylaw of this nature has been in effect in Ottawa and several other cities for several years and has worked out satisfactorily. — Cornwall Standard-Freeholder.

• British Navy and United States

AN American expert, Frazier Hunt, analyses the defence situation of the United States, from which he deduces that in framing defence plans American authorities have placed a good deal of reliance on the friendliness of the British Government and the power of the British Navy.

Mr. Hunt points out that the regular army of the United States is only 400,000, equal to tiny Finland, and less than one-fifth the size of the Polish forces crushed by Germany in a few weeks. Therefore, the United States depends a great deal on its navy for defence. But nearly half the present fleet is in the obsolete class. A heavy naval program is being carried out, but in 1944 there will be 16 battleships, 45 cruisers, 150 destroyers, 56 submarines, eight aircraft carriers and 3,000 navy planes, all in what is called the under-age class. That is really a big navy in itself. The billion-dollar program will be easily swallowed up without a great deal to show for it with two battleships costing $90,000,000 each.

In recent years, Mr. Hunt says, the United States administration has been secure in the knowledge that the only navy that could equal theirs and threaten the Atlantic coast, is the British, the result being that the American Navy was made a one-ocean navy—the Pacific. In the Atlantic they put four of their oldest battleships, four new cruisers and 90 old ones and one aircraft carrier.

The security of the United States, therefore, rests on the knowledge that the British Navy will hold the Atlantic coast against all comers or any probable combination of all comers. So far as any danger exists to the United States of having to fight on two fronts a once, it is vital to keep the Panama Canal open.

The interesting part, to us, of this analysis, is the admission that American naval strategy is dictated by the trust in the British people and the British Navy. That has saved American taxpayers a gigantic amount of money. It is an affirmation that, as some openly proclaim, the British Navy is the first line of defence of the United States.

Some of those people who are 'down' on the British Navy for examining American ships and mail for contraband, might remember that, and help the British and French to win the war. If they don't, and the Allied navies are taken over by Germany, who will also take over the British islands in the Atlantic, a few hundred miles from the American coast, and probably Canada as well, the United States would not be able to build ships fast enough to cope with the force Hitler could throw against them if he has a mind to.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

• Advertising Is Not Wasteful

Based upon "FACTS You Should Know About ADVERTISING" .. Published by the Better Business Bureaux.

ASIDE from questions of price, there are some who condemn advertising as "economic waste." While admitting that "mere announcements" perform a valuable socio-economic function, some critics contend that advertising is bad because it encourages people to buy things they do not need. They say that it centres attention on style rather than serviceability; that it creates psychological rather than physical values; that it encourages buying by impulse and emotions rather han by reason. Thus, they contend, it serves uneconomic ends and amounts to "waste."

Undoubtedly, a large proportion of our purchases are "unnecesary," or would be so in a primitive form of living. We could exist without them. Admittedly, advertising stimulates ambition and desires to possess these articles. But is that a bad thing?

Men did not need the safety razor in the sense that they could not have existed withou it. But it made the job of shaving an easier, quicker, safer and altogether more pleasant task.

Women could throw away their vacuum cleaners and go back to the old-fashioned broom. They could get along without electric toasters or a great many other things that make life easier and pleasanter for them and give them more time for leisure.

We don't have to have radios. But they give us a great deal of entertainment and information that we would be deprived of otherwise. Articles that contribute to raising the standards of living are not "waste." So, an advertising expenditure to introduce them into the standards of living, to get them widely accepted so that they may be produced at low prices consumers can pay, is not "waste."

Undoubtedly there are many people who contract to purchase things that they can't afford and who, therefore, are unable to buy the really basic essentials of life. Presumably, advertising has played its part in stimulating these purchases. But it does not seem reasonable that advertising should be taken to task because some people are improvident. Advertising is not in a position to determine what each of its readers can or cannot afford, and to gauge its message accordingly. Nor does it follow that the improvident just because there was no advertising.

LEAVE THEM ALONE

THERE'S nothing like a budget balancing as a healthy exercise for politicians. It keeps their feet on the ground and their ears tuned to that fine, whispering and murmuring of the people. We go on record side by side with the mayor of Stratford, who is quoted editorially by The Amherstsburg Echo as follows:

The feeling of the country is voiced by Mayor Henry, of Stratford, who said:

"I don't like the idea of centralizing everything, because that seems to smack too much of dictatorship by Government departments. The Government has plenty to do right now without assuming additional duties (the supervision of the salaries of municipal officials).

"After all, we have been able to balance our budget, and not show a deficit of $4,000,000, such as the Hepburn Government has done this year.

"So why let others regulate our finances when they cannot show a balance on the right side of the ledger in their present transactions."

HEPBURN FOR TOURISTS

IN ANNOUNCING the intention of the Ontario Government to encourage tourists from the United States to visit this province, Premier Hepburn is doing something that will help win the war.

With exchange the way it is, every American visitor gains ten cents on his dollar as soon as he enters Canada. That, alone, should entice many visitors to tour this Dominion during the summer.

We need those tourists, because their spending in Canada will help us keep the dollar on some reasonable level with the American currency. The more visitors Mr. Hepburn can persuade to come to Canada, the more will be the national war effort. —Windsor Daily Star.

COMING AND GOING

W. H. Kenny, wholesale grocer, Sarnia, has been named Conservative candidate for West Lambton. Forty-seven years ago Willie Kenny and young Don Sutherland traveled together to the World's Fair in Chicago, but they didn't arrange to get to Parliament at the same time. Don has served his time, while Willie is just starting.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

TAKEN LITERARLLY

(Christian Science Monitor)

Husband: "What, two new hats! Doesn't that wreck our budget?"

Wife: "Of course not, darling. Don't you recall that we made a liberal allowance for overhead expenses."

BIG MEN!

BIG MEN come from small towns. That's a trite old aphorism, but true. Says The St. Marys Journal-Argus:

Canada's dean of advertising, R. C. Smith, points out one way in which Canada should profit by our experiences of the last war. Then new industries mushroomed overnight, most of which were centralized in the larger cities. Those war-time industrial expansions were planned for the needs of the moment, not for the requirements of the future. "Industrial expansions should revert to the small towns where Canada's permanent prosperity is always rooted. The small towns were built by men who took a pride in their craft and who did not feel that the pinnacle of a man's success necessarily had to be a white-collar job. That is the philosophy which has made a greater Canada in the past, and which can build a greater Canada in the future."

SHOULD TELL TRUTH

COPY of the Detroit Times is at hand with a two column wide editorial, in type larger than this, assailing France and England—it is never Britain—for not giving any aid to Finland. "They profess great sympathy but do not do anything," it says. The Detroit paper should get itself informed and tell the truth. Of United States it says it has great sympathy for Finland, but it is not "in the war and has no intention of getting into it." That is well known and would be quite acceptable to the rest of the world if the inhibitions of some in that country included words as well as deeds.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

QUIET UP TO DATE

This war has been characterized as "peculiar" and the same term seems applicable to the present Federal election. Things may warm up in the next few weeks but as far as local conditions go nobody seems to be very much steamed up as yet. — Ridgetown Dominion.

SHIP SHAPE

(New York Post)

"The liner she's a lady, and the man o' war's 'er 'usband," Rudyard Kipling has written; but the Navy is inclined to disagree. At least Rear Admiral Nimitz thinks they're all ladies and expensive ones at that. In answer to the question: "Why is a ship a 'she'?" the Admiral replies: "Because it costs so much to keep one in paint and powder."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

The same day went Jesus out of the house, and sat by the sea side. And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that he went into a ship and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.... And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables? He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given.—Matt. xiii, 1, 2, 10, 11.

HOW ABOUT THE FARMER

WHEN an editor is loyal to his patrons — his fellow citizens — he's in touch with "vox populi" and is also a good business man. So we pay tribute to the wisdom of the editor of The Blenheim News-Tribune, and what is more, agree with him—entirely.

From every side comes the warning for people to watch their step during this war, "because after the war is over the world will find itself in one of the greatest depressions this old globe has ever seen."

Around here we are mostly concerned with what the lot of the farmer will be after the war is over. For that matter, the whole economic setup really begins with the farm, and if the farmer has a depression after the war, the industrial and professional and every other line of business will have a depression.

FINNISH "SISSIS"

IN FINLAND it is high praise for a man to be called a "sissi." The word is a derivative of the Finnish word "sisu" meaning determination. It is applied in particular to daredevil Finns, those, for instance, who ski long distances behind the enemy line and try to put the Murmansk railroad out of commission. That "Sisu" is a heritage of all the Finns is shown by their marvellous resistance to the onslaughts of Russia's Red hordes. Hail to the "Sissimen" of Finland.—Midland Free Press.

A.Y.P.A. Meets.

The meeting of the A.Y.P.A. was held in the basement of the church on Monday evening. The meeting opened with prayer, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

There was no business discussion and the remainder of the meeting was turned over to the missionary convener, Mr. John Bent, who conducted a quiz contest on missionary work.

Y.P.U. Notes.

The Young People's Union of Trinity United Church met on Monday evening in the basement of the church. Miss Eleanor Sherin, Christian Fellowship convener, was in charge of the meeting. The business was conducted by the president, Richard Vaughan. The worship period opened with quiet music and a call to worship.

The hymn, "I Need Thee Precious Jesus," closed the worship period.

Eleanor Sherin ably dealt with a timely and appropriate subject, "Can We Overcome War?" based on the text, "Then said the Lord, Behold I will set a plumb-line in the midst of my people Israel." The speaker went on to describe the condition in Europe at the present time. The forces of the North fighting against slavery and for union succeeded against the South, who were on the side of slavery and narrow nationalism. We hope that a united Europe will emerge from the present conflict as a united America emerged from the Civil War.

The meeting closed with the hymn "O brother man, fold to thy heart thy brother" and the Mizpah benediction.

Books Purchased.

Omemee and District Horticultural Society met in the U.F.O. Hall Tuesday, February 27, for their monthly meeting. The meeting opened with the National Anthem. Mrs. Moyer conducted the business discussion. The minutes were read and adopted.

The society previously donated ten dollars to the Library Board to buy instructive books on gardening. The librarian, Mr. Hill, reported the following books had been purchased: Hardy Shrubs, by F. A. Waugh; All About Flowering Bulbs, by T. A. Weston; Success With House Plants, by J. L. Kift; 1,001 Questions, by A. C. Holtes; Culture of Flowers, by H. J. Moore; Canadian Home Gardening, by A. B. Cutting; Modernistic Flower Arranging by B. S. Marre.

Mrs. W. K. Kettle and Mrs. E. A. Corniel, who had been appointed delegates at annual meeting in January, to attend horticultural conference in Toronto, left on Thursday morning.

Mrs. R. J. Moon was appointed to board of directors, replacing Mrs. N. Fee, who resigned.

The guest speaker for the evening was Mr. Jack Elliot, Campbellville.

Mr. Elliott's address was divided into three parts—first, on garden soil, which he separated into four classes: clay, loam, gravel and sand, and told what each required.

Plant food was his second heading. Here he gave a reading on "Health from ground up."

He concluded with Plant Disease. A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by J. A. Bent and E. A. Corniel.

A draw for lucky prizes brought the meeting to a close. Prizes were won by the following: L. M. Curtis, Mrs. Moyer, J. A. Bent, H. W. Hill, E. A. Corniel, Mrs. R. J. Moon, H. G. Burke and Miss I. M. Clemett.

St. David, Wales' Patron Saint Was Evangelist Who Lived Long

By JOHN DOTTRIDGE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Canadian Press Staff Writer

One of the few things certain about St. David, patron of Wales, whose anniversary is today, is that he lived to be a very old man. He was born "in the fifth century" according to ancient manuscripts, and died either in 544, when he was said to have reached "a great age" or in 601, when he must have been of incredible years.

Welsh legends are that a white dove perched on the shoulder of the venerable David whenever he preached, and that the ground where he stood while he preached raised itself into a mound, that he might be better heard by his audience. He was one of the few native saints of the British Isles.

David was born in Glamorganshire, and was, say the savants, with bland inexactitude, "either a nephew or an uncle of King Arthur"—Arthur of the Table Round, hero of ancient chivalry. His linage was subject to much research. Back in the 10th century, a devotee published a most amazing table of David's ancestry.

David was acutally an evangelist among the Britons, ordained by St. Paulinus. In Britain he founded or restored two monasteries, one at Glastonbury and one at Bath. He was credited with making the famous healing waters of Bath "warm and salubrious" but as a matter of fact the Romans had discovered their qualities centuries before. It was to Glastonbury his bones were brought 300 years after his death, tradition says.

Returning to Wales, he obtained permission of his relative King Arthur, to move the episcopal seat from Caerleon to Mynyw, or Menevia, now St. David's, and still cathedal city of the western see.

Leeks for Indentification

Another folk tale is of David choosing the leek as the emblem of Wales. In the course of a battle again invading Saxons, the Welsh became sadly confused, and could not tell friend from foe. During a lull, David told them to pluck leeks and wear them in their hats, that they might not slaughter one another.

The lyrical Welsh came in great number to America at the beginning of the century. Eastern Pennsylvania is dotted with Welsh town names, and there is a Welsh musical tradition among the people. On St. David's Day in 1729, the Society of Ancient Britons was founded in Philadelphia and loyal sons of Wales paraded to church wearing leeks, to listen to a sermon in Cymric, ancient tongue of Britons driven from England into Wales by Anglo-Saxons.

National appurtenant of the Welsh is the eisteddfod—modest word merely meaning "sitting," or "session," but now generally applied to a festival of music that may last for days and attract muscians of all races. The musical Welsh share with the Arabs credit for the first stringed instrument with a bow, a primitive violin.

"Rhyfelgyrch Gwyr Harlech," the militant patriotic song known to most people as "Men of Harlech," is a popular national air of Wales.

No Kow-Towing To Retain Office Says King

PRINCE ALBERT, Mar. 1 — (CP) —Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared before his home constituents here yesterday that he intends to remain at the head of the Canadian Government as long as he has the confidence of the people of Canada and the "strength to perform duties of my office.

"But if I hav. to gain that confidence by going back and forth across the country making speeches here and there, and by seeking to cater to local caste and prejudice, I do not wish to occupy office for a day," he said.

The Prime Minister addressed two public meetings here following his unanimous selection by a Liberal convention to contest Prince Albert riding which he has represented since 1926. After his evening address before an audience of 3,000 in the Armouries, he left immediately for Ottawa.

While expressing regret that he had been unable to visit his constituents since the 1935 election, the Prime Minister said he is convinced the loss was his alone. He was sure that if he remained on the job to direct the multiplicity of problems which had beset Canada in the last five years, and did that job efficiently, his electors would be well-satisfied

Although Conservative Leader Manion "has been kind enough to remind you that I have not been here since the 1 st election" he believed that fast mails, the airplane, radio and telephones had removed, in a large measure, the old time need of travelling and addressing meetings in order to keep in touch.

"Half the trouble we have in the world to-day is due to the publicity given every thought and action of Government Leaders. Each day they must say or do something new and startling, no matter what it is."

Wrong Pith to Unity

Prime Minister King warned advocates of National Government that "bitter and contemptible" words would not make for unity and cooperation and declared his determination that no word uttered by him during the campaign would alienate the friendship and co-operation of any man or woman of any political party.

"I hope to be able to say at the close of the campaign that I have not used a word about any person of any political party which may make it impossible for that man or woman to join with me."

(Following his address, the Prime Minister said during a private conversation that this remark was not to be construed as indicating a plan to form a coalition government but that he wished to be free to call upon men and women of all parties to co-operate with the government.)

The Prime Minister said the purchase by the government of a residence for unmarried officers' quarters at the Vancouver air station was Dr. Manion's "only example of what he calls mal-administration."

That purchase was completed before, the war started and the property had been acquired on recommendation of air experts. The purchase was justified because there was need of good Royal Canadian Air Force quarters in Vancouver.

"Who can say what will happen there or what may threaten our security on that coast?" he asked.

Mr. Mackenzie King revealed that he had been partly responsible for the visit of Their Majesties to Canada last summer. He personally extended an invitation to the King and Queen at their coronation.

Then, when the Governor-General, the late Lord Tweedsmuir, visited England in 1938, he carried the formal invitation from the Canadian government and returned with their Majesties' acceptance.

Thimble Tea Held By Keene W.M.S.

KEENE, March 1.—(ENS).— The W.M.S. of Keene United church held a thimble tea at the manse on Tuesday. During the afternoon an informal program in charge of Mrs. F. Easson and Miss M. Bryce was given which consisted of instrumentals by Miss Bryce and Mrs. G. Murray. Readings were given by Mrs. Ross McIntyre, also solos by Jean and Donald Murray. As the needles were applied, community songs were sung. Mrs. Robert Nelson and Mrs. James McFarlane poured the tea, which was served by Mrs. Allan Easson, Mrs. Ross McIntyre, Misses Isabel Faux and Rossetta Frankish. There were over forty present and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent.

On Sunday the topic of the sermon at the United church was "The Church of Jesus in our Modern World." During the discourse a few statements were made namely, that despite the false criticism of the enemies of the Cross of Christ the church is still marching forward triumphant; that Christ has still power on earth to forgive sins and heal many diseases, this work is still going on through consecrated men and women. An anthem, "Cast thy bread upon the waters," was well rendered by the choir, the duet being taken by Miss Betty Brown and Delbert Coward.

Senate Approves Loan To Finns

WASHINGTON, March 1 (AP)—The United States Senate completed congressional action Thursday on a bill to increase capital of export-import bank, making possible additional loans to Finland and China.

The measure, which would double the existing $100,000,000 capital of the export-import bank, now goes to the White House.

The Senate, which had passed the bill several days ago, today accepted amendments from the house of representatives permitting use of loan funds for financing commercial airplane purchase and forbidding extension of loans to nations in default on war debts.

President Roosevelt's signature is assured.

The last big congressional hurdle was cleared yesterday when the house of representatives approved, 168 to 51, the Senate bill adding $100,000,000 to the bank's capital.

Amendments which the house inserted would forbid loans by the bank to countries in default of their war debts and would permit Finland to buy commercial aircraft, as distinguished from military planes.

Claims Shipping Weaker Than Last War

LONDON, March 1—(CP).—Sir Phillip Haldin, president of the Chamber of Shipping, told that organization Thursday, British merchant shipping is in a far worse position than in the last war.

He blamed government "indifference," asserting that it is "as plain as a pikestaff" that Great Britain's shrunken mercantile marine will be inadequate at the end of the war without greater government aid.

"This country cannot exist without a strong mercantile marine," Sir Phillip warned.

Noting that Britain is paying higher rates for neutral tonnage than for British ships, thus enabling foreign ship owners to build reserves, he said increased government aid is imperative "now and in the future" or "our mercantile marine will sink to the level of a third-rate power."

Lord Essendon, chairman of Furness, Withy & Co., Ltd., and other shipping firms, said the controlled rate for British ships from the River Plate was 43 shillings (about $8.60) a ton while Britain was paying 130 shillings (about $26) to neutral owners for the same service.

"These figures provide some indication of the benefits which foreign ship owners are obtaining and of the strength of the rod which is being created with which to beat British tramp ship owners in the future," he said.

Ferguson's Stand

TORONTO, Mar. 1—(CP)—It is a patriotic duty to buy British "even if the dress is not cut to the latest style," Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, former Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain, told the young men's section of the Toronto Board of Trade last night. He said that he intended to see that his wife bought English hats for the duration of the war.

"I bought clothes in England I couldn't wear," he said. "They make stock figures over there and I'm not a stock figure."

PACKERS MAKE INDUSTRIAL HOCKEY LOOP PLAYOFF BERTH

Three Contests At Brock End Up Schedule

Final standing:

Teams	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
Quakers	5	1	0	10
Marines	4	1	1	9
Westclox	4	2	0	8
Packers	2	2	2	6
Watercrafts	2	4	0	4
Raybestos	1	4	1	3
Brintons	0	4	2	2

In the final scheduled triple-header of the Industrial Hockey League last night at the Brock St. rink, the four playoff teams were decided. They were Quakers, Marines, Westclox and Packers. The latter eliminated Watercraft 7-3, as Marines beat Westclox 4-2, and Rays defeated Brintons 3-2.

Canada Packers trimmed Watercrafts by a 7-3 count to cinch an Industrial League playoff berth. Breaking loose for four goals without a comeback in the third heat, the White-led lads earned the win in a clean, lively game. They had a 1-0 edge in the first and it was tied at 3-3 in the second. Watercrafts went down fighting hard, and several goals for the Packers' were of the soft variety.

Edmunds counted the only marker of the initial inning. The other side tied it early in the second on Boulter's goal and, when Jopling got another for C.P.C., Ego again sewed it up. Watercrafts went ahead on Hunter's tally but Todd made it 3-all to end the stanza. In the third, Packers rammed home four, Edmunds, Todd, R. Cournyea and Csumrik all bulging the twine. R Cournyea drew a misconduct penalty to arguing too strenuously with the referee in the second. One of the losers' forwards suffered a cut in the face of a collision. The teams:

Watercrafts: Goal, Bullied; defence, Miller, Ego; centre, O'Connor; wings, Hunter, Boulter; subs, D. Stenner, G. Stenner, McQuarrie, Lowes, Dinesen.

Packers: Goal, Feeley; defence, Jopling, Farr; centre, D. Cournyea; wings, Todd, Csumrik; subs, White, Grose, Wolfe, R. Cournyea, Edmunds.

Referee—Tom Miller.

Edges Westclox

Marines had a slight edge on play the last two frames to earn their nod over Westclox. It was 1-1 in the first but 2-1 for Marines to wind up the second. Saunders scored for the winners to open it with Gilbert getting that one back. The lone second period marker came on an effort by Stephenson. Boyle made it 3-1 for the Outboards to open the third and, after Thirnbeck got one back for the Clockmen, Partridge pushed in the final tally of the game for the winners. Play was fast and mostly clean, with both sides showing some nice hockey. The teams:

Marines: Goal, Watkins; defence, Wood, Shields; centre, Partridge; wings, Boyle, Stephenson; subs, Warren, Payne, Mesley, Saunders, Shaughnessy.

Westclox: Goal, Currie; defence, White, Edwards; centre, Gilbert; wings, Thirnbeck, Millen; subs, Patterson, Grose, Driscoll, Bedding.

Raybestos broke into the victory column, though out of the running, with a 3-2 nod over Brintons in a neat number. Brintons got the first goal in the first frame on Agnew's attempt. Both sides scored in the second, Lewis tying it up and Brintons going ahead on Lackey's marker. Cunningham again sewed it up early in the third, and later Maudsley gave the Rays the victory with a neat counter. There was little to choose beween these squads as they battled it out on even terms most of the way, but the scrappy Raybestos bunch had more punch in the third chukker. Play was clean throughout, barring a few bodychecks, and fairly speedy, with some good hockey shown at times. The teams:

Brintons: Goal, Heal; defence, Watson, McMartin; centre, Robinson; wings, Lackey, Deadey; subs, Corrigan, Scott, Agnew, Henthorne.

SID ABEL
Detroit Red Wings

(By Central Press Canadian)

In his first few National league games Sid Abel, centre with Detroit Red Wings, was the centre of more than the usual amount of newspaper statements, claims and arguments. This all took place at the beginning of the season before the present one. Sid started off with Pittsburg Hornets, Detroit farm, but injuries to the Red Wings caused Jack Adams to bring him up to the major league. His first game was the first N.H.L. game he had ever seen and after a few tilts the enthusiastic Detroit manager was labelling him one of the greatest prospects to come up in years—later "refusing an enormous sum" offered by an unknown team for his services. About a month later Sid was back at Pittsburg and since then, both this season and last, he has juggled back and forth, although Manager Adams hasn't backed up on his statement about Abel's potentialities. The hustling centre is only 21 years old and may yet make a prophet out of Genial John. Sid was born at Melville, Sask., and played his amateur hockey with Saskatoon and Flin Flon Bombers before turning pro with Pittsburg, this being his second piece-meal N.H.L. season as well as his second pro season. With the Hornet last season he bagged 21 goals, with Detroit he got a goal and assist, both in league play and in playoffs. Shoots left, weights around 165 pounds.

St. Paul's Won Over St. John's

St. Paul's, Intermediate "A" Ontario Church Basketball champions, and St. John's, Peterborough's Junior entry in the O.C.B.A., both of whom are stacked up against Toronto teams in the Ontario playdowns, clashed in a game carded as part of the program for the Masonic picnic at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday night; St. Paul's winning 40 to 19 after a fast exhibition of the cage game.

The junior crew managed to hold the intermediate champs in the first half, in fact were in front 13 to 12 at the half, but St. Paul's fast-breaking attack and accurate shooting in the second session enabled them to pull away. Led by Doug. McPherson and with Jimmy Thorburn, Ross Pulkinghorn and Pete McArthur also doing some effective sniping the winners piled up the score after the rest period and were never threatened after they had once flashed into the lead in that session. McPherson tossed in five baskets and a free throw in the second period to pace the St. Paul's attack.

Top Scorer for the losers was Al Marshall, who registered five baskets, four of them in the first half when the juniors did some nice passing to pave the way for scores.

It was a fast-moving game and a useful tuneup for both squads for the important games coming up. The big crowd of Masons who watched the battle gaves the teams a fine hand at the close for their colorful demonstration of the possibilities of the cage game.

St. Paul's (40).—Centre, McArthur (6); forward, McPherson (13), Thorburn (10); guards, Marsh (2), McIntyre; subs., Sedgewick, Pulkinghorn (9).

St. John's (19).—Centre, Craig (4); forwards Dyer (1), Stewart (4); guards, Marshall (10), Gillespie.

Referee.—W. Ward. Umpire, J Dougherty. Scorer, L. Grose.

REALISM IN TEACHING

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND — (CP).—The staff of a Royal Air Force station made a phonograph record of the sounds in a bomber in flight, and now play the record when a pupil is taking instruction in an earth-bound fuselage.

Falkirk, Rangers Favored For 2nd Stage

LONDON, March 1.—(CP Cable)—Scottish clubs play the second of home-and-home games for the first round of the Scottish wartime cup to feature the soccer program in the United Kingdom at the week-end. Goals will determine the entrants into the second round of competition.

Several teams appear almost certain to make the grade as the result of big margins chalked up a week ago. The strong Hamilton Academicals whipped Stenhousemuir 7-1 and St. Mirren blanked Queen of the South 6-0 at Paisley. While the Accies' triumph was expected, the Saints played their best game of the season and will find the Dumfries squad a different team before their own supporters at Palmerston Park.

Falkirk and Rangers, leaders of Scotland's two regional leagues, came through handily against Hibernians and Alloa respectively and are favored to qualify for the second stage. Although beaten 2-1 at Perth, Hearts are picked to more than make up the deficit when they oppose St. Johnstone in Edinburgh.

Contests are scheduled for only four of England's eight wartime groups. Close competition appears probable in South "C" one of the new tournaments for London and Southern teams, but Crystal Palace has forged to the front in South "D" with three straight victories.

Arsenal At Fulham

Two attractive games in South "C" will find Arsenal at Fulham and West Ham United clashing with Millwall at Newcross. Crystal Palace is at home to Norwich City in South "D."

Two of the strongest teams in the country—West Bromwich Albion and Wolverhampton Wanderers — meet on the former's ground in a battle that has a bearing on the championship of the Midland section. The Wolves hold first place with ten points, one more than their week-end opponents.

In the Southwest, Plymouth Argyle, pacemaker with 24 points, goes to Eastville for a game with the fourth-place Bristol Rovers. Second place in the group is shared by Torquay United and Swindon Town who are two points behind the Argyle. The Seasiders entertain Bristol City and Swindon goes to South Wales where Swansea Town provides the opposition.

Tanners Capture First Playoff 10-3

HASTINGS, March 1—(ENS).—Taking the first game of the playoffs here at Riverside rink last night Tanners defeated the Cubs 10 to 3 in the town hockey loop. The winners outclassed Cubs in every department although there were two fluke goals to their credit. It was not until the third period, the losers began to show pep and counted two goals in succession. In the first frame Tanners counted three. Faux on a pass from Thompson and McKee opened scoring and the trio came down a few minutes later to duplicate their feat. McCoy passed to Thompson for the third counter. In the second period, Edwards opened scoring for the Cubs on a pass from Hill but the Tanners, taking revene counted four in rapid succession. Thompson, McCoy, Crate and Faux popped the rubber past Bonds. Opening scoring in the last stanza, R. Boyle came down the boards and scored twice from the area near the blue line, for the subs. Aubrey Scriver for the Tanners went in for two goals with assist to Blackburn and Faux for the winners ended scoring of the game on a pass from McCoy.

The teams:

Tanners — Goal, Calberry; defence, Crate, Turner; centre, Thompson; wings, McKee, Faux; alternates, McCoy, Coughlan, Blackburn, T. Scriver.

Cubs — Goal, Bonds; defence, Boyle, Jones; centre, Hill; wings, Radford, Edwards; alternates, Crowley, Mouncey, A. Scriver.

Referee—Neil McKenty, George Turner, Jack Crowley.

In a school league fixture, Public school defeated the Separate school 6 to 3 in an exciting hockey game previous to the Tanners-Cubs game.

All Saints' Team Cops Bantam Title

All Saints won the Church Hockey League bantam title last night at All Saints' rink with a 5-3 third game playoff win over Trinity. They grabbed an early lead when Baxter and Jones scored early and then added one by Chambers to make it 3-0 to open the second. Trinity ganged up and scored in the second, by Beatty and tied it in the third on two tallies by Meredith. Jones got the winning counter late and Baxter broke away later for the final. It was even and hot with both goalies going good, though a couple might have been saved. All Saints' 1st line stood out with Outram best on defence; Beatty shone for Trinity with Meredith and Dinsdale was strong defensively. The teams:

All Saints'—Goal, Panter; defence, Shadgett, Outram; centre, Chambers wings, Jones, Baxter; subs, McDougall, Hill, Padgett, Mason, Menzies.

Trinity— Goal, Dorset; defence, Hall, Beatty; centre, Fallon; wings, Plunkett, Meredith; subs, Jewell, Dinsdale, Beaton, White.

Referee—N. Jobe.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEL PERDUE

The lid is off tonight up on Brock Avenoo. It's ye potent Kitchener Greenshirts versus the speedy Petes at 8.30 in an O.H.A. intermediate "A" round-robin playoff. With both outfits rarin' to go and a streamlined hallapaluza—it's Siberian for "steaming dish of sweet potatoes"—ought to be served up to 2,000 frantic fanatics. After their 4-1 win o'er Port Colborne here Tuesday, the Petes are hotter than red peppers and anxious to make it two in a row. These games on local ice are a real break for the Buckaroos, who should cash in now—just in case the going gets rocky on the road. With the weather liable to run down the drain early in March, so far as natural ice is concerned, there may be few more puck playoffs here. So fans had better not pass up this classic tonight.

* * * * * *

Here's the Greenshirts' lineup: Goal: Bindernagel; defence, Simon (No. 2) and Lederman (3); centre, Bauer (7); wings, Grau (6) and Vrooman (8); alternates, Kuntz (10), Fehrenbach (9), Lorentz (12), Hause (4), Clair (5), Huber (11) and Lang (14). Walter Molson is the coach. Bauer is a brother of Bobby, Boston Bruins' star forward of the Kraut Line. . Yep, most of these gees played here last year for Waterloo Tigers, and they're husky, fast and smart. Went to the provincial senior "B" finals a year ago ere bowing to Niagara Falls. Petes beat 'em here, but lost out to the Tigers in Waterloo—which is across the street from Kitchener.

* * * * * *

You All Know 'Em

No need to list the locals in their positions, or numbers, as fans should know 'em thoroughly now. The Petes' lineup will be selected from Harding, Ellis, Crowe, F. Jopling, Gardner, Burton, Tompkins, Kingdon, Heal, Starr, Coughlin, J. Jopling and Blewett. When this outfit is clicking, it really clicks like cacklers in the hands of an expert — and this is the time for the squad to really roll. A loss on home ice tonight would be a serious setback, whereas a home victory would have the Petes swinging and singing merrily in the canary's perch. Mais, oui.

* * * * * *

Strikes us, after viewing Peterborough puck teams in action for quite a few semesters—and many of these clubs went quite a piece in provincial playdowns ere curling up when the chips were down—that this is the best chance the Petes will have for quite a spell. The team of 1939-40 is practically a homebrew outfit, moulded together for some years, yet a young squad. All out of junior not so many winters ago, and not a real veteran on the team. A very fast bunch of skaters, some brainy puckists and a gang that gets along swell together. Kidding each other all the time, with not a sour note in the whole chorus.

Their Big Chance

And the Petes got off to a good start with pre-seasonal practices in Oshawa. They're going along in top form now, practically free from injuries—knock on wood—and with a fierce ambish to cop the O.H.A. title this year. If they flop, there is liable to be a reaction next year and the club may not go anywhere. In a few more seasons, some of the local speed-merchants will be finding it a bit harder to shift from second into high gear—and hence we think right now is the big chance for this hustling team to make its real bid for a championship. So drop around to the rink tonight and see a smart squad in an important playoff against a classy Kitchener crew.

* * * * * *

Industrial Puck Loop concluded its schedule last e'en in the Brock St. rink with a trio of tussles. Marines copped a 4-2 win o'er Westclox, and those Marines are playing nice hockey now; Raybestos (though out of the running) ended up in a blaze of glory with a 3-2 nod over Brintons; and Packers earned a playoff berth with their 7-3 smirk over the Watercraft hustlers. So now it's Quakers vs. Marines in a sudden-death semi-final, whilst Westclox and Packers clash in another sudden-death fray. Winners then playoff in two out of three for the loop title. Dunno yet when the semi-finals start. So, 'tis goodbye for this season to Brintons, Rays and Watercrafts.

The Bantam Champs

Bantam section of the Church Hockey League ended last eve at All Saints' rink when All Saints won the duke in the six-team setup. They beat Trinity 5-3. The victors, led by Coach Art Beauclerc, showed a lot of power and compare favorably with other bantam champs; while the losers, a last-minute entry, did exceptionally well for an inexperienced bunch. They were piloted by Art Malby. Park St. beat Mark St. Juniors 7-3 in the first of their finals, and the next joust is Monday. Murray St. and All Saints start the senior playoffs on Monday, too. And so this loop rapidly approaches the last round-up.

* * * * * *

Due to the fact that the Orfuns have been ordered into their provincial playdowns this week-end, the Girls' Cage League will stage but two contests tonight in the Y.W. St. John's tangle with Quaker Debs at seven, and Quaker Aces meet "Y" Gym at eight. The Orfuns go to Belleville tomorrow in the gloaming and may be back here next Friday—when the gals' circuit concludes its schedule. In the Y.W.C.A. tomorrow night at eight, St. John's boys meet First Ave. of Toronto in their first junior O.C.B.A. playdown game, and it ought to be right interesting. St. Paul's who beat St. John's in an exhibition tilt last p.m.—won't go to Toronto till Tuesday for their O.C.B.A. intermediate scrap. Our P.C.I. teams are in Bowmanville tonight.

Park St. Juniors Win First Playoff

Park St. Juniors pulled a Church Loop surprise with a 7-3 win over Mark St. last night in the first of their finals at All Saints' rink. They showed better team play and more opportune speed than the speedy East City crew. The Baptists counted three in the frist, Jobe scoring two and Herb Campbell one. Mark St. got them back next heat with Currie in on two and Robin on one. Harold Campbell got one in the second, and Park St. ran in a trio in the third, Herb Campbell counting twice and Cox once. Mark St. looked below form and missed many chances, besides being lax defensively, but all the Park St. squad played smart, heady hockey. The teams:

Mark St.—Goal, Ralph; defence, Agnew, Scriver; centre, Curtis; wings, Eason, Robinson; sub, Baker.

Park St.—Goal, Ainslie; defence, Harold Campbell, Martin; centre, Jobe; wings, H. Campbell, Cox; sub, Kidd.

Referees—H. Conlin, C. Sproat.

Cambridge Held Favorites In Boat Classic

LONDON, Mar. 1 (CP Cable)—The eve of the Oxford-Cambridge boat race arrived to-day, almost devoid of the excitement traditionally attendant on the rowing classic in times of peace. But there was nonetheless a feeling of unostentatious pride that the race is being carried on in spite of the war.

This feeling was mirrored in the Times which said with the suggestion of a whoop in its usually sober editorial voice: "it is most reviving to the spirits that there should in spite of all be a boat race if only an ersatz one."

There has been little public interest in preparations for the race which will be rowed over the Henley course of something more than a mile and a half instead of the 4½ mile course between Putney and Mortlake.

Cambridge which have won 48 of the races rowed since 1829—one was a dead heat and Oxford won 42—are favored to win tomorrow. The light blues have shown more life and drive in training and have only two freshmen in their boat against Oxford's four.

However the Canadian Cox of the Oxonians, Henry Hicks of Bridgetown, N.S., pointed out his oar swingers have shown a longer sweep and smilingly expressed his confidence in the outcome: "It's in the bag."

Hastings Youth Is Coming Player

HASTINGS, March 1.—(ENS).—Aubrey Scriver of Hastings, who bears the same first name as his famous hockey player cousin, Aubrey "Dit" Clapper, is proving himself an outstanding player in the Hastings town league and the Norwood rural league as a hockey player. The lad, barely past public school age, is of stock build. He is a fast skater, a good stick-handler and has shown a good deal of talent despite the fact that this is the first year he has played with the team. Some of the older hockey players here have hopes he may some day see the top rungs in the field of hockey.

Back Again

Syl Apps was back in the Leafs' line-up against the Detroit Red Wings last night after a long layt off as a result of injuries and politics. Apps is running as a Conservative candidate in the coming federal election. Not up to his old form, Silvery Syl showed plenty of speed.

Last Night's Stars

By The Canadian Press

Paul Goodman, Chicago, turned in a brilliant effort in the nets to pace the Black Hawks to a 2-1 victory over Rangers.

Wally Stanowski, Toronto, played his best home game of the season to score once and help in another as Maple Leafs defeated Detroit 3-1.

Woody Dumart, Boston, turned the tide of a tight game in favor of the Bruins with a great solo goal besides helping in another as the Bruins won 4-2 over Canadiens.

Bantam Boxers To Fight In Toronto Ring

Lou Salica, the New York bantamweight star who meets Georgie Pace of Cleveland in a fifteen-round worlds title match at Maple Leaf Gardens in Torono on Monday night.

Salica, a former holder of the worlds bantamweight championship which he now seeks to regain had the most outstanding record of any of the bantamweight division during the past year. In that time he defeated Small Montana, Tony Olivera, Little Dado, Fillipino bantam champion, Jackie Jurich and Manuel Ortiz. All rated in the first ten bantams of the world.

Salica is conceded an even chance to win the title from Pace in Monday night's battle.

A second feature bout on the same card finds the Canadian middleweight championship at stake with Len Wadsworth defending his crown against Frankie Genovese in a ten-round match.

Jesse Levals, Cleveland star meets Angelo Callura in a six-round setto at the featherweight limit.

Over the same distance Scotty Ramage, Toronto's latest fistic sensation, is paired off with Danny Webb of Montreal.

A four-round opener has Max Scott meeting Steve Bucalatta of Niagara in a welterweight match.

Bata Squad Ties Terriers 4-4 In Final Battle

TWEED, March 1 (ENS)—A third period rally saw the Bata Shoe team of Frankford tie the Terriers 4-4 in the final regular game of the T.V.L. Over-confidence cost the locals this game as they went into the third period with a three-goal lead. No goals were scored in the overtime.

Reid, Guay and Meyette were the best for Frankford with Romhanyi playing a smart game between the pipes. Tummon, Joe Courneyea, Marsh and Orr looked best for the Terriers. Tummon handed Joe Courneyea the pass for the tying goal in the dying seconds of the game.

Hummon tallied first for the Terriers on a lone rush, while J. Courneyea made it 2-0. Joe Marsh picked up Elsbury's pass to give the Terriers a three goal margin.

Toward the end of the second period Long and Arber gave the visitors some anxious moments as they kept the play in Bata territory.

Bata scored an easy goal in the opening of the third period as Reid's shot struck Reeves on the shoulder and popped into the net. Reid counted again a few minutes later from a scramble. This gave Bata renewed courage and Guay tied the count at three all. When Johnny Orr was given a penalty, Foster put the visitors one up. With thirty seconds to go, J. Tummon gave Joe Courneyea a pass which the latter rifled into the net.

The game was fast and clean, only a few minor penalties being handed out.

Tweed — Goal, Reeves; defence, Tummon, Orr; centre, Courneyea; wings, Elsbury and Marsh; subs., Long, Arber, Leal, Woodcock.

Frankford.—Goal, Romhanyi; defence. Stojan, Reid; centre, Guay; wings, Meyette, Butler; subs., Foster, Elder, McDowell, Butler.

Referees—Finnegan, Quinn.

Training Camp Briefs

(By The Associated Press)

(Associated Press.)

LAKELAND Fla., March 1.—(AP)—Freddie Hutchinson, the $70,000 pitching bust of Detroit Tigers last season, has taken off weight during the winter and hopes this will mean more victories.

"I stayed away from the dining table," he says.

TAMPA, Fla.—Lew Riggs, Cincinnati Reds' regular third baseman until Werber came along, is going to be late reporting because he has a mild case of influenza.

Even when he does show he may not stay long, because there are rumors he'll be traded to Chicago Cubs as insurance for Stan Hack, who is convalescing from an operation.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Jimmy Foxx, Boston Red Sox's big blaster, looked over the New York Yankees in training yesterday and gave a frank appraisal:

"If the Yanks are any better than they were last year we might as well go home now."

Lefty Gomez returned the compliment for the champions, telling bystanders as Foxx came near:

"I don't have to see him now; I'll see enough of him this summer."

FORT MYERS, Fla.—Russ Peters, bespectacled infielder who played with Atlanta last season, is a modest fellow. But he may have talked himself out of a chance for a spot in Cleveland Indians' infield.

Rated a candidate for second base, Peters upset this calculation by commenting:

"I never could make a double play."

Peterborough Grads Drop 3-1 Tilt To Norwood In Juvenile Fixture

HAVELOCK, March 1 (ENS)—Jumping into an early lead the Norwood "Bees" defeated the Peterborough "Grads" by a 3-1 count in a fast-moving juvenile tilt, Wednesday evening at the Norwood arena. Thus the district round-robin series in the O.J.H.A. playdowns has concluded with St. Peter's of Peterborough and the Bees deadlocked in top place with three victories each. These two squads will have to meet again to decide the winner of this loop.

Hill in the Norwood cage was especially good, turning aside everything the visitors had to offer until three-quarter way through the final canto.

The Bees holding a decided edge in the initial stanza rang in all three of their counters this session. Webb and Hamilton combined for the first at the seven-minute mark, Pettierew adding the second on a pass from Gill three minutes later, and then Webb on a neat solo effort notched their third and final goal of the game. A fast, clean match all the way, there were no penalties in the first period. Close-checking prevailed in the middle frame and this in addition to excellent goal-keeping prevented any change in the score sheet. Anderson of the visitors was penalized this session for hooking.

Norwood, although enjoying a three-goal margin going into the final period, still pressed the attack. The Grads trying desperately to overcome this lead were given added opportunities, when Edwards and Webb of the Bees drew successive penalties. They failed to score however with Norwood shorthanded, but keeping up their ganging tactics afterwards finally clicked for their lone goal, Dundas doing the scoring.

Hill and Webb were especially good for the winners, honors among the remainder of the lineup being fairly evenly divided. For the losers goalie Leether, Dundas, Anderson, Ainslie, Robinson and Hallihan were most effective.

The teams:

Peterborough: Goal, Leether; defence, Patterson, Dundas; centre, Anderson; wings, Robinson, Hallihan; alternates, Gillespie, Agnew, Courneyea, Ainslie, Woodgate and Batten.

Norwood — Goal, Hill; defence, Webb, Mouncey; centre, Edwards; wings, Petticrew, Gill; alternates, Hamilton, Jamieson, Thompson, Yeo.

Referee, W. Leggitt, Peterborough.

Norwood Wins Over Alerts, But Lose Puffer

HAVELOCK, Mar. 1 (ENS). — Bringing home a two-goal lead by virtue of their 8-6 victory over Albert College in Belleville last night, the Norwood High School team was nevertheless in pretty low spirits. This was occasioned by the loss of their brilliant young defence star, "Mickey" Puffer, who was left behind in that city's hospital, having suffered a broken collarbone shortly after the start of the final period. The injury resulted from a heavy bodycheck which he received at the same instant in which he fired the shot for his fourth goal of the game.

Taking the lead in the initial stanza, the visiting team, however, had to come from behind twice in order to win last night's tussle. Puffer notched the opening goal at the six-minute mark and made the play for Buck's counter two minutes later, which left Norwood with a two-goal lead entering the second period. Lougheed of Belleville and Nelson of Norwood received penalties.

The husky Albert College squad held an edge during the middle frame, and once getting their opponents on the run, scored thrice within three minutes. Partridge started the firing on a solo drive, Bailey connecting for the second with Crouch assisting, while Lougheed combined with Partridge for the third. Later in the period Lougheed clicked alone for Belleville's fourth goal of the stanza. A penalty to Francis for charging Puffer gave Norwood the extra man advantage, and Puffer tallied unassisted while the homesters were shorthanded. Only other penalty this period went to Puffer for tripping Partridge near the concluding bell.

The fateful third had barely commenced when Puffer on a solo effort deadlocked the count 4-4. It was a; the eight-minute mark that he combined with Nelson to place his team once more in the lead, in which play he received the injury which forced him from the game. Play had barely resumed before Molden and then Bailey tallied as Belleville pressed on the attack, reversing the count 6-5 in their favor. Reassembling their forces Norwood suddenly displayed a rise of spirit and Buck combined first with Johnson and then with Green to click for a pair of opportune goals. Maintaining their pace Norwood boosted their lead by one more counter, Morris notching it with less than there minutes remaining.

Outstanding among a unitedly strong Norwood lineup was Mickey Puffer with four goals and one assist to his credit. Following closely in special merit was Shaw Buck, clever young forward who notched three counters, and Goalie Les Bongard who gave a tip-top performance in the net. The latter was cut over the eye in the last session. Starring for the losers were Partridge, Lougheed, and Bailey.

The teams:

Norwood — Goal, Bongard; defence, Puffer, Gardner; centre, Johnson; wings, Green, Buck; alternates, Morris, Nelson, Fife, Cole, Lobb, Lemon.

Albert College — Goal, Christian; defence, Lougheed, Francis; centre, Partridge; wings, Molden, Latimer; alternates, Woolley, Powell, Crouch, Bailey, Downey; sub. goalie, Manning.

Referees—R. Ennis, Norwood; J. Carson, Belleville.

North Dummer Won Over Warsaw Team

WARSAW, March 1.—(ENS)—On Tuesday night on local ice, North Dummer gained a 6-5 decision over the Warsaw School to take the playoff series in two straight games and win themselves custody of the Casement Cup for the next year.

In the fastest, closest game of the season, both teams gave everything they had, never letting up the terrific pace for a moment. The Stoney Lakers took an early 2-goal lead and held it till the last period. When the Scholars whittled it down to a single and all but tied it up several times in the closing seconds.

A. Whetung and Ramsay were the Northerners' sharpshooters, both playing their usual steady, effective game. For the losers E. Payne, Bell and G. Clements all did trojan work. G. Cooper, Warsaw's big defence man, sifted through for two goals and Reg. Payne was very effective defensively.

After the game the league president, H. Munro, presented the cup to Roy Whetung, Jr., and in a short speech congratulated North Dummer on their clean playing and good sportsmanship throughout the season. The teams:

North Dummer: Goal, B. Payne; defence, Crowe, L. Whetung; centre, A. Whetung; wings, Ramsay, R. Whetung; subs, Coppaway, Ivey, Puffer, Edgar.

School: Goal, E. Clements; defence, G. Cooper, G. Clements; centre, Bell; wings, Darling, R. Payne; subs, E. Payne, Lonsberry, G. Payne.

Hard Worker

JACK JOPLING

Petes To Clash Here Tonight With Kitchener

A huge crowd of city and district puck followers is expected on hand tonight at 8.30 o'clock in the Brock St. arena when Kitchener Greenshirts tangle with the Petes. It is an O.H.A. intermediate "A" round-robin series encounter, the Petes' second and a local win will give the Buckland bunch a fine chance in this playoff setup. Kitchener is generally considered the club to beat for the O.H.A. title this year, the club being made up mostly of last year's senior "B" finalists, the Waterloo Tigers.

All the Petes are in shape for this important encounter, and they will be fighting their heads off to cop another win at home—as the competition on foreign ice the last half of the series will be plenty tough. The speedy locals feel they can trim the Greenshirts (as they broke even with the Tigers last year) here tonight. A crowd of 2,000 fans is likely to jam the rink to see a whirlwind playoff game between two smart squads.

35,000 Expected For Garcia Tilt

LOS ANGELES, March 1 (AP)—Seeking to advance still another rung up pugilism's ladder of fame, welterweight champion Henny Armstrong climbs into the ring today and faces Ceferino Garcia, claimant of the worlds middleweight crown and one of the deadliest punchers in the business.

The fighters, clashing for the second time, are slated for 10 rounds with Garcia's New York-California recognized 160-pound title at stake, is to begin around 10 p.m. PST.

Promoter Charlie MacDonald predicted a crowd of 35,000 would jam Gilmore stadium if the weather remains clear as expected, and gate receipts would flirt with the $100,000 mark.

Canadiens Are Beaten 4-2 By Boston Team

By JACK CALDER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

In this day of frantic scrambling and sudden change in the big business of hockey there stands out the remarkable career of Harold (Mush) March, whose entire time as a professional has been spent with Chicago Black Hawks.

The moon-faced right wingman from Sitton, Sask., jumped to the National League from Regina's Dominion junior champions of 1928. He has been at Chicago ever since, always a steady worker and sometimes sensational. The biggest stroke he ever accomplished was a goal that brought the Hawks the world championship in the last game of the Stanley Cup series of 1934 against Detroit.

Mush March

At the age of 32 he is still punching important ones, like the goal he fired last night to give Chicago a 2-1 victory over the Rangers at New York.

March whizzed in to pick up Bill Carse's pass through the defence and sink the winning goal in the second period. Earlier Bill Thoms had scored for Chicago and Neil Colville for the Rangers.

Through the third period Goalie Paul Goodman rounded out another in his long string of sensational performances, nullifying the Rangers' passing plays. His goaltending and the determined backchecking of the Hawk forwards kept safe their fourth victory in seven starts against the Blueshirts.

Bruins Win 4-2.

Boston Bruins leaped back into a first-place tie with the Rangers by defeating the Canadiens 4-2 at Montreal, their sauerkraut line breaking loose to score twice in the final period. The Canadiens' sixth straight defeat left them almost without hope of a playoff spot.

In the first two periods the hapless Habitants matched goals by Dit Clapper and Roy Conacher with a couple by Tony Demers and Louis Trudel. Then Woody Dumart sped away on a lone rush to put Boston ahead with less than eight minutes to play and Milt Schmidt completed the scoring with the aid of his linemates, Dumart and Bobby Bauer.

Nick Metz

The Maple Leafs, gaining new life and confidence with the return of Sylvanus Apps to their line-up, defeated the Detroit Red Wings 3-1 at Toronto. Magnificent rushes by Nick Metz and Wally Stanowski for goals in the second and third periods were the main Toronto blows. Lex Chisholm got the other Leaf goal and Cecil Dillon scored for Detroit.

Things started to look up for the Leafs when Apps came back after an almost continuous absence since Christmas through injuries. Sweeney Schriner, out for three weeks, may return to the line-up Saturday night.

"before long" that they are in the war.

But the Prime Minister did not dwell at length on his "total war" theme and instead made a rather unique hustings speech, mentioning the royal visit. He told his constituents that he was partly responsible for the visit of Their Majesties and personally extended an invitation to them at their Coronation.

In Splendid Shape.

Mr. Mackenzie King also referred to his own health and said "I never was in better shape in my life."

To National Government advocates he said that "bitter and contemptible" words would not make for unity and co-operation and he said that no word of his during the campaign would alienate the friendship and co-operation of any man or woman of any political party. He said later, however, that this was not to be construed as indicating a coalition government plan.

Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, said in an Ontario network broadcast it was a "pitiful exhibition" for Prime Minister Mackenzie King to deal in his public addresses with a comparison of Canada's defences in 1939 against those of 1935 because the hope of general disarmament did not fade until 1935.

He charged that some Canadian troops still are drilling without uniforms and without proper arms. It was untrue that three contingents of Canadian troops crossed the Atlantic fully clothed and fully equipped.

"You should never be forgiven, Mr. King, for playing with the truth so carelessly when the lives of men are at stake," he said. "You know they were not fully equipped. You know they are being equipped in Great Britain."

Speech Censored.

Col. Drew said that his speech had been "heavily censored."

"For that reason it may at some points be disconnected," he said. "Free speech has become a vital issue in this election. You are prevented from hearing much that you should hear over the radio.

"It therefore becomes doubly important that you attend public meetings so that you may hear the real facts fully and frankly discussed. There has never been a more critical election in Canadian history, nor business more important to you personally than the government of Canada. It is your duty to play your part in assuring good government by assisting some candidate and exercising your democratic right to vote."

(James Moore, manager of Station CFRB, said the same procedure was followed in the case of Col. Drew's address as in the case of all radio addresses.

(The management of a station reads and interprets an address according to the Defence of Canada Regulations, Moore said, and if the speaker is not satisfied with the station's ideas of what is censorable he can appeal to the official censor for the district. He said that "that is the procedure followed in Col. Drew's case.")

Wants the Names.

Labor Minister McLarty, speaking in a 30-minute Ontario network broadcast at Ottawa asked Conservative Leader Manion to name the "best Liberals" who are ready to join in forming a National government.

Mr. McLarty referred to Dr. Manion's Winnipeg statement that many of the best Liberals, who are outside the government, were ready to assist in formation of his proposed National government.

"If these best Liberals outside the King government are ready to join with him in forming a National government, is there any reason why he should not name them specifically?" asked the Minister. "Who is ashamed? Is he or are they?

"Is not Dr. Manion asking the Canadian people to give him a blank cheque as to who will form his government on the one hand and what program that government proposes on the other?" Mr. McLarty asked.

The Minister mentioned the sudden dissolution of parliament Jan. 25 and said that it is the supreme right of any government, if doubt is cast upon its interpretation of the people's will, to appeal at any time to the people themselves.

Backs The Highway.

Support of the British Columbia-Alaska highway and opposition to annexation of the Yukon by British Columbia were expressed at Dawson City, Y.T., by Hon. George Black in formally opening his campaign as a National government candidate in Yukon constituency.

Mr. Black, Speaker of the House of Commons during the Conservative government of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett and in the last Parliament Mrs. Black represented Yukon constituency because of Mr. Black's illness.

If Canada accords highway access to Alaska, said Mr. Black in announcing his platform, Canada in return should be granted similar concessions across the Alaska panhandle to the Yukon.

Heaps On Warpath

At Niagara Falls, A. A. Heaps, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation member of the last parliament for Winnipeg North, called the action of Prime Minister Mackenzie King in dissolving parliament "contemptuous."

Mr. Heaps said he never had known of "a more autocratic action than the one taken by Premier King when he dissolved parliament in the very high-handed manner in which he did last month."

"No man should deal with parliament in the contemptuous manner which the Prime Minister did," he said. "If we are going to look up to parliament, the Prime Minister should set an example and he didn't do it on January 25."

Canada's wartime defence regulations are necessary to prevent sabotage and so long as they are administered in the right "spirit" there should be no objection, Justice Minister Lapointe said at Edmonton.

He said that while he is Minister of Justice he will administer the regulations so that enemies of the country can do no "dirty work."

A United Canada.

Replying to criticism of Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Conservative Minister of Trade, that the regulations are "arbitrary and dictatorial," Mr. Lapointe said the Government always uses discretion according to the information available when dealing with cases coming under the regulations.

Canada was more united now than at any time in its history and Prime Minister Mackenzie King was responsible for that unity, Mr. Lapointe said.

He stated Conservative Leader Manion had charged he and Mackenzie King had joined in a "conspiracy" to wreck national unity. The only conspiracy he knew of was Dr. Manion's conspiracy against himself. Every speech the Conservative leader delivered was decreasing the Canadian people's estimation of Dr. Manion's ability.

Predicts Dissension.

Dissension will reign if Hon. R. J. Manion and a National Government are elected, Revenue Minister Ilsley said at Liverpool, N.S.

Dr. Manion would find it difficult to obtain unity, Mr. Ilsley said, with the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation opposed to sending troops overseas and Social Credit members favoring conscription. Also there was no representation of the French-Canadian people in Dr. Manion's ranks.

Although conscription would "jeopardize" the future of Canada, the Federal Social Credit Party had urged conscription in the House of Commons, M. J. Coldwell, National chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, charged in an address at Calgary.

The Social Crediters were the only party to urge conscription, he said. "Intelligent leaders of all parties are agreed that conscription of men would split this country from end to end."

"Mr. Blackmore, Social Credit Leader, stated that conscription of finance, industry and men must go together," said Mr. Coldwell. "Support, therefore, for Social Credit and New Democracy candidates will be considered to have been a vote for an all-inclusive policy of conscription."

All Countries In It.

"We can assure before this war is over, all countries of Europe will be in it," Transport Minister Howe warned a Liberal campaign meeting at London.

His plea to Canadians to bend every effort to support the Dominion's role was climaxed with the admonition, "We'll all know we're in the conflict before long."

"But I believe," he said, "that we'd rather face the present danger than the shadow of war which has hovered over us in the past few years. We Canadians believe it is better to see the thing out—win or lose—and get the question of peace settled for our lifetime."

The Transport Minister said that Germany outnumbers the Allies in numbers of armed men, and in aircraft, but while she has a "powerful military machine, France and England are gaining strength steadily," he said.

Mr. Howe claimed that for the first time in the history of this country, "we can say that Canada is adequately defended from the air." Outlining air advances since 1935, he stressed that the personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force is now "9,000 highly-trained men" and that well-equipped squadrons have been built up for the defence of both coasts.

On taking office the Liberal Government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King undertook to restore Canada's position in aviation and progress "has been spectacular," Mr. Howe said.

A system of modern airports had been completed by Federal co-operation with municipalities and by Federal construction away from municipal centres, Mr. Howe said. In all the Transport Department built or improved 109 airdromes, including 15 principal airports, 23 secondary airports and 50 emergency landing fields on the trans-Canada system and 21 airports on branch lines.

He forecast a service from Toronto to London and Windsor. This would start shortly and ground work is being laid for another service connecting principal Quebec cities.

in the telephone conversation, stopped at the home of Crawford.

Crawford accompanied the police to the scene of the shooting where he was placed under arrest by Provincial Officer Douglas.

Shotgun Seized.

London Provincial Police are said to have taken possession of a double-barrelled shotgun and then turned it over to Provincial Officer Douglas.

Body of Carter was taken to funeral parlors at St. Mary's. The body will be viewed today by a jury under Coroner Dr. J. G. Grieve of Stratford.

The shots were fired at a distance of about 30 feet from the victim. One struck Carter in the chest and the other in the left leg.

Crawford, a married man, until about a year ago had lived on the Embro Road where he had farmed.

Carter was born at Clandeboye in Diddulph Township, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Carter. His widow and two children, James and Alice, survive.

ently was the point Hitler will stress when he and Welles meet.

MORE ABOUT—

marking that "after a short period of comparative immunity," German raiders are suffering renewed casualties, mostly due to pursuit by British fighter planes.

Raid For Raid

Many Britons believe that even if the German air force is capable of mass raids on Britain, it is refraining either because Germany cannot afford to expend men and materials or for fear of reprisals. Everyone in Britain believes that reprisals would be launched against Berlin and other major objectives.

The comparatively late start made by Britain and France in "serious air rearmament" has become an advantage.

Germany's big air fleet already is built, said an aviation observer, and consequently it is becoming obsolete while the Allies "have gained in modernity of design what they lacked in numbers."

He commented that this air war is being fought "on drawing boards and in design shops no less than in the field."

Already, it was asserted, "crack fighters and bombers in service on both sides are outmoded by newer types on the stocks" of factories, and "Germany is faced with rapidly growing obsolescence of thousands of aircraft so far used only as threats."

In an effort to keep abreast of design, Germany is reported to have developed a new Heinkel plane powered with new type Daimler-Benz motors producing 4,500 horsepower and 350 miles an hour speed.

British designers say they will have an answer to this or any new German craft, "just as our Vickers Spitfires and Hawker Hurricanes have mastered existing Heinkels and Dorniers."

(Germany yesterday celebrated the fifth anniversary of its air force reorganization in contravention of the Versailles treaty. Air Marshal Goering, in an order of the day, praised German aerial power.)

Still Moving Staff Out.

Even though mass bombing attacks have not developed, the British Government has been periodically warning the public that an aerial "blitzkrieg" might come with the warm weather of spring, and has continued to move hundreds of clerks out of London to disperse the machinery of Government.

Meanwhile, the War Office expects the Army to absorb about 25,000 men monthly throughout the summer. Some of higher medical rating than required for the Army will be drafted into the Air Force and the Navy.

Many will be kept in vital civilian jobs under a national registration program. Plans are being made to employ at least 1,000,000 women in munitions factories and other war industries.

The extent of expansion of fighting forces on land, sea and in the air, is cloaked in secrecy, but the Navy is known to be adding more than a ship a week to its effective strength.

It has borne the brunt of the war thus far, with 30 naval vessels lost and about 3,000 men killed in the struggle against mines and submarines, surface craft and aerial raiders.

The convoy system, adopted at the opening of the war, has guarded about 9,000 merchant ships, with the loss of only a score.

The cost of this and other war efforts is not often mentioned these days. Taxation takes at least 37 per cent. of everyone's income to help provide the £6,000,000 ($26,000,000) a day which the war is costing, but Britons accept this as part of their inevitable burden.

Although the Balkan conferees failed to pledge military co-operation in the event of attack by an outside power, observers believe that if Rumania is invaded, Turkey, backed by the Near East Allied army, will intervene. Yugoslavia is believed now to be under the benevolent wing of Italy.

Appeals Heard To Remit Taxes Vacant Houses

Appeals to the Court of Revision this week were mainly applications for remission of taxes on vacant tenements, which includes houses, apartments, upper stories and premises that generally comply with the statute.

Business tax of Canada Packers Limited payable this year on part of the Hayes building, Water street north, was set at $14.66. Occupancy was discontinued.

Bradburns Limited asked to be relieved of tax on Louis and Charlotte street properties sold on November 1, 1939. The Court contended that it had no power to grant this appeal, but reserved judgment to enable Alderman H. I. Bradburn and City Solicitor Huycke to consider the case.

Remission of 1938 vacancies on which the taxes were payable last year by Bradburns Limited were granted as follows: Rooms D and E, 92½ George street, $20.70; Room G over 338 George street, $10.35; Room H, over 336 George street, $6.90.

Isadore Black applied on business tax assessed in 1939 on both 308 George street and room 106, Barrie Building. The tax was fixed at $7.92 on the room in the Barrie Building and $8.25 on the George street store.

J. S. Bell was granted remissions on 197 Hunter street, $8.80, vacant 8 months; and 199 Hunter street, $3.56, four months.

Mis Mary Griffith, two vacancies for entire year 1939—724 water street $19.38 and 123 Park Hill Road, $11.96. Remitted.

First Prize Ship

At An Eastern Canadian Port, March 1 (CP).

THE steamship Poland, the first German prize of the Second Great War to be brought to a port on Canada's Atlantic coast, was moored here today.

She was the Duesseldorf before she was captured in December off the coast of Chile by the British cruiser Despatch. She was re-named after Commodore Poland of the Despatch.

Germany protested when the vessel, with a prize crew aboard, was taken through the Panama Canal. Taken to Bermuda a crew, consisting mostly of Nova Scotian seamen, were put aboard and she was brought here Wednesday.

Pumper Price Is Up $3,000

The Bickle pumper recently bought by the City Council for the fire department has gone up in price $3,000 since the order was placed. When Peterborough signed its contract for a new machine the price was something over $9,000. Today it is more than $12,000.

Alderman McIntyre told his committee last night that this news should be of a great deal of satisfaction because of the fact that the Peterborough order was placed at the lower figure. He has previously said that if the pumper had been bought a year ago, when he was urging it, there would have been a further substantial saving.

The Bickle Company wrote that they are now at work on the Peterborough pumper, and that they intend to deliver to this city a machine of which the people will be as proud as the company. Alderman McIntyre was given authority to send Chief Gimblett to the factory in Woodstock for about a week before the machine is ready for delivery, in order that he will be thoroughly familiar with its working details.

New Machinery.

The Board of Works Thursday night became impatient with a report of the manner of enquiring about available road machinery and decided they had better take to the telegraph medium.

Alderman Dutton was informed that road rollers are not manufactured in Canada, and on that information he suggested that the proposed purchase of a small machine should be put off indefinitely.

"I don't believe we should pay a prohibitive price with 42 per cent. duty," Alderman Dutton said.

The Board decided to send immediate telegraph enquiries to road construction companies, asking whether they had any of these machines for sale, even if they were used.

Sentenced Twice Within 10 Days

William Weatherspoon, a transient, is going to get tired of the Peterborough county jail unless he changes his ways. Last week he ran foul of the police because of too great a cargo of liquid refreshment and went to jail for seven days in default of the fine of $10 and costs imposed by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.

He was released from the county bastille Thursday morning but found some generous citizens during the day and by evening had accumulated what might be described as a noticeable glow. As a result he was twice ejected from the rest station on Charlotte street before being finally garnered by the police.

This morning he pleaded guilty as a second offender to a drunk charge and urged Magistrate Langley to be as lenient as possible.

"Fifty dollars and $4.50 costs or a month in jail," replied the Cadi. "That is all the law allows me to do."

Joint Buying Of Gas Urged

Tenders for gasoline and oil used by the city were opened by the Board of Works Thursday night, and it was stated that the economy behind the wholesale buying could be increased if the other civic departments would join in the purchase.

A resolution by Alderman Gordon, seconded by Alderman Cotton, instructed the clerk to write the Utilities Commission and Police Commission, urging them to buy their "gas" and oil from the city's tanks. Mayor Hamilton said that the police cars got most of their gasoline from the municipal supply.

It was stated that the saving would amount to at least 4½ cents a gallon.

The tenders were referred to Aldermen Wilson and Dutton and City Engineer Parsons for review and also a report for the guidance of the Board. Alderman Wilson was given authority to open any tenders that are to be submitted to the Board, and also to consider them with Mr. Parsons and summarize the information for the other members.

HUGE TIN DREDGE

Malaya is to have the world's largest tin dredge, 304 feet long, powerful enough to dig 138 feet below water level, and with 123 buckets each of 20 cubic feet capacity.

Garbage Tenders Are Reviewed By Committee

Consideration of two tenders for the garbage collection contract for the year beginning April 1 advanced another measured stage at Thursday night's meeting of the property committee of the council.

One of the bids was from Herb J. Withers, the present contractor, for $11,000, and the other from W. T. Hughey for $9,940, a difference of $1,060. Members of the committee generally acknowledged that they could not overlook a spread of that amount, but most of them were concerned about positive assurance that Mr. Hughey would be able to fulfill the contract, remembering an experience of default some years ago. He told the committee that two of his brothers, Ernest and Everett, were ready to provide any financial assistance he required, and for that reason the committee decided to ask them to sign his tender.

Sharply opposing renewal of the Withers contract, Alderman Stocker contributed a bit of broad humor in the course of the discussion. Alderman McCannan introduced the subject of the new contract with a tribute to the obliging and faithful manner in which Mr. Withers had done his work. He said Peterborough had one of the best garbage collection systems at the most reasonable cost in Ontario, and that he could prove by comparison with expense in other cities.

Alderman McCannan reminded Alderman Stocker that he had been in favor of motorizing the system a few years ago and having the job done by the city at an estimated cost of $17,000.

Alderman Stocker replied to the effect that Alderman McCannan had been closeted in his office with Mr. Withers on Wednesday, and he added, "Why, you're sleeping with him," a remark that was greeted with a gale of laughter.

"Walter, you're going too far," Mayor Hamilton protested.

"Both those men came to my office," Alderman McCannan said quietly. "Have I got to go out on the street to talk to them. They came to me for certain information, and I tried to give it to them."

"Withers is a particular friend of yours," Alderman Stocker said later to the chairman, and when Mr. Hughey later entered in the room he greeted him with "Take a seat there boy so they can get a look at you."

Alderman Dutton commented that the collection of garbage was being well done by Mr. Withers. "I hold no brief for him, but I know this council got in a bad hole once, and I think we want to be absolutely certain that we are not going to get into another."

Mr. Hughey described the equipment he was planning in the event of getting the contract. He has two teams and his brother has other horses, making available five teams altogether, with another team to be bought. He has three suitable wagons which he would paint and rig with tarpaulins, and he could buy three more. He said they were comparatively cheap because the demand for them was not what it used to be.

"I was also planning to buy a used one-ton truck," Mr. Hughey said. "I have sufficient capital, and I have been figuring with my brothers what it would take for some time. I am not taking the contract to make a fool of the city and of myself. If I fell down on this job it would be hard for me to get others even taking out a cellar."

Mr. Withers Heard.

Mr. Withers was next called into the committee room. He said he was using six teams steadily "to give the horses a square deal," and that prices of grain and shoeing and other items affecting the cost of the work were going up.

Alderman Stocker stated that there were 350 oil burners in the city and hundreds of tons less of United States coal were being burned, with a resultant decrease in the quantity of ashes to be collected.

Mr. Withers said there was very little reduction because more houses were being built, taking the place of those equipped with oil-burning furnaces. And in the meantime the tonnage of garbage was higher.

"There's just one thing we've got to remember," Alderman Stocker said. "There is a difference of $1,060 in the two tenders and it's public money we're spending."

Mr. Withers declared that he was paying his men forty cents an hour, and he recalled that last year when he was the only bidder he reduced the amount of his tender by $400 as a consideration to the council.

Petition Presented.

Mr. Withers left a petition with the committee. He said all the business men in the city were well suited with his work, and that he had always been willing to cooperate in every way possible. He said the petition was largely signed by citizens who wanted him to get the contract again.

"Say," said Alderman Stocker, "I can go out and get a list to hang every man on this committee."

"And the chairman twice," Alderman Gordon laughingly interjected.

"There's $1,060 difference. That's all," Alderman Stocker repeated.

Alderman Dutton remarked that he wanted to be in the position where he did not feel that he was taking chances with a job that was very important to every home in the city.

"You need a lot of experience to collect garbage," Alderman Stocker said with a sting of sarcasm.

"You certainly do," was Alderman Dutton's comment.

"We don't get these tenders in early enough," said Alderman Wilson. "They should have been in by the first of the year. Now we are in the position of having only a month to deal with this matter."

Alderman Bradburn suggested that if the letting of this contract generated so much difficulty it was about time the city took over the work.

Alderman Dutton proposed that if Mr. Hughey's two brothers were actually in the background as financial aids they should also sign the tender for $9,940.

A motion by Alderman Stocker, seconded by Alderman Dutton, recommended that Ernest and Everett Hughey be asked to join with their brother in signing his bid for the job. It was adopted.

Man Born On February 29 In Year 1786 Dies 80 Years Later On February 29

Although it occurred nearly a century and a half ago, W. F. Huycke, K.C., related a twenty-ninth of February birth that is remembered in his family's records as something extremely rare in human living.

His great grandfather, Cornelius Huycke, was born in Prince Edward county on the last day of February in the leap year of 1796, and died on his eighty-first birthday in 1876 on the same calendar day, February 29. Born on that day, he lived exactly eighty years, and it is told that he died suddenly at a family gathering in celebration of his birthday anniversary, the cause of his death being a heart attack probably due to excitement of the occasion.

Mr. Huycke's great great grandfather was a United Empire loyalist who crossed the lake from the United States and settled in Prince Edward county.

Corinthian Lodge Teams Win Two Of Three Main Events At Picnic

The annual Masonic winter picnic—the only picnic of the year at which there are no ants, one Mason declares—was held in the Y.M.C.A. Thursday night and was a most enjoyable event. Over 200 members of Peterborough, Corinthian and Royal Arthur Lodges were in attendance and the program committee saw that there were no dull moments from start to finish.

Bowling, volley ball and billiards were the set pieces in the competition line and in addition to these events there was table tennis for those who were particularly energetic and bridge for the members who preferred to take their exercise sitting down. The splendid facilities of the Y.M.C.A. were entirely at the disposal of the Masonic fraternity and they made excellent use of them.

Corinthian Lodge had the satisfaction of winning two out of the three major competitions. Their bowling team captained by Robert Simmons and consisting of Carlyle Ferguson, Harry Baptie, Harry Cordery and Arthur Knott spilled the pins with too much accuracy for the quintettes from the other two lodges. In the volley ball battle Corinthian Lodge again flashed to the fore. With Stan Payne as captain and such volley ball experts as Herb. T. Cranford, Russ Kitchen, E. Walker Jones, Richard Williams and J. L. Gillespie they had too much class for the rest of the field.

It was different in the billiards contest however for the team from Peterborough Lodge proved the class of the three outfits. Fred Rappe was the skipper of the successful team and he had with him as wizards of the cue Max Metheral, Ed. Hardie and Frank Bowness.

St. Paul's and St. John's church league basketball squads played an exhibition game in the gym for the entertainment of the Masons and scores of the visitors folowed the battle with close attention as St. Paul's won 40 to 19.

At the close of the various competitions, a most enjoyable half hour was spent in community with Ross Dobbin as master of ceremonies. Singing was led by a quartette composed of Messrs Anderson, Downey, Lawrence and Pitchford and then refreshments were served as a windup to a memorable evening. In point of attendance and enjoyment this year's winter picnic proved one of the most successful yet staged and the Y.M.C.A. officials and the committee which had the affair in hand are entitled to orchids for the smooth manner in which the whole program was completed.

Salary Increases Given Teachers

LINDSAY, March 1.—(ENS)—The Lindsay Board of Education increased its estimates for the current year by $4,700 at a meeting last night. The board will ask the taxpayers to raise $59,869.85 for the purposes of education. Members said the increased cost of coal, increases in teachers' salaries and decreases in government subsidies and payments from the county forced the increase.

The sum of $23,160.81 will be required for Collegiate Institute purposes during 1940 and $36,709.04 for the public schools.

Based on a schedule put in force some years ago, the salaries of several High school teachers have been increased. Men teachers in the public schools were increased $100 per year and lady teachers receiving less than $1,000 were increased $50.

One dress worn by Phoebe, the heroine (Ruth McNeely) was white trimmed with silver and more than one girl was heard to remark that it would be a wonderful wedding dress.

ELKS IN THE WOODS

Arrival of the Kingan elks at Apsley provided a local holiday for the school children, Alderman Roy told the Examiner last night. The whole community turned out for the event, and when the animals were released they leisurely took off toward the open spaces and disappeared over a little hill. They were gone from sight in several minutes. Alderman Roy said he took his camera along, and believed he got some interesting shots. One of them was a bull elk leaping from the truck as if it were going straight toward the camera. There are now fourteen or fifteen elks in the Apsley district. Stewart Brown of the village took a hand in their dispersal.

Library Board Elects Officers

NORWOOD, March 1.—The annual meeting of the Norwood Public Library Board was held Wednesday evening and P. M. Grover was re-elected chairman with Mrs. Carleton, secretary-treasurer.

The property committee reported the Libary Building in good condition; and the book committee reported an additional 275 books of the different classes put on the shelves during 1939.

The circulation for last year was about double that of 1938. This is due in part to the greater interest shown by the children in the books provided for them, and which the Board wishes to encourage.

The Librarian's report is as follows: number of paying members, 28; number of adult readers, 238; number of juvenile readers, 107; number of juvenile books read, 4,175; number of adult fiction read, 5,257; number of classed books read, 766; total number of books read in 1939 was 10,366.

Geo. Willshaw War Veteran Dies In 70th Year

The proud record of George Thomas Willshaw in service of his King and country was closed late yesterday afternoon when he died at his home at 699 Elcome Crescent after a week's illness, in his 70th year.

Descendants of George Willshaw in years to come may well look back with pride at the inheritance of rugged faithfulness he has left them. For his record stands second to none in all Canada in defending the right.

At the age of 46 years George Willshaw, in 1916, donned the uniform of this country and went to France to fight by the side of his three sons. One of those sons gave his life in war, another was badly wounded, but the father escaped scot free, although he was on active service with them.

It was in 1914 that the first of his sons, George, joined the Imperial Army in England. He served continuously until 1917 when he was killed in action. Robert, another son, joined the 93rd Battalion in Peterborough in 1916 along with his father and was sergeant for a time in the same platoon as that in which his father was a private. A year earlier, in 1915, another son, James, joined the 18th Battalion. He was wounded by shrapnel at Hill 70 in 1917.

Real War Buddies

Father and three sons kept in constant touch with each other throughout their soldiering career, and for the rest of his life George Willshaw knew full companionship, that rare estate, with his sons. They had served on equal footing with him, and he with they, and their relationship one to another was deeper, closer, even than that of father and son — they were war buddies.

On March 4 two years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Willshaw celebrated their golden wedding anniversary and received telegrams of congratulation from the late Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, and from Lieutenant-Governor, the Hon. Albert Matthews. Those telegrams were his country's recognition of the great service George Willshaw had done his country. Yesterday, four days before Mr. and Mrs. Willshaw would have celebrated their 52nd anniversary, and with Canada at war again, George Willshaw died.

Come to Peterborough in 1912

Born in London, England, he was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Willshaw and came to Peterborough from his native city in 1912, bringing most of his family with him. For a time he was employed by the Quaker Oats Company here, and after the War worked in Detroit at his trade, that of a brass buffer. For the past five years, however, he has been retired.

He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church and of the Canadian Legion.

Surviving besides his wife, formerly Louise Langley, are five daughters, Mrs. Herman Shire of Detroit, Mr. Thomas Ball of Peterborough, Mrs. Darrell Shannon of Toronto, Mrs. Harold Dodson of Detroit, and Mrs. Jack Foster of Detroit; and three sons, James and Robert of Peterborough, and Charles of Detroit.

The funeral will be on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of his son, Robert Willshaw, 721 Elcome Crescent, Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson of St. John's Church officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake Cemetery.

FAIR & MILD

By Peter West

In his autobiography "Life is an Adventure," Dr. Manion tells how that after he had completed his medical studies in Canada he went over to Edinburgh, Scotland, to take a post-graduate course there, and that he took his examination at the end of four months' study instead of the usual six or twelve months' study. In this examination he was plucked, but shortly before relating this incident he tells that at this time he had the knack of making his examiners think he knew a great deal more than he really did.

The Leopard hasn't changed his spots; he is still the same old Bob, now trying to make the people of Canada think he knows a great deal more than he does.

Political life for the Doc. is still an adventure inasmuch as he has been in turn a Liberal, a Unionist (because he favoured conscription), a Liberal-Conservative and now a Nationalist.

Burglars Foiled In Attempt To Open Safe

Burglars who broke into the garage of Lillico Motors at Charlotte and Aylmer streets early this morning failed in an attempt to smash open the safe and got nothing but two defective revolvers and a few old coins for their trouble.

A determined effort to force the safe had been made. The outside was battered and the combination of the container had been smashed but the safe was too stout to be cracked by such efforts. The intruders finally gave it up and turned their attention to the cash drawers which were opened and to the desks in the office, the papers from which were scattered all over the floor.

The break-in was discovered by Constable Gordon K. Hardy while patrolling his beat at 2.30 o'clock this morning. He noticed that the glass in one of the big doors had been broken and on investigating found that the place had been entered. Ivan T. Lillico was notified and on looking over the garage announced that the only things missing were the two old revolvers and a few ancient coins.

Redingotes Are To Be Popular

The redingote costume in matched wool, or in printed silk or rayon coupled with wool, is scheduled for popularity this spring. Much has been said about colored ground prints that are matched to colored wools which are so new-looking in dusty pastels and muted medium shades. But the black and white print coupled with a black wool, or silk bengaline coat is always a smart standby. Not only will the idea of the ensemble itself appeal, but the combination of the materials, and the types of small fresh-looking prints will contribute to the new look.

Some of the prints are quiet, very formalized one of tiny motifs like diminutive trees. Others are printed versions of narrow woven wool stripes. Still others have motifs worked into squared arrangements, but are not checks; or a variation of the stripe idea with small motifs strung out in stripes, all very feminine, very tailored.

Wax Coarse Red Cross Yarn For Easier Knitting

A correspondent writes: "I notice, in a news item in your paper, that the Red Cross knitters are suffering from tender fingers caused by handling the wool given out for soldiers' socks.

"When winding wool from the skein I would suggest that it be passed under a disc of white wax such as is used by knitting factories where all yarns are waxed before manufacturing into wearing apparel. These discs, about the size of a silver dollar, one-half inch thick, with hole in the centre, may be purchased from shops carrying knitters' supplies.

"To wash skeined wool it is only necessary to place several hanks over a mop handle, immerse them about a dozen at a time in a deep vessel containing water (95o F.) with mild soap suds, give the skeins a half turn several times. Squeeze out the soap solution by passing the hand down each skein while the yarn is raised on the mopstick by an assistant, then rinse in the same manner in clean water at the same temperature. The writer has successfully washed hundreds of skeins which contained too much oil. The skeins are left on the mop-handle until dry. This washing will make most yarn soft, but if very coarse wool should be waxed to protect the finger tips."

KNITTED CLASSIC

By ALICE ALDEN

IT'S THE longer waistline in sweaters, too. Let's skip the corset which might be essential if the talk were about this season's frocks and suit jackets, and think instead of the many uses to which such a sports item can be put. Palm Beach has taken over the coat sweater in a big way, not odd considering the weather, wearing it over both slacks and smart wool frocks similar to the heather jersey with wide green suede belt pictured. Golf, spring walks, country week-ends and early morning drives all call for the casual knitted classic. Quite as popular and going as many places once more is the bright red flannel coat.

New Hair Styles Are Important To Spring Hats

(By FLORA)

How smart you'll look in your chic Spring bonnet will depend most definitely on the head upon which you place it. More than for seasons past, there must be close collusion between the well-groomed woman and her coiffure—and she who is wise will entrust her looks to the skilled manipulation of one who who is master of his craft.

Returning yesterday from Toronto, where she attended the annual Hairdressers' convention, my own skillful operator was telling me many interesting things about the new view on hair styles. "The upswept hair, which was untidy and hard to keep in place is out," she said. "But the upward trend, in waves and sculptured curls, and done in short hair, is in. The news in curls is the diverse or waved curl, which can be combed out, and does not have to be rolled." The cut of the hair is becoming more and more important, since neatness and moulding are being used so effectively, she also informed me. Hair is worn off the face, for the most part, but only if becoming to the individual.

To most of us the news that deep, shadowy waves are coming back into their own this Spring will be greeted with glad cries of relief—the gleaming undulations which remind one of water-wave days. And how becoming they are—these new hair-dos which brush the hair up and back from the ears in soft waves, and leave it long, really long, in the back—a charming coiffure to compliment Spring's most captivating bonnets.

The new deep-crowned helmets and turbans, while very smart and effective, are a bit trying for all those fortunate ones who are faultlessly featured. To wear them confidently, soft bangs or a pompadour over the brow are imperative. You may scoff at the suggestion, but scoffing will change to enthusiasm at the flattering result.

Norwood Chapter Hears Miss Young

NORWOOD, March 1. — Miss Rachael Young of the Children's Aid Society, Peterborough, was the guest speaker at a public meeting of the 40th Northumberland Chapter of the I.O.D.E. held in the parish room on Wednesday afternoon. There was a good attendance of I.O.D.E. members and a number of other interested ladies.

Prior to the public meeting the annual meeting of the Chapter was held with the Regent, Mrs. W. B. Tucker, in charge and splendid reports of the year's work were given.

The educational secretary, Mrs. W. H. Giffen, reported that an atlas of the world had been procured and presented to the Norwood school, also a library of books approved by the Ontario Department of Education. Prizes had been awarded to public school pupils for scrap books of the royal visit. Ten calendars, twenty-five copies of "Canada Within the Empire" and two copies of "Historical Facts About Canada" were presented to schools in the district.

A very gratifying report of the wool committee for war work was given by Mrs. Alex. Kempt. In all the committee has received 102 pairs of socks, 17 scarves, 17 pairs of mitts, 131 pairs of wristlets, 9 helmets and aero caps, 47 magazines, 5 packs of cards and a number of books. A large share of these have already been sent away.

The sewing committee reported that 245 handkerchiefs had been hemmed for the Red Cross, two comforters made, a number of slings tagged and thirty personal bags made.

Following the business, Mrs. Tucker introduced the speaker, who in a very interesting manner, gave an instructive talk on the work of the Children's Aid throughout Peterborough County.

ST. LUKE'S BRANCH

Art Sayer was in charge of the regular meeting Thursday night. After the opening prayer and hymn a very interesting paper was read on "The life of the late Lord Tweedsmuir'. The president, Mrs. F. Curtis outlined her trip to Vancouver. She particularly stressed the work done by the hospital ships and missions in outlying places.

The remainder of the evening was spent in practicing for the play 'Romance of Jack and the Beanstalk.'

Do You Know?

Washable silks should be cleansed in a mild, warm suds (never in very hot water and never rubbed on a board), thoroughly rinsed until all soap is removed, and wrapped in a towel until sufficient water is absorbed to iron easily. Silks that are allowed to dry and then sprinkled for ironing may show water spots.

Woollen socks are apt to shrink and become felted after a few washings, however carefully they are done. However, if they are streched while damp on wooden stretchers and hung up they will dry quickly, remaining soft and woolly.

To avoid embarrassment by pulling out a torn or badly worn handkerchief, fold it when ironing in some distinctive way so that it will be easily recognized.

TRY A LIQUID SEASONING
For Your Next MEAT LOAF

WHEN making your next meat loaf we suggest that you try this new recipe given to us by a mother noted for her cooking. She uses minced beef, bread crumbs, a little grated onion, some salt and pepper and a teaspoonful of H. P. Sauce. "In my opinion," says this lady, "it is the H. P. Sauce which gives this meat loaf such unusually delicious flavour." That's why H. P. Sauce may be called a liquid seasoning for meat loaves, meat pies, soups, stews, gravies, macaroni and many other dishes.

This thick, fruity sauce has great flavouring strength. Only a little is required in cooking or when served with meat, fish, fowl, salads, sandwiches and so on. H. P. is the Empire's Appetizer from Old England.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by Mrs. MARY MOORE

Question. — My mother lived in Peterborough twenty years and is still taking The Peterborough Examiner although she has been home seven years and is not able to read now. I have enjoyed trying a lot of your recipes and the favorite recipes seem so different.

I would like to get the Cherry Cake that was in two years ago at Christmas, made with Maraschino cherries and almonds. Some one burnt the paper before I got it cut out. Would you let me know if I could get it please.—A.V.B.

Answer.—Thank you for your letter. That is a fine cake, and was recommended by the lady who sent it to me as "the best white fruit cake I ever tasted."

Cherry Cake (Delicious and a "good keeper).

One lb. butter, 1¾ lbs. cherries, ½ lb. blanched almonds, ½ lb. mixed peel, 4½ cups flour, 1 cup raisins, 2 cups white sugar, a pinch of salt, 6 large eggs, ½ cup cream, 1 teaspoon baking powder.

Method.—Flour the fruit and nuts with about ½ cup of the flour. Cream the butter, add the sugar and well beaten eggs. Sift together the flour, salt, and baking powder. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the cream, then add the fruit and nuts. Bake in well greased papered pans—about 2 medium loaves at about 325 deg. Fahr, for about 1½ to 2 hours.

Fashion Flashes

Long, simple basque bodices are buttoned down the centre front with style treatments accenting hips as in peplums, which fold back on themselves, introduced in jackets or in hip drapes of afternoon dresses or wide, contrasting bands on evening gowns.

The wrap around turban is slated for another enormous season. Favorite choice is the turban in jersey, crepe or novelty stripes, to be knotted into a chignon at the back of the head. Often these may be matched to boleros, and to slide fastened jackets for casual sports wear.

Pocket belts, a high novelty of this spring, stemming directly from the "Cash and Carry" pockets on dresses, lend zest to belts. In leather, contrast with bolero costumes, they offer something definitely new and in fabrics, in materials to match or of 1940.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Collegiate Students Present Barrie's Play 'Quality Street'

A new high in amateur theatricals was reached at the Collegiate Auditorium on Thursday evening when the Students' Council presented J. M. Barrie's famous four-act comedy "Quality Street" to a near capacity audience. It was an amusing presentation that fairly sparkled at times with clever acting, and throughout the entire program waves of merriment from tiny ripples to full-throated laughs were almost continuous in the audience.

Dramatics at the Collegiate were given a new impetus two years ago when R. L. Hale, B.A., of Lindsay was added to the teaching staff,and with Miss M. White, B.A., assisting he has directed the finest play ever staged by the young people. The crowd who enjoyed the play on Thursday evening were generous in their comments and it rates a jam-packed house this evening when the final showing will be given.

Comedy Romance.

Quality Street is a comedy romance cleverly written to lay stress on the humor and at the same time not detracting from the intensely human drama which makes the play so interesting. It is a story of maiden ladies, village gossip, love and war, with the heroine seeking to land a lover who almost breaks her heart by enlisting in the army.

The setting is England during the Napoleonic wars and the first scene is the blue and white room of the Misses Susan and Phoebe Throssel in Quality Street. Ruth McNeely uplays the part of Phoebe, a gay little creature filled with romance and a desire to set all male hearts pounding. Her sister Susan is ably portrayed by Irene Michaud, whose clever acting makes her the standout performer on the entire cast. She looks smart in the clothes of the times particularly in a purple organdie frock and usually wears a net over her hair as a sign that she has passed the age of love and marriage but not of hope. Quality Street occupied mainly by genteel maiden ladies is agog over the prospective wedding of Phoebe to Mr. Valentine Brown, a physician. Alas, Mr. Brown's intentions have been misread, for the war claims him and there is no wedding. Instead the sisters must eke out an existence by keeping a little school.

There is plenty of action in each of the three following scenes in the private school, at the military ball, and finally in the blue and white room again, but to reveal any more of the plot would be unfair to those who wish to see the play to-night.

Play Well Staged.

Stage scenery is particularly appropriate, an old-fashioned wooden secretary, a spinet, chairs and the old style settee which has tiny bits of ruffle around the legs all fit nicely into the quiet and dignified atmosphere of Quality Street, where prim maiden ladies sit knitting and revel in the gossipy tit-bits of the day.

The costumes are exquisite, and these alone are worth seeing in the opinion of many women who saw the comedy last evening.

The part of Valentine Brown, the hero, is taken by Ken Brown, a veteran trouper who has had parts in several amateur plays. He is given a run for acting honors, however, by Ensign Blades, an apple-cheeked soldier, played by Roy Hudson. Fanny Gishman takes the part of Fannie Willoughby, a maiden lady from Quality Street, and the part of Miss Mary Willoughby, elder sister to Fannie, is taken by Margaret Gertley. Miss Gertley, an exceptionally pretty maid, plays her part very well. Ruth Telford, as the maid, deserves a top bracket rating on her acting. Her voice imitation of an Irish domestic is not overdone, and she portrays cleverly the part of a maid who has the interests of her employers at heart, but is not in the least afraid of them and has a sharp and ready tongue for all occasions.

Others who took part and whose acting rates favorable comment were Bob Crocker, the recruiting sergeant, Marie Casey, who played the part of Miss Henrietta Turnbull, Connie Nicholson, as Charlotte Parratt, a light and fluffy girl. Leslie Groombridge is Master Arthur Wellesley Thomson, Lucille Doughty is Isabella, a pupil of the Throssel sistera, who wishes to acquire algebra. Harriet a disappointed maiden lady, is played by Norma Gray, Bob Carley is Lieutenant Spicer, and Gordon Lupton is an old soldier. A nice performance is given by Ralph Green who played the part of William Smith, a bad boy.

Dancers at the ball were John Wray, Andrew Scott, Bill Hamilton, Joan Pitchford, Bernice Newman, and Hannah Wright.

School children—Jean Ferguson, Joan Leslie, June Killingbeck, Irma Dayman, Pauline Conway, Ralph Sanderson, Bob Seymour, Arthur Turner, Harold Bedford, Blanche Quinn, and Murray Metcalfe.

School Orchestra Heard.

Between acts and before the curtain rose, music was provided by the school orchestra, under the direction of A. J. Weames, B.Sc. Two numbers in particular, Brahms' "Lullaby" and Blue Danube Waltz, drew much applause from the large gathering. The orchestra was strengthened by the addition of several ex-pupils, including George Gatfield, Russel Huggins, Harold Wilson, Lloyd Wells, Edward Everitt, and Hugh Davidson.

The regular members are:—James Lillico, Janet Prophet, Jewett Parr, and Shirley Ashby, first violins; Davis Graham, first cornet; Pearl Tretheway, Eva Parr, Donald Flett, 'cellos; piano, Elsie Chambers, Colin Jack, Jack Patterson, Jack Chambers, Eleanor Doyle, June Moore, Corinne Coones, second violins; Donald Forde, second cornet; Kenneth Mills and Jack Taylor, trombones; Ray Sutcliffe, drums.

Following are those who assisted Mr. Hale and Miss White in producing the play:

Miss H. Gerrard, costumes; Mr. F. E. Johnston, stage manager, lighting and scenery; Mr. Rutherford, Mr. Jackson and boys in the Industrial Arts Department were responsible for the fabrication of scenery: Earle Armstrong and Farley Hill were property men, and ack Crerar operated the curtain.

Miss M. Hicks, Miss G. Moore, and Miss Berniece Greatrix had charge of make-up; Miss D. Brisbin supervised the dances, and June Burrows was prompter.

Between the second and third act the Girls' Glee Club, directed by Miss Isabel Weddell, B.A., sang two numbers and an encore, which were well received, and after the first act, while the orchestra played the Blue Danube Waltz, Miss Leone Comstock delighted the audience with a lovely display of ballet dancing.

The play was presented by special arrangement with Samuel French, Ltd.

DOROTHY DIX

A Young Man Should Step Clear of the Marital State When He Knows That He Is Too Young, Hasn't Money Enough or a Job to Support a Wife.

One of the most pathetic figures in the world is the boy whose girl is trying to force him into marriage before he is ready for it. He is in love with the girl with the wild consuming passion of adolescence. He believes that this is the one and only love he will ever experience, and that his life will be lighted if anything should part them. But even in his madness he has a gleam of sanity that makes him hesitate to take a wife when he has no money, no job, no way of supporting her.

The girl, however, has no such lucid moments. She wants to be married and to heck with the consequences. So she begs, jollies, persuades, weeps, uses every feminine art of cajolery upon the boy to make him marry her right now, immediately. And if he still has backbone enough to refuse she threatens him with losing her.

Considering that marriage is no rose-strewn pathway for even the woman who marries a man able to provide for a family and that it is about the hardest and rockiest road any woman can elect to travel who marries a boy who cannot even give her bread and cheese to go with his kisses, it is hard to understand why girls are so anxious to hunt for trouble by marrying impecunious youths who have not got on their feet. But they do, and there isn't a day that I don't get letters from desperate lads whose sweeties are trying to drag them to the altar against their better judgment and their desire.

Sometimes a boy will tell me that he will have to give up going to college if he marries Mamie. Sometimes he says he will have to sacrifice all of his hopes and ambitions of following the profession he has dreamed of since he was a child if he marries Sadie. Sometimes it is his manhood that revolts at his dumping his wife down on his poor old father to support. Sometimes it is sheer fear of the future of a jobless man has that makes him hesitate to assume the responsibility of a wife. But with Mamie's head on his breast, with Mamie telling him how much she loves him and that she will die if she is separated from him; with Sadie weeping and saying that if they don't marry now something may come between them, or that she may fall in love with some other boy if he goes away, his judgment gets befuddled and he doesn't know what to do.

It is easy for us oldsters to smile at the boy's predicament, but it is tragical for him because on his decision depends the happiness and success of his whole future life. And he is too young and unsophisticated to realize that neither he nor the girl know what real love is, and that the girl's insistence on marriage before they are ready for it is based on a childish desire for change and excitement.

Taking it by and large, there is no truer saying than "a young man married is a young man marred." With few exceptions, a wedding ring will sink any boy in his teens because a wife and children will weigh him down beyond all possibilities of his ever rising to the surface again.

If he marries before he has had time to fit himself for any lucrative occupation, he has to take whatever poor job is offered him, and he can never even give that up to hunt for a beter one because with a family to be fed and housed and clothed he dare not risk even losing one day's pay.

Worse than that, the boy husband has all the hope and ambition killed in him, all the joy of life crushed out of him. Marriage isn't romance for him. It isn't even peace and comfort. It is nothing but bills that grow bigger and bigger all the time, anxiety about where the next meal is coming from, quarrels and wrangling between two children who blame each other for their plight.

And alas, so unromantic is human nature, even love seldom lasts in these premature marriages. The man who knows that he would have gone far in the world if he had not handicapped himself by an adolescent marriage realizes that he sold his birthright for a mess of pottage, and he comes to hate the woman who persauded him into the bargain.

So the answer to the boy who asks: "What must I do when the girl I love begs me to marry her and I know I am too young or haven't any money or job to marry one?" is: Don't do it.

Girl Friend of the Family Goat

Dear Miss Dix— I am engaged to a boy whose mother takes every cent he makes except a few dollars that he keeps for spending money. This prevents us from marrying as he can save nothing to go to housekeeping on. It isn't because his mother needs the money, for her husband makes good wages, and he has two sisters who stay at home and do nothing who should be earning their own living. I love this boy and hate to give him up, but I see no prospect of our ever being married if he is going to continue to give all of his money to his mother. What shall I do?

O. A. K.

ANSWER:

I think you should have a showdown with your fiance and tell him frankly that you see no use in waiting on him any longer if he prefers his mother to you and is going to let her wheedle everything he earns out of him.

Evidently his mother has elected him to the role of the Family Goat and is offering him up for the benefit of his sisters. There is neither sense nor profit in this sort of martyrdom, for the sisters would be happier and better off in every way if they were forced to support themselves instead of being pampered parasites.

Get Josephine Lawrence's new story, "But you are Young," and make your fiance read it. That deals with the subject of the family goat and is enough to make every Billy and Nanny get up on their hind legs and butt their way out of domestic slavery.

DR. STEPHEN BLACK—Brother of Mary.

CHAPTER VIII

She hung up before the excited Janis could reply.

Janis hurriedly called the manager of the bungalow court where Lucinda lived, asked to have Lucinda brought to the telephone. While Janis was waiting, Maud came in and inquired what she would like for lunch.

Janis sang out: "Anything, Maud —anything good. Isn't it a wonderful world, Maud?"

Maud's black face beamed, her white teeth glistened. "Yes'um, et shure is—jes like yuh-all say—ef yuh don' hav' ta work—an' yuh boyfren' ain't contankerous."

Janis' merry laughter filled the long room. "Better marry the boyfriend—let him support you," she suggested, gayly.

"None of my boy-fren's lak girls that don' work."

"Shame on you, Maud. I thought you had better sense," lightly chided Janis.

"'Yes'um," said Maud laconically, and hastily disappeared.

"Hello, Janis, what's on your mind?" It was Lucinda on the wire. "It's come—it's come. Oh, I'm so thrilled."

"You sound like you've landed a windfall. What on earth has happened?" Lucinda seemed slightly impatient.

"Why, the test—the test."

"Oh, I get it. I thought maybe Gable had dated you."

"But don't you think it's wonderful to get a test?"

"It's grand. Didn't I say I'd get you into pictures?"

"Yes—and I'll never know how to than you, Lucinda. You've—why you've done everything for me."

"Now, see here—you calm down. You've a lot to do. You have to get yourself fixed up. You'd better drive over and pick me up right away. We'll lunch downtown, then shove you into a beauty parlor, let them give you the works. I could use you car to do a few errands—pick you up around six."

'Fine; I'll be over in ten minutes."

Getting Ready

Janis slammed down the receiver. Her trembling fingers began untying the gold cord on her turquoise silk negligee as she ran toward her dressing room.

She peeled off her clothes in record time. She dashed into the shower, let cool water-needles lash her firm flesh until her whole body tingled. She stepped out and vigorously rubbed herself with an enormous bath towel, trying to realize what had happened. It had come at last—her big chance.

She scurried about her dressing room, pulled on the sheerest of silk undergarments, lately purchased under Lucindas keen supervision. They were lovely fragile things such as Janis had never owned before and, usually, she liked to stand before the long triple mirror and admire her slim little figure in them.

But not today. She must hurry, not spend too much time lunching with Lucinda; she must put herself in the hands of that clever Pierre for her hair, his girls for a facial, manicure, pedicure. She must, as Lucinda had expressed it, "get the works." She hoped Lucinda would think to phone the shop for an appointment. It was always so difficult to get Pierre with so many of his patrons refusing to be turned over to his assistants.

Into the Future

Janis was glad that she had several smart, expensively plain dresses. She ran a hand across the row of them, hanging so elegantly in her wardrobe. She selected a tailored black wool, drew it over her head, zipped up the side opening.

She perched on the edge of her dressing table stool to repair the damage to her hair. Her face looked back at her tautly, her wide blue eyes were filled with uncertainty close to fear. Impariently, she stuck a bobby pin in a gleaming auburn curl, forced a smile.

"That's better," she told herself. "Never say die. You've got to win out—you're going to.'

She leaped up, went to the wardrobe, snatched the cover off a cellophane box. She took up a black felt hat flaunting a saucy crimson feather, perched it on her head. She pranced before the triple mirror again, giving herself hasty inspection from all sides. Her slip didn't show, the seams in her almost colorless hose were straight, the ribbon bows on her black suede shoes were neatly tied, she would do.

She grabbed up her black suede handbag and her silver fox scarf and ran swiftly down the broad winding stairs. She was too elated to feel her nearness to a sinister influence that was creeping up to change the whole course of her life.

IN THE lower hall Janis encountered Rock, who had just been let in by Maud. He came toward her carrying his medium-height, stocky figure at sprightly angle, his brown eyes dancing with excitement.

"I told you I'd do it!" he announced. "Behold the hotel detective in Max Doyle's new picture, 'Crazy Day'!"

"That's wonderful, Rock! I'm lucky, too. Miss Turner just phoned. I'm having a test tomorrow."

He kissed her hastily on the tip of her nose.

"Test? You might make the grade at that. But where are you going now?"

"I'm picking up Lucinda and we're lunching somewhere. Then I'm going to the Pierre Shop—be made beautiful." She laughed gaily.

Held in His Arms

He caught her roughly around the waist, whirled her toward him. He tilted up her adorable little chin, looked steadily into her wide blue eyes. "You're beautiful enough for me now," he told her quickly.

Emotion choked her, made her speechless for a moment. The spicy scent of carnations on the stand behind them made her slightly faint, the speed of Rock's lovemaking took away her breath. She managed to murmur unsteadily: "You're — a dear, Rock."

He laid his full warm lips on her mouth. There was something about this man's ardor, his lengthy kiss, that was too carelessly possessive, that filled her with vague alarm. Something like a warning whisper from some far-off source rushed into her consciousness, too indistinct to analyze. She turned away her face, but his lips brushed along her cheek, his soft whisper was in her ear. "You'll be a star—forget all about me. And I love you better than all the women I've ever seen.

He looked so serious she felt nearly sorry for him. She laid her two hands lightly on his broad shoulders, said tremulously: "Rock—you know I love you—so much it—it hurts."

"That's better!" he slammed out. "We'll get married—right away!"

She whirled coquettishly from him, went quickly out the side entrance, and he could do nothing but follow her.

She flung over her shoulder: "One thing at a time, Rock. You make me dizzy. You're in a new picture—I'm getting a test. If we wait—see how things turn out——"

Rock, scowling fiercely, caught up with her. "Haven't I waited— ever since I met you " he mumbled crossly.

His heart was pounding with happiness. His impatience so clearly proved his love for her, and she knew she could not discourage him much longer. Anyway, why should she, when they loved each other so dearly?

Soon, he was fussing with the padlock on the garage door. Janis, close beside him, lifted adoring eyes to his sun-tanned, rugged countenance. Once more she acknowledged to herself that he was the only man in the world for her, that she never could live without him.

But this whirlwind courtship of his left so much to be desired. It was too precious a period to be skimmed over, and they had had so few hours to enjoy it to the full. Nearly always someone had been with them, generally Lucinda. There were so many things she didn't know about Rock and he'd had little chance to find out anything about her. And now he was insisting that she think about marriage, when it was mixed up with her career, her bank balance, household cares and parties, and people. It didn't seem right somehow.

His Idea of Marriage

She choked out, "Marriage is something special, Rock. Perhaps we shouldn't rush into it."

He glanced at her in that sharp, authoritative manner that always threatened to make her lose her bearings. "Fiddlesticks! If I say we get married, we do—and no ifs or ands about it! My contract with the studio forbids my marrying within a year—but we'll get around that. We'll keep our marriage a secret."

She was filled with an indescribable exultation which was half fear. She knew she would do whatever he desired. She loved him too much to argue against his wishes and, perhaps after all, marrying him would be the sensible course to take.

She didn't try to decipher the man's character, his background. She didn't attempt to dissect his future prospects. There was nothing material about her attitude toward him, and she loved him with a depth of feeling that was destroying her balance, sweeping her into channels she knew nothing about.

Rock's muscular arm flung back the heavy garage door as if it were a feather, and soon they were climbing into her car. He took the wheel as a matter of course, and they started out through Beverly Hills, drove swiftly on toward Hollywood.

Golden sunshine viewed with the gold-skinned oranges, lemons, and grapefruit stacked row upon row in the open-marget stalls, the stimulation of its broad rays touching these two in the smart white car rolling so smoothly along the four-lane pavement. "Such a morning—such a beautiful morning," said Janis to herself, and snuggled closer beside Rock in the seat.

Lucinda Gets A Shock

Rock's greeting to Lucinda was, "Behold the bride!"

Lucinda, about to get into the car, paused. Her face under her wide gray hat turned a pasty white. "No," came from her tonelessly, "you haven't—haven't married her—have you, Rock?" Her smouldering green eyes rested on his like a challenge.

"Of course not," declared Janis happily. "He's joking."

Color returned to Lucinda's thin cheeks. She laughed negligently, buttoned the jacket on her smart new gray suit. "Well, that's different. For a minute you had me stumped—Janis' career and all—hanging in the balance."

"Hop in," ordered Rock tersely. "I'm taking you two eye-fillers out to lunch. Look me over, Lou—I'm almost tops."

"Really—did you get a break?" asked Lucinda, settling in the seat beside Janis. Lucinda was high-spirited again, wearing her impregnable smile so like the gleam of hard coal enamel.

"I was never more serious in my life," Rock proclaimed, then ran around to the other side of the car and leaped in. He began explaining about his part in "Crazy Day" while recklessly cutting the car into the crowded traffic lane.

"How perfectly grand!" Lucinda exclaimed when he had finished.

"It's a swell chance," agreed Rock. "Now watch me go places."

Janis forgave his boyish egotism, because she was so sure that their love, their plans, were interwoven with it. He must be, as she was, nearly too happy to contain himself.

A Guarded Warning

"If you don't lose your head—you'll go places," came cryptically from Lucinda.

Janis glanced at her in surprise, but Lucinda's face was masked in an inscrutable smile, impossible to read. More and more often these days, Lucinda made vaguely stinging remarks. Janis wondered why she did it, what enjoyment she could derive from it.

Lucinda could be so jolly when she chose that these caustic flashes seemed unfortunate.

Within a few minutes they had left the car in a Wilshire Boulevard parking lot and Rock had ushered the girls into a rambling old house nearby to eat Spanish food. Janis paid slight attention to what was set before her, but she had heard Rock order tamales, chorigo, frijoles, tortillas and red wine and her appetite responded to the food readily enough, even if her mind couldn't center upon it. Something sweet and tender lay close to her heart, dream-like, inexplainable, overbalancing all the good judgment she had even possessed.

She left Lucinda and Rock within the hour to go to the beauty parlor a few doors away. Lucinda had telephone Pierre, made all arrangements to have everything done to enhance Janis' good points, so Lucinda had laughingly told Rock.

Janis couldn't see anything to laugh about, but concluded that Lucinda was again out of sorts over anything Lucinda ever did or said, because Lucinda had done so much for her when she should have been resting.

Why, Lucinda had helped a strange girl select clothes, dance, car, even a beauty shop, and produced her to all her friends! If she couldn't like all of Lucinda's friends, it certainly wasn't Lucinda's fault.

Whenever she thought of some of them it made her irritated and she was forced to shove the image of them far back in her mind. But from now on, probably she and Rock would be spending many evenings alone together—even without Lucinda. Janis felt a little guilty about excluding Lucinda, even in her mind; but sometimes Rock made too much fuss over Lucinda, and that bothered her, too.

Throughout the facial, shampoo and set, which operators in the Pierre shop gave Janis with the elaborate consideration they bestowed upon famous stars and wealthy women, Janis knew that she was the most fortunate Cinderella in existence. But as she was sitting under a big metal drier her thoughts swung into channels not so agreeable.

The noise of the drier's motor hummed monotonously in Janis' ears. She allowed her mind to uncover worries that today's happiness had submerged. She could not shake off a premonition that filled her with dread. Why should she feel so close to some dire calamity now when everything was coming her way?

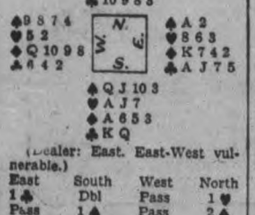
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

GET TO THE RIGHT SPOT

WHEN YOUR side has the balance of power, so that the opponents do not enter the auction to any serious extent, your own bidding has a twofold objective. It aims to get you into the correct suit or No Trump and also to the most profitable height. You can't do this except by giving a true picture of your own hand, so that your partner may know the situation, or by reacting correctly to a true picture he paints with his bids. Raising with only three cards a suit of his, which may be only four cards long, is usually bad bridge if you have a five-card major of your own which may be rebid.



(Dealer: East. East-West vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	Dbl	Pass	1 ♥
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	3 NT

West led the club 6 because of his partner's bid. The 3 was played from dummy, 7 by East and K by South. Two spade rounds knocked out the A, then East laid down his club A and switched to a diamond, too late to do any harm. South then ran his game, plus an overtrick, giving up a trick at the end.

A diamond lead would have defeated the contract, giving the defenders three tricks in that suit, plus two black aces. So would an immediate use of East's club A on the first trick followed by a switch to the diamond K.

The correct contract for North and South was unbeatable, 4-Hearts. North on his second turn should have rebid his hearts, whereupon South would have bid 3-Hearts and North 4-Hearts. At this contract no tricks should have been lost except two to the black aces.

Norse To Protest Loss Of 50 Ships

OSLO, March 1—(AP).—Foreign minister Halvdan Koht announced in parliament today that Norway would make new representations to Berlin shortly against the sinking of Norwegian steamers.

Koht said the northern countries would support such protests and he hoped other neutral countries would do the same.

He said some 50 Norwegian vessels, representing 2.3 per cent of the Norwegian Merchant Marine, have been sunk since the war started. He put Norway's loss of life at 350 passengers and sailors.

"It may be stated with certitude," he added, "that at least nine of these vessels were sunk by German war and other ships. In eight cases we have no indication of the nationality of the aggressor vells. Others Norwegian vessels sank after hitting mines."

New Zealanders O.C.

No Time Now

London, March 1 (CP)

PRIME MINISTER Chamberlain today refused to grant time to discuss in the House of Commons a request for direct Allied intervention in Finland.

He said "I can hold out no hope for time being found for the motion," which Oliver Locker-Lampson, Conservative, submitted because of "imminent peril of Finland's overthrow."

The government had been asked to grant a day to debate the resolution.

New regulations restricting transfer of Palestine land from Arab to Jewish ownership will be debated next Wednesday and air ministry estimates on Thursday, Mr. Chamberlain announced.

Friends Honor Dartford Girl

HASTINGS, March 1—(ENS).—Miss Ruth Morrow of Percy Township, a popular young lady of the Dartford community, was honored on several occasions before she left to enter Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, on March 1 as a nurse-in-training.

On Friday evening over forty members of the Young People's Society at Dartford surprised her at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morrow, and presented her with a beautiful leather week-end case. A short address voicing the appreciation of her sterling worth and expressing best wishes for the future was read by Miss Margaret Atkinson and the presentation was made by Miss Lillian Nelson.

Chinese checkers, crokinole and community singing proved an enjoyable pastime, which was followed by the service of refreshments.

On Sunday afternoon the members of the West Dartford Sunday School presented her with a leather zipper-cover Bible, Miss Clarice Atkinson making the presentation, and Miss Marion Darling reading an appropriate address.

On Tuesday evening a surprise party was held at her home, when over fifty young people of the neighborhood, also relatives from near Hastings, gathered for a farewell. The evening was spent in round and square dancing, with music furnished by her uncles, Messrs. Donald and James Beamish, assisted by young men of the community. Following the service of luncheon, dancing was resumed and the guests departed for their homes after extending best wishes to the honored one.

Quebec Bride-to-Be, Sister Die In Flaming Room Asleep, Morn Of Wedding

One Victim's Fiance Breaks Leg In Leap With Two Others, As Fire Rages Through 2 Dwellings And Block Of Stores

QUEBEC, March 2.—(CP)—A 20-year-old girl, who was to have been married this morning and her 22-year-old sister were identified tentatively today as victims of a three-hour fire which left three other persons in hospital after racing through three lower town buildings.

Dr. Paul V. Marceau, district coroner, said it was believed the two charred corpses taken to the morgue early today were those of Bertha Pilote ,the bride-to-be, and her sister Delvina, of either St. Malachie or St. Edouard de Brampton, Que.

The younger girl was to have married Private Jean Morin of the Chaudiere Regiment in St. Jean Baptiste Church. Morin was injured in making his escape from one of the flaming structures.

Three Seriously Hurt

Hospital authorities, meanwhile, described as serious the condition of Noel Kirouac, 26, Jean Morin, 28, both of whom suffered fractured legs, and Beatrice Ward, 27, who suffered burns and cuts. The two men were injured in leaps from the third storey of one of the houses.

"The two dead girls probably were killed by smoke rather than burns," Dr. Marceau said. Their identity has not yet been definitely established, but the authorities are getting in touch with the parish priests of the towns from which they are thought to have come."

Breaking out in the early morning hours, the flames spread quickly through a three-storey stone building containing three stores under lodging quarters and to two adjoining stone houses. About 20 persons were forced to flee the buildings.

It was believed damages would total several thousand dollars.

VATICAN CITY, March 2—(AP)—Pope Pius XII pursued his rigorous work schedule today, permitting no special observance to be made on his 64th birthday and the first anniversary of his election to the Papacy.

The lady is a policewoman and the man who snapped her garter was fined $25.

Italy Stirs Wail Over British Blockade Plan

ROME, March 2.—(CP-Havas)—The Italian government announced today that a note of protest will be sent to the British government tomorrow over London's decision to seize German exports to Italy, particularly coal.

The note is now being drafted, the announcement said.

A Fascist spokesman said the protest would be in harmony with the Fascist Grand Council's declaration last December that Italy would safeguard her maritime traffic "in the most definite manner, both for reasons of prestige and to ensure the undeniable necessities of life."

Coal Ships Turn Back

AMSTERDAM, March 2.—(CP-Havas)—Four Italian ships loaded with German coal left Rotterdam this morning for Italy but returned to port on receiving instructions directly from Rome.

The coal would have been liable to seizure by Allied contraband control authorities, under a British Government decision announced yesterday.

The four ships were the Orato, Felce, Numida and Liana. When they received the instructions from Rome after leaving Rotterdam they circled around the Hook of Holland and returned to port.

About 200,000 tons of Italian shipping is ready for loading in Rotterdam harbor. Italian circles here said the German coal aboard the four ships had arrived from the Ruhr only this week, because of the freeze-up of canals which had delayed the shipment.

Adolf Demands Allies Shun Balkans, Scandinavia; Insists On Freedom Of Seas

Tosses In Colonies Demand, And Disarming Of Gibraltar, Malta, Singapore As Only Part Of Peace Plan For Welles

BERLIN, March 2 (AP)—Adolf Hitler was authoritatively reported today to have informed Sumner Welles that Germany's price for peace includes permanent German hegemony over Bohemia-Moravia, Slovakia, Poland and Hungary.

This, with Germany and the former Austria, would give Hitler control of a total population of about 130,000,000. It was reported he also asked guarantees that Great Britain and France would not "stir up the Balkans or Scandinavia."

These points, it was said, made up only one, but an important, phase of the "information" given to the United States under secretary of state who conferred with Hitler for an hour and a half.

Another was his insistence of the freedom of the seas, it was said Informed persons said Hitler asked Welles what the United States would do if, say, some Asiatic or European power tried to stir up trouble in Mexico.

It was not disclosed whether Welles replied.

Fears Threat at Sea

Hitler's thesis was said to be that the seas never can be considered free as long as Britain has military control of all the important trade lanes of Europe and Asia, and can at any time choke off "aspiring young nations" such as Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany.

In this connection, Hitler was said to have asked Welles how the United States would like some non-American power to have control of the Panama canal.

Hitler's argument was said to have run to this effect:

Just as the United States, largest and most powerful nation of the western hemisphere, has assumed obligations for all of America so far as interference from European or Asiatic powers is concerned, so Germany considers it her moral obligation to see that Central European living space be guaranteed from interference of Britain and France.

Hitler was reported to have claimed that Germany is unbeatable economically because of her arrangements with the Soviet Union.

He was described as stating that Germany wants colonies as a matter of justice.

On the question of disarmament, the Fuehrer's view was described reliably as being that, first, such British fortresses as Gibraltar, Malta and Singapore must be dismantled.

If Welles asked Hitler why Germany was embarked on autarchy and whether the Reich was ready to go along with the United States on trade policies, the answer was said to have been given almost a month ago by an article by Karl Megerle of the Boersen Zeitung, chief editorial mouthpiece of the foreign office.

He defended autarchy as "the most social system of international economy in the 10th century."

Military Action Hints

Hints of impending military action were current in the capital as Welles came to the climax of his Berlin visit in his first meeting with the leader of a warring nation on his tour of European capitals.

President Roosevelt's investigator was well prepared for his interview with the Fuehrer by thousands of words of inspired press comment and by his meeting yesterday with two of Hitler's closest advisers on foreign affairs.

Political circles, according to the authoritative Dienst Aus Deutschland, were "especially impressed," with the length of time Welles spent with Foreign Minister Joachim Von

The doctor obliged, set the leg.

RAF Drop Flares Upon Berlin; Action At Sea

LONDON, March 2—(CP).—Two black German airplanes were driven out to sea from the Scottish coast today by Royal Air Force fighters.

At the same time residents of Berwick reported hearing gunfire occurring northward toward the Firth of Forth.

The firing continued for more than an hour.

The crew of a steamship that reached port said their ship was attacked by a German bomber in the early morning hours.

Two heavy explosions were felt on board their vessel, they said, and machine-gun fire followed. Warships replied before defending planes arrived and drove off the Nazi raiders.

Residents as far as 12 miles inland were awakened by the rumble of blasts rolling in from the sea.

The Air Ministry announced R.A.F. planes had flown over Berlin and northwest Germany again last night—the seventh successive night of British aerial reconnaissance in Germany.

"Operations by the Royal Air Force over northwest and central Germany proceeded throughout last night," the Ministry's communique said.

"Our aircraft were again over Berlin. This is the fourth time this week that our aircraft have visited the enemy capital."

The flight was the sixth over Berlin during the war, continuing a series described in London as "nuisance" raids carried out to accustom pilots to flying over the enemy's territory.

"We have had it all our own way and have gone where he wished," one British authority stated, adding that "would-be German raiders have been

British Freighter Sends SOS 'Sub Attack In Caribbean' U.S. Planes Report It Safe

U.S. Army Officers Suspect Call Caused As Result Of Vessel's Fright At Sight Of American Subs Manoeuvring

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2 — (AP). —The Navy was advised to-day that United States naval planes had located the British steamship Southgate, which reported a submarine attack yesterday, and said the vessel was in no apparent danger.

SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO, March 2 (AP)—A peaceable United States submarine, mistaken for a German U-boat, may have caused the 2,390-ton British steamship Southgate to believe she was being attacked in the Atlantic, United States army officials suggested today.

Two United States submarines were in the vicinity given for the Southgate when she wirelessed yesterday that a U-boat was attacking her, members of the general staff in charge of operations in the Caribbean defence area, disclosed.

Besides three destroyers and a coastguard cutter already hurrying to her position 130 miles northeast of San Juan, Lieut.-Comm. Stephen B. Cook, comanding the United States Navy Air Patrol Squadron No. 51, sent four planes to join the search.

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—A dynamic game of hide-and-seek between war ships apparently had been touched off today in American waters by reports of a submarine attack on a British freighter near Puerto Rico and a British interception of a Nazi cargo carrier.

Three hours later came word that the German freighter Troja, 2,390 tons, was in flames off Aruba, oil refinery island of the Dutch West Indies. Attempting to run the British blockade, she was cut off by a British cruiser and, in the Nazi tradition, her crew fired her rather than surrender. What happened to the crew could not be determined.

These new instances of warfare within the so-called American neutrality zone came after weeks of

Farm Problems Become Election Issue

(By the Canadian Press.)

In the hustings clamor over the spectacular features of the war effort—fighting men, guns and machines—farm problems have been skimmed over lightly in another peculiar twist to this usual election campaign.

But agriculture makes all-important contributions to the sinews of war and there are indications now that the place of the farmer in the conflict will be of groiwng concern to vote-seeking public men.

Making a definite break from the more controversial topics of the war election, Conservative Leader Manion last night at a Niagara Falls, Ont., meeting dealt extensively with his farm program.

He talked of prices, tariffs and marketing boards and returned to

German Raider Tackles 3 Belgians, Bags 1

BRUSSELS, March 2 (AP)—The Belgian government announced today that a Belgian plane had been shot down in an air fight between a number of German and Belgian planes over Belgian territory.

"A Belgian plane was shot down this afternoon during a battle between Belgian planes and German planes," said a brief communique. "Another communique will be issued tonight."

BRUSSELS, March 2 — (CP-Havas).—It was reported without confirmation here that a Belgian plane was shot down today by a German machine which it was trying to drive back over the border.

According to the report, three Belgian aircraft went up to drive off the German plane which had crossed into Belgian territory.

The German machine was said to have opened fire on all three craft, shooting down one of them. All occupants of the downed plane were reported killed.

Held Seriously.

Shortly after the government's announcement, the German Ambassador arrived at the Foreign Office to seek an interview with Foreign Minister Paul Spaak. He was kept

Cardinal Taboos Vote For Women

QUEBEC, Mar. 2 — (CP). — Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve listed to-day in an officail communique four reasons why he is "not in favor" of woman suffrage, which the Quebec Government proposes to grant at the current Legislature session for provincial elections.

Following are the reasons:

"1—Because it goes against unity and hierarchy of families.

"2—Because its exercise exposes the woman to all the passions and adventures of electoralism.

"3—Because, in fact, it appears to us that the very great majority of the women of the province do not desire it.

"4—Because social reforms, economic reforms, hygienic reforms, etc., which are advanced to commend the right of woman suffrage can be obtained just as well through the influence of feminine organizations on the edge of politics."

The communique, appearing over the name of the Cardinal, Archbishop of Quebec, said he believed he was expressing in the document "the common feeling of the Bishops of the Province."

6 Months War Sees Canada On Verge Of Entering Biggest Boom In 20 Years

By W. H. WARD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, March 2—(CP). — Six months of war have stimulated Canadian industry and the prospect of war orders to fill the needs of Canada, Britain and their Allies brightens the future.

The last quarter of 1939, according to a statistical report of the Department of Trade and Commerce, produced a higher physical volume of Canadian business than in any other quarter in the last 20 years.

The full effect of the war, however, will not be apparent for some time. Canada has lost some markets due to wartime restrictions on trade movements, notably in automobile exports, but there have been compensating gains in other markets.

German markets in South America, Mexico, South Africa and the United States now are open to the products of Canadian industry.

The Federal Government is spending money in Canadian industrial plants. The total so far has been some $100,000,000, Cabinet Ministers have announced. The British Government plans to spend some $445,000,000 for various purposes. Still greater sums may be expected if the struggle against Nazism is prolonged.

Canadian industry is in a fortunate position for wartime production, government experts point out. Not only are the majority of the raw materials available in Canada but there is little threat of the enemy's action crippling industrial plants in the Dominion. Raw materials from outside Canada are required only in the automobile, cotton, textile and petroleum industries out of the 40 leading industries.

Mobilization of industry for war is incomplete, pending further information on just what will be required. Indications so far have pointed to demands for foodstuffs, aircraft, mechanized equipment, guns and munitions as well as ships, particularly minesweepers and anti-submarine vessels.

Six leading Canadian aircraft manufacturers were banded together to produce heavy bombing aircraft for Great Britain before the war started. Many contracts for shipbuilding have been let and others are in prospect. Most arms and munitions now in production are for Canadian forces but, as in the last war, such production soon may extend to supply the Allies.

Expansion of industry since the war has been orderly and farsighted.

Cambridge Wins Rowing Classic

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England, March 2 (CP Cable)—Cambridge, 3 to 1 favorites, defeated Oxford in the "unofficial" rowing today of the intervarsity classic.

Cox Henry Hicks of Bridgetown, N.S., could not get the Oxford sweep-swingers to match Cambridge who surged into the lead soon after the start and increased it steadily to win by five lengths.

The Cantabs beat up a stroke averaging 32 to the minute most of the way and covered the Henley course of 1½ miles in nine minutes, 38 seconds.

The light blues rowed strongly to the finish while two of the Oxford pullers appeared distressed and the others fagged.

The victory, expected due to Cambridge's more experienced oarsmen, increased the light blues bag of wins to 49 against Oxford's 42 since the varsity oar duels were started in 1829. One race was a dead heat. As the race this year was "unofficial," it may not be counted in the list of wins and losses of the two universities.

Over A Short Course

The race this year was held over the short Henley course instead of the usual 4¼-mile Putney-Mortlake run on the Thames in the London area. War conditions made use of the latter course impracticable this year.

Swinging into stride from the start at the foot of Temple Island, Cambridge had taken a slight lead after a quarter mile.

The light blues increased their lead to a length and a half at the three quarter mile marker and opened up water steadily between the shells until they had swept past the finish boom.

In contrast to peace time, when the race drew hundred of thousands to the banks of the Thames, only a comparative handful of spectators were on hand today.

"History won't give it much space unless both boats sink or a stroke falls overboard," commented the Daily Sketch.

2nd German Ship Captured Off West Indies

LONDON, March 2.—(CP)—Four more vessels of Germany's diminishing merchant fleet were accounted for this week, one foundering as a result of war navigation conditions, a second and third captured by British warships and a fourth reported scuttled when intercepted by a British warship.

The 4,707-ton Wahahe, a new ship, went down off the coast of Norway while venturing too close to the Rocky coast. The vessel was attempting to avoid interception by using Norwegian territorial waters. The 4,354-ton Orizaba was captured and brought into port by British warships while the Troja, 2,390 tons, was intercepted by a warship off the Dutch West Indies and said to have been burned by its crew.

From Aruba, Dutch West Indies it was reported today the German freighter Heidelberg has been captured by a British cruiser and is being towed to Trinidad.

The prize was the second loss for Germany's merchant fleet in this vicinity in two days, the 2,390-Troja having been set afire yesterday rather than surrender when intercepted by a British cruiser.

Soviets Hammer At Shell-Torn Viipuri Gates

HELSINKI, March 2.—(AP).— The Red army hammered to-day at the gates of Viipuri, with battle raging in the outskirts of that shell-ravaged city which is the key to the Karelian Isthmus.

(A Soviet communique said the Finns were burning the city as they fell back and that the Russians were in southern suburbs.)

The Finns acknowledged that after three months of war, including a month of sustained assault against this objective, the Russians were moving on Viipuri from the south and east by land and from the south-west over the island-dotted ice of Viipuri Bay.

Russian losses continued to be heavy, the Finns said, in fighting along the entire isthmus front from the edge of the Viipuri on the west to the fortress of Taipale on the east. Taipale, on the Lake Ladoga shore, is holding fast despite heavy aerial bombardments, they said.

An official Finnish review for February of the Russian invasion, which began Nov. 30, said:

"Abandoning our foremost positions is not of decisive significance in the defence system of the isthmus. In actual fact, the enemy

Finnish Voluntary Service League Handpicks Fighters From West

WINNIPEG, March 2.—(CP). — Finland's call for help to stem the Russian invasion has been answered through the Winnipeg Finnish Voluntary Service League by four former Finnish soldiers, two experienced bush pilots and an airplane mechanic, Erik Erikson, 40-year-old head of the League, revealed to-day.

Erikson, native of Finland, but now a Canadian citizen, has spent the last few weeks hand-picking Finnish volunteers from applications of persons wishing to fight for Finland.

Eight men have been accepted to date. Seven are in New York waiting the next ocean crossing and another is in Winnipeg making final arrangements for the journey.

The League furnishes the volunteers with transportation costs to New York where they join others on the same mission. The Finnish War Veterans' League of America contributes the fare from New York to the Finnish battlefields.

V. Kivela, 25, of Edmonton, has paid his own fare from Edmonton to Finland and H. Helinius, 35, also from Edmonton, bought his transportation to New York. Both are of Finnish birth and received military training before immigrating to Canada.

Two other former Finnish soldiers, Paul Bullinen, 39, and Karl Bronquest, 36, both of Winnipeg, are in the first contingent en route to Finland.

J. W. Deschamps, 25, French-Canadian pilot from Edmonton, is another of the volunteers. He was more than 3,000 hours flying in the Canadian north and parts of United States to his credit, Erikson said.

The other Canadian flier enlisted through the league is Briton L. Whyte, 30, Calgary. Whyte learned to fly in Alberta and British Columbia and he had 2,000 hours in the air.

E. Rossinen, 36, Edmonton, joined up with Deschamps, with whom he has taken part in many air exploits. He was born in Finland and received military training before coming to Canada.

The latest volunteer to be accepted, E. Waaramaa, 36, of Winnipeg, is making final preparations to return to his homeland.

Erikson said the league accepts applications from men of Scandinavian origin, as long as they have had military training, and anyone eligible for the Finnish air force.

Finns Load Up On Gas, Oil, Wheat, Corn With New U.S. Twenty Million Credit

WASHINGTON, March 2.—(AP)—Finland sped arrangements to-day to buy gasoline, oil, grain and other vital supplies with the $20,000,000 credit which was allocated to her by the United States Export-Import Bank yesterday even before President Roosevelt had signed legislation which made possible the loan.

Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish Minister, said at a press conference that the supplies would be of great assistance to his country in withstanding the Russian invasion, and that orders would be placed immediately.

Receiving the newsmen after a long distance telephone talk with Prime Minister Ryti in Helsinki, the Minister assured them that Finland is far from defeated.

"When the war started most people thought we wold be beaten within two or three days," he said. "We've been fighting three months now and we'll fight on, confident that help will come.

Procope disclosed that a considerable portion of the $20,000,000 credit would be spent for oil,

R.A.F. Finds Prague Blaze Of Light On Leaflet Raid To Land Of Czechs

LONDON, March 2—(CP). — A description was given today by an R.A.F. pilot who took part in a leaflet-dropping flight over Prague, capital of the former Czecho-Slovakia.

"The whole town was a blaze of light," he said. He contrasted the brilliant illumination of places in Bohemia with the strict blackout in effect in Germany.

"Our particular objectives that night were Prague and Pilsen," the pilot said. "The weather was excellent, a good moon providing visibility over a region of 30 miles. That is not always the case.

"We were carrying a crew of six comprising pilots, navigator, gunners and a wireless operator.

"As we reached the German frontier it was difficult not to believe that the eyes of every German on the ground must be looking up, but nothing happened. Just then no searchlights were trained on us. No guns were fired and no enemy fighters came up to try to intercept us.

"Sometimes on these flights it is intensely cold and one needs all the kit one can possibly put on. This night, however, was comparatively warm and no one needed his heavy flying clothing.

"From the frontier our course lay over the Rhine. Soon Frankfurt passed beneath us, then Nuremberg was slipping past under our wings.

"After a time we noticed that the rigid blackout which had been maintained in Germany was diminished, and we knew that we had now crossed another frontier into Czecho-Slovakia.

"Our next excitement was when the navigator warned us that we were approaching Pilsen, home of the great Skoda armament works.

"We slowly lost height as we approached, and then, levelling out, we flew across the town and dropped a couple of parachute flares to announce our arrival to residents and visitors.

"There was no reply, and the navigator set us on a new course, heading north-east for Prague.

"There was no mistaking Prague. The whole town was a blaze of light. Houses, street lamps and factories were all lit up. Even the ornamental light on a bridge was aglow. We again flew over the city while two of the crew began scattering many thousand leaflets we were carrying.

"Without interruption we completed our job and when the last leaflet had vanished astern we swung around and began the long and monotonous flight back to our base."

Welsh Honor Patron Saint

Jealous guardians of a proud heritage, Peterborough's Welsh colony met at the Empress Hotel Friday night 200 strong in observance of St. David's Day.

It was their tenth annual banquet in Peterborough and membership was seen at its highest point. Strong bonds of a common land and a common blood drew this group together at a time momentous in their tiny country's history—when she is face to face with her greatest war.

It was with a fervor beyond expression that they sang the Welsh National Anthem in their native tongue and in such excellent voice as is scarce heard by a community other than Welsh; for theirs is the tradition of music, and Friday night's Welsh folk carried on that tradition to its fullest extent.

The Welsh Society did not have to go beyond its own ranks to provide excellent vocal entertainment. Eight different artists, all members of the society, sang solos, duets and quartettes. They were Mrs. J. Cairns, Mrs. W. J. Davies, Miss Gladys Mills, Mrs. C. Armstrong, J. Cairns and Alex. Kirkcaldy.

The tenth annual banquet saw the first time that a woman occupied the chair as president. She was Mrs. George Pakenham, and seated at the head table was Rev. J. L. Hughes, first president of the society. Once rector of St. George's Anglican Church here, he is now in Brighton, but has never missed one of the ten annual banquets here.

Guest speaker was A. R. Kennedy, editor of the Examiner. Other speakers, who made only a few remarks, were Rev. G. Kelly of Lakefield, and Rev. J. L. Hughes. Robert Hendry, president of the Peterborough Caledonian Society, was a guest and congratulated the society on having completed its first decade of existence. He expressed desire for continued friendship between Scots and Welsh in Peterborough.

A toast to Wales was replied to by M. Parry. Accompanist during the musical program was Miss Margaret Flowers.

"The questions handled apparently were threshed out very thoroughly and carefully," it said.

Welles conferred for 2½ hours with Von Ribbentrop and later for an hour with Von Weizsaecker. The under-secretary arrived yesterday from Zurich, where he had stopped en route from Rome after seeing Premier Mussolini.

A striking utterance of one authorized commentator was placed by members of the United States Embassy on Welles' deck.

"The German air force, ready for action," it said, "is waiting for a decisive blow. Nobody knows just when it will come, but one may be sure that it will put in the shade all previous conceptions of military effectiveness."

Beat Them Once, Do It Again - Air Marshall Bishop

TORONTO, March 2—(CP).—The British Empire, with "the cubs answering the lion's roar," has weathered many storms and "will weather this one too," Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, director of recruiting for Canada in the British Commonwealth air training plan, said here last night in an address to the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario.

Air Marshal Bishop, who brought down 72 enemy planes in the last war, contrasted the calibre of Allied airmen with German fliers and declared: "We beat them then—as we will beat them again."

He warned against underestimating the strength or determination of the Nazis. "We are fighting Germany," he said. "Let us no longer believe that we are fighting only Hitler and not the German people. Thirteen million people bow to Hitler as their god. If we are fighting Hitler, we must also fight those who believe in him."

He compared present-day air training with that given during the last war. Under the present scheme pilots will have about 200 hours of flying time behind them when they are posted for war duty. He recalled that we had only 15 hours' flying time "the night I was flying near the mouth of the Thames looking for Zepps."

Air Marshal Bishop said that he knew from experience that German fliers are "superb." He forecast defeat of the Nazi air force because "our force is a voluntary one as opposed to the robot-like principles of Prussian conscription."

Drop Flares On Berlin

Thousands of leaflets were scattered over the Berlin area, the communique added, and parachute flares were dropped "to drive home the fact that our aircraft were once again over the capital of the Reich."

The communique said the British scouts reconnoitred "important towns" in northwest Germany and "kept watch" on seaplane bases at Borkum, Nordany and Sylt.

The returning pilots reported their appearance over Berlin caused "intense activity" as pale blue searchlights stabbed the darkness in a vain effort to spot them.

The intense gunfire which greeted the German raiders in the early morning North Sea mists led Berwick residents to believe a naval engagement was occurring to the north near the Firth of Forth.

Four Aberdeen trawlers which reached port this morning reported they had been bombed yesterday. The trawler Strathclovra said a submarine had fired on her several days ago, but had missed as she rolled in the heavy seas.

The Berlin Report.

BERLIN, March 2—(AP). — The sinking of one ship and the possible destruction of four others was reported by the German high command today.

They were among British warships and convoyed vessels, it said, apparently referring to attacks reported yesterday by DNB, German news agency.

The communique:

"In the west no special events.

"The air force carried out reconnaissance flights over the entire North Sea up to the Orkney Islands. German planes at various places successfully attacked English warships and merchantmen in English convoys.

"One ship sank immediately; on another, extensive fire was observed.

"In addition, four ships were so seriously damaged by bombs that their loss is probable.

"After a night flight over northwest Germany, an enemy airplane yesterday morning returned to Dutch territory at Nymwegen."

6 Months War

Many unrelated industries should benefit from Canada's role as pantry and supply station for the Empire. The heaviest wheat crop since 1928 helped supply Britain with wheat and benefitted Canadian farmers.

In addition, transport services benefit not only from the wheat movement, but from the large shipments of industrial products and British Columbia timber, of which the British Timber Control Board already has bought some 400,000,000 board feet.

Other primary producers of the agriculture industry concerned with war orders include producers of Canadian cheese, a highly-concentrated wartime food, and Canadian bacon producers, who are to supply the United Kingdom with 5,600,000 pounds a week.

Figures show that employment has increased with volume of industry but employment experts have warned that the figures might not tell the whole story, since unemployed workers not on public relief took up much of the slack on the return to work.

Industry has co-operated closely with the Government throughout the first months of war. Private industry released thousands of tons of sugar at the request of the Government to meet the sugar shortage scare early in September, and there have been other instances of a readiness on the part of the industry to help.

The Government has not interfered to any great extent with industrial life beyond limiting wartime profits and establishing a price-fixing board to guard against profiteering and hoarding.

Comparing 1939 with the preceding year, statisticians report some sharp increases. The domestic textile industry enjoyed something of a boom with foreign competitors and Great Britain's mills busily engaged in war orders for their own purposes.

Physical volume of textiles production in Canada rose from an average monthly index of 110.8 (1926 equal 100) in 1938 to 128.1 in 1939, an advance of 18.3 in the index. The newsprint production index gained 14.7 and wood pulp exports index 14.8.

Manufacturing production generally advanced 10.6 per cent., with mineral production up 11 per cent. and the physical volume of business up 10 per cent. Exports of planks and boards increased 26.8 per cent., flour production 2.4 per cent. in 17 months, nickel exports 18.8 per cent. and steel ingot production 19.9 per cent.

Pigs Suffering From Anemia

A health question that was popularized a few years ago was "Have you had your iron today?"

According to Frank C. Paterson farmers have to give thought to this means of fortifying young pigs against present day swine diseases.

With a market for 90,000 hogs a week, farmers are making a special effort to rear them for sale. A Dummer township man who has been raising pigs for forty-five years telephoned Mr. Paterson yesterday saying that he was having more trouble with the present litter than he ever had in all those years. Several of the young pigs had died, and he was asking for information as to what he should do.

Mr. Paterson said the symptoms sounded like anemia, and a post-mortem examination by a veterinary surgeon corroborated that opinion. This reference is not intended for farmers, but it may be of interest to city dwellers, especially those who have the strange notion that farming is a simple sort of business that anybody can drift into and make it go.

It seems that anemia was not generally recognized by the older farmers, but in the swine industry today the signs of this debility are readily recognized, and that is where the dose of iron comes in. If young pigs of a week or so are not showing an interest in life, but are standing around in the dumps it is time to suspect anemia. Farmers take the precaution of having in stock at home a pound or so of reduced iron or iron sulphate, and the treatment is a little mustard spoonfull placed on the little pig's tongue about twice a week at this season. There are other methods for summer time.

In the series of country meetings this week Mr. Paterson passed out the reminder that baths for the pigs should not be overlooked, and also as a safeguard of health by removing the eggs of pests that attack swine.

Apparently the ideal among producers today is for clean and perky pigs, and it is no idle jest to enquire about some of them getting their ration of iron.

Montreal, March 2 (CP)

MARC T. McNeil, sports editor of The Gazette, wrote exactly 19 words in Friday's edition in "covering" Thursday's National Hockey League game here between Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins.

Canadiens lost the game 4-2, leaving them with a record of 24 losses in their last 28 games and still without a victory at home since Dec. 14. It was also their sixth straight defeat.

After leaving almost a half-column blank under his by-line McNeil wrote: "Ho hum, folks, it's the same old story (we told you why a few weeks ago); here are the summaries." The "story" carried the usual eight-column streamer and decks.

SERVICES IN PETERBOROUGH CHURCHES TO-MORROW

W. S. Gordon Ends 37 Years As Leader of Sunday School

TWEED, March 2.—(ENS)—W. S. Gordon, superintendent of the Tweed United Church Sunday School since 1903, recently relinquished his office. As superintendent of the United Church Sunday School since 1903, Mr. Gordon has enjoyed the confidence of his fellow workers throughout the Province of Ontario, who have bestowed on him several of the highest honors within the control of the Religious Education Council.

In 1910, he was sent as a delegate to the World Sunday School convention in Washington, D.C. Later, he attended the International Sunday School convention at Birmingham, Alabama, U.S.A., as an accredited delegate.

Elected as president of the Religious Education Council of the Province of Ontario, Mr. Gordon presided over conventions held in Peterborough and London, Ont.

Another important office to which Mr. Gordon was elected, was that of secretary-treasurer of the Centre Hastings Sunday School Association. He held this office for three years during which Centre Hastings won the provincial banner for the best organized district in the province.

During Mr. Gordon's tenure of office, several boys belonging to the Sunday School took an active part in the Older Boys' Parliament, one being elected speaker, and another leader of the opposition.

Many of the ideas which made Tweed United Church Sunday School one of the leading schools in the province were gleaned by Mr. Gordon from addresses and discussions which took place at these conventions and conferences, and which he introduced into the local school and carried to success with the loyal co-operation of an efficient staff of officers and teachers.

Biblical Thoughts For The Shut-Ins By Rev. E. R. James

THE ACID TEST OF RELIGION.

Let brotherly love continue.

A very familiar quotation. "Information?" Where is it found? In the thirteenth of Hebrews, the first verse. The Epistle to the Hebrews is essentially a theological essay; practically the only one in the New Testament. It is full of profound thoughts. Its writer is unknown. It is certainly not St. Paul. Origen, a great Father of the Church, writing about 250 A.D. remarks that "God only knows who wrote it, and that the thoughts of this epistle are wonderful and not second to the recognized Apostolic writings."

Dr. Peake, the great Methodist Commentator, thinks it was written by Priscilla, the wife of Aquila. A brilliant Oxford Don comments that after writing thirteen long philosophical chapters only a woman would conclude: "I have written unto you in few words." (13; 22.) Are you disturbed It matters little who the writer is. One thing is clear. It is an inspired Scripture developing a most important truth — the High Priesthood of the Lord Christ.

The writer is very probably a Jew who lived outside of Palestine. He apparently did not know Hebrew for all his quotations are from the Septuagint, the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures. He writes to Jews who believe in Jesus Christ. But they are deeply disturbed about their future. They are Jews first. They belong to the synagogue and worship as Jews. But they are also Christians believing that Jesus is the Lord, the Christ, the Anointed of God, the Saviour of the world. Naturally there is bitterness between them and their fellow Jews, who anathemise the Blessed Name. The time has arrived for them to choose.

He writes to show them that the Christian religion is better than the Jewish. It is essentially wider and fulfills the Old Testament prophecies. Above all it is a better brotherhood.

For the Jews of that age belonged to the most real brotherhood that ever existed. As long as the Jew had not been excommunicated he was a member of a fellowship which cared for him in time of peril and hardship. If he died without a copper he was buried according to Jewish rites, for he was a brother. This brotherhood was cemented and strengthened by a three-fold cord. They believed in the one God; the one Book and the one worship.

At the same time we must not forget that there was within the Jewish nation differences of thought and opinion which caused much dispute and bitterness. It was not an easy brotherhood. There was the Pharisee, strict Churchman, who believed in the resurrection of the dead; the Sadducee who denied it. There was the Herodian, who believed that it was better to have Herod, a half Jew, to reign over them than a Gentile. On the other hand the Zealot, the Nationalist, abhorred such a thought. Again there was the Jew who lived outside Palestine, millions of them, speaking only Greek and being more liberal in their thinking. The Palestinian Jew looked down upon such as hardly within the fringe of the faith. Yet these men, in spite of such conflicting thoughts, were held together, cemented into one body by their belief in the one God, the one Book, and the one worship.

The writer of this letter reminds his readers that the Christian religion is a better than the Jewish and above all has a better brotherhood because they believe in the wider revelation of God as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, the mysterious Trinity within the Unity of God.

He urges them to practice brotherliness as they did in the older faith and the other Christian virtues. "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers"; Christian travellers were helped on their way. Care for the prisoners—"remember them that are bound." The persecuted—"they that suffer adversity." All this on the principle that they are members of the Body of Christ. "One Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, one God and Father of all." Eph. 4, 5.

Harnack, the famous German scholar, reminds us that the Christian Church spread, not because of its great preachers, but because it practiced a wonderful brotherhood—a remarkable fellowship that the world had never seen, Jew and Gentile, bond and free, being in the one Brotherhood.

Our Lord tested the seriousness of a man's faith in Him by demanding that he live within a brotherhood. It is the acid test of his faith. Are you practising your brotherhood in your own little congregation? "By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples if ye have love one to the other."

IF A MAN SAY, I LOVE GOD, AND HATETH HIS BROTHER, HE IS A LIAR.

Army Songsters Plan Big Weekend

One of the outstanding musical events of the early spring season has been announced in setting this week-end as the annual Songster week-end of the local Salvation Army.

Songster Leader Ben Smith has spared on effort to make the event one of the best in the history of the Songster Brigade. In addition to many choral numbers of the old masters it has been arranged for Major Maltby of Buffalo with Mrs. Maltby and a party of talented musicians and entertainers to assist during the week-end services.

Outside of Major Maltby's musical ability, he like his wife, is a Salvation Army officer, and both are recognized evangelical speakers.

Other members of the visiting party include Captain Ditmar who possesses a sweet soprano voice and is an accomplished elocutionist and Adjutant Blackie a gifted instrumentalist and speaker.

This party along with the Hosanna Bell Ringers and a ladies' xylophone quartette should assure Leader Smith of a memorable turnout for tonight's musical which will be the main musical event of the week-end.

The Sunday services include a service at 11 o'clock at which Major Maltby wil speak, a musical service in the afternoon and a Salvation meeting at night, with Major Maltby and special music at all services.

Week Of Prayer At Mark Street

A week of prayer and special services in preparation for the anniversary of the church has been observed during the past few days by the congregation at Mark Street United.

The period of spiritual preparation began on Monday evening when the Rev. Mr. Zufelt addressed the congregation on "Justification by Faith." On Tuesday evening, the Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Baptist had charge of the services and his address dealt with the effectiveness of the Jesus Way of Living and Thinking. During the service Mr. Sutcliffe sang the hymn "Why I Love Him."

Rev. Dr. Young of St. Andrew's Church conducted the special service on Wednesday evening, and his subject was the Church of the Living God . His eloquent earnest manner impressed the congregation and they found new inspiration in his address.

Mark Street Church will observe the anniversary on Sunday with special services and a cordial invitation is extended to all.

Deformed Person Is Not Wanted

A picture sermon, "The Indians of Northern Manitoba" will be given in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday night.

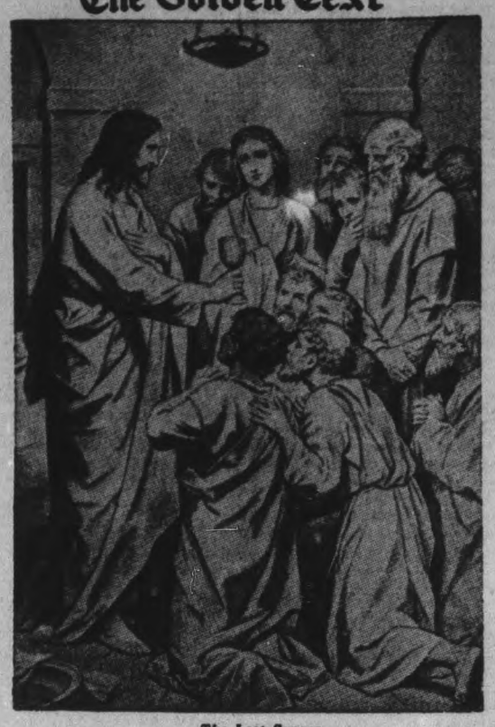
A writer on Indian lore says that amongst the Indians a deformed person is not of any importance. We can readily imagine that in the old days this was true. These people lived a roving, carefree life and a person who was malmed in any way found it almost impossible to live the type of life that was required. However we are quite sure that in the modern reservations the Indians are kind to their children, and especially to any of them who are handicapped from birth by deformity of any kind.

This story concerns an Indian girl called Emily who was crippled so badly that she could scarcely walk. She was discovered by a young missionary at Indian Lake where the Arctic twilight shrouds the landscape for a large part of the year. The kindness of a prominent surgeon in Winnipeg, the faithful dog team and their long trek over the snow wastes are factors in a thrilling little story in which the crippled Indian girl regains activity of life and limb.

The heroisms of missionaries in these northern regions are worth telling. If our people knew more of the sacrifices they make, and of the benefits they bring to body and soul our missionary funds would not show the decreases they have shown.

Mines of New South Wales produced metals worth $82,500,000 last year.

The Golden Text



The Last Supper

"This do in remembrance of me."—I Cor. 11:24.

Highlights Of S.S. Lesson

IN THE UPPER ROOM
By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for March 3, is Matthew 20:1-30, the Golden Text being I Corinthians 11:24. "This do in remembrance of Me.")

"THEN ASSEMBLED together the chief priests and the scribes and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas, and consulted that they might take Jesus by subtlety and kill Him." This was Tuesday, April 4, A.D. 30, authorities tell us.

"But they said," the account records. "Not on the feast day lest there be an uproar among the people." It was at this meeting that they decided to pay someone to betray Jesus to them.

Jesus, meanwhile, had gone to the home of Simon, the leper, who probably had been cured of his affliction. Historians say this occasion was either this same Tuesday or the Saturday before, April 1. While Jesus sat at table with His friends a woman (we are told it undoubtedly was Mary, sister of Martha and Lazarus, who seem to have been well off) came to Him having a small alabaster box of precious ointment in her hand. This ointment was so expensive it was said to be worth the pay of a common laborer for one whole year. Mary approached Jesus, brake the alabaster box and poured the precious ointment on Jesus' head as a token of her devotion.

Apostles Shocked

The apostles were scandalized at this extravagance. They said the ointment should have been sold and the money obtained given to the poor.

"When Jesus understood," says Matthew. He said, "Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon Me. For ye have the poor always with you; but Me ye have not always.

"For in that she has poured this ointment on my body she did it for My burial.

"Verily I say unto you, wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial to her."

Just before this event Jesus had told His apostles that "after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of Man is betrayed to be crucified. Nowhere is it recorded ho wthe apostles felt when Jesus made these statements, and whether they believed them and were sad thinking that such a terrible tragedy was so near. As Jesus finished speaking of the woman and her ointment, Judas Iscariot went out to the chief priests and asked them what they would give him for betraying his Master. They bargained with him for a thirty pieces of silver. From the time Judas sought an opportunity to betray his Lord.

One wonders why Jesus kept this man Judas among His friends and followers. He must have known what manner of man he was. Did He think that maybe His influence and teachings would change the man, or did He feel that someone would betray Him and Judas was the one appointed to do it?

Held In Upper Room

The Last Supper was held in an upper room in the house, it is surmised, of Lazarus, Mary and Martha. The disciples had asked where the Master wished to eat the feast. "Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, I will keep the passover at thy house with My disciples." And the disciples had done as Jesus said.

There at the home of His friends, seated at the table with His apostles, He looked about at them and said, "Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray Me."

Very sorrowfuly each apostle asked Him, "Lord, is it I?" And when Judas asked as the rest Jesus answered, "Thou hast said." It is odd that the others did not understand and turn Judas out or put him where he could do no mischief. Or maybe, as all was planned, their eyes were blinded, their understanding dulled, or the'r hands were tied.

"And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is My body.

"And He took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; for this is My blood of the new testament, which is shed for many of the remission of sins.

'But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's Kingdom."

"And when they had sung a hymn," said Matthew, "they went out into the Mount of Olives."

Two days later Jesus was to die on the cross not for any sin of His, but to redeem us. Surely, we should strive to live the life He wishes us to live, to follow in His footsteps as well as we are able, and so be fitted to meet Him in His Father's Kingdom.

In the Upper Room — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew 26:1-30

The chief priests, the scribes and elders assembled together two days before the feats of the Passover in the palace of the high priest and consulted that they might take Jesus and kill Him

At the same time esus was eating at the woman came to Him, having a precious alhome of one of His friends in Bethany, a abaster box of ointment, which she poured on His head.

The apostles were angry because the woman was extravagant with the precious ointment which they said should have been sold and given to the poor, but Jesus said:

As they ate Jesus said: "Verily I say unto "She did it for my burial."
you that one of you shall betray me." Judas asked. "Is it I?" and the Master answered, "Thou hast said."

Valuable Six Months

Despatches which come from London are outspokenly frank in stating that Britain was not well prepared for war at the time when war was declared. One sentence is typical of many others. Just this:

"Britain's war machine, which admittedly had many defects when war came last autumn, has strengthened and expended almost beyond belief in six months."

That statement came in a cable and it would have had to pass the censor before being released. Nor has there been at any time any attempt made to hide the fact that Britain was not fully prepared for war. In September of 1938 it was disclosed that when war looked certain the air defences of London were in a disordered mess. When they were tried out it was found that parts of the guns were missing, that ammunition to fit was not available, and that many of the searchlights were as good as useless. All that was fully admitted and discussed in the British Commons.

Nor have we seen it claimed there was any particular disgrace attached to it. It was the result of the desire on the part of Britain for disarmament. Britain's guess proved to be wrong because armament was being piled up elsewhere. But the fact that her preparations were less than other nations can be accepted as evidence of her sincerity in seeking to have nations move toward disarmament, a movement in which Britain herself was prepared to take the lead.

The six months of "war without warfare" has been a blessing for Britain. The stock of munitions piled up in that country today is amazing; the rapidity with which her air force has grown is the same. The margin of preparedness and safety is immeasurably greater than at the beginning of September. And in that six-months period troops from the overseas Dominions have arrived; the greatest plan for air training ever devised has been put into operation. Why Germany allowed those six months to pass without launching a major attack is something which has never been explained and which cannot be understood.

Using Hitler's Book

What to read and what not to read in order that one may keep well in line with the wishes of censors and at the same time comply with national sentiment becomes a problem.

Some years ago Hitler when in prison wrote "Mein Kampf," which means "My Battle" or something like that. It is considered the text book of Nazi thought and belief and aggression. It is just too bad if a German family is found without a copy of the book in its possession.

At first glance one might conclude the book would be banned in the countries of the Allies. But it isn't. What's more the British War Office has recommended it as one of the 1,321 books which should be sent to the troops.

There is a special edition being published in Britain now, an unexpurgated English version—nothing left out or added to the text. But the new book has been dolled up somewhat, and it is profusely illustrated; plenty of pictures of Hitler in it to make it more interesting.

The British Red Cross is getting all the profits from the venture; actually making money out of Hitler's brain child in order to have money for war efforts. Possibly it might be regarded as a case of literary piracy, but at the moment there is little he can do about it. Strange though when you come to think of it—the book on which the Third Reich was built being forwarded to the troops in France who are now out to fight the same Third Reich.

It Seems To Pay

A pumper for the Peterborough Fire Department which was ordered some time ago at a price of $9,000, is now priced at $12,000, but that does not affect the local purchase.

Most communities are the same; as a rule they are not keen about spending money for fire fighting equipment. They generally consider it good business to extract the last bit of usage out of what they have before going into the market for something newer and better.

The decrease in insurance rates which has taken place within recent times benefits a good many people in our city, and the illustration given here is an indication of the change. One property holder was showing the Examiner figures for the $3,500 insurance he carried on his house and garage. The three-year premium he paid was $21.23. That runs out in August of this year, and he can renew the policy and have the same coverage for $17.36, and a decrease would never be made unless there were the efficient fire department and good equipment to back it up. Increasing fire fighting equipment is actually one expenditure where people stand a good chance of getting their money back.

One Picture Missing

Telling the story of a bank robbery in pictures is good enough newspaper practice. It gives so many people a chance to get their picture in the paper. Gives to the bank building an opportunity to have its picture taken, and bank buildings are so obliging that way; they remain still and unmoved while the operation is on.

We noticed that the Globe and Mail used two and a-half columns of space to picture a bank robbery. After the robbery was over the bandit went to a moving picture show and changed his clothing in the wash room. Then he departed with $646 in his pocket.

Interesting to note all the things shown in the picture. No. 1 was the teller who took two shots at the bandit—and missed; No. 3 was the ledgerkeeper who chased the bandit in a car and took four shots at him—and missed. No. 6 was the junior clerk who also took a shot at the bandit—and missed. No. 8 was the picture of a hole in the wall showing where one of the bullets had lodged, and that looked rather impressive, although a hole in the wall has no effective connection with stopping the bandit.

Then there is the picture of a detective stooping over with flashlight in hand looking at the room where the bandit changed his clothes. Our book on "How to Be a Detective" indicates that stooping over and looking closely at the floor is quite the right attitude.

In all nine pictures, and the only one missing is that of the man who robbed the bank.

"They Heard . . ."

"They heard there was a demand for carpenters and laborers." A story coming from London, Ont., tells of a number of men in the building trades flocking to that city looking for work. Two of them said they had hitch-hiked from Belleville. In all several hundred have arrived.

There will be work to be done when the building season opens, but there are plenty of men in London to attend to it. They live there and most of them have been idle; they are now waiting for their season to open and the work will be given to them, which seems to be right enough.

So there again comes the result of that old thing—"They heard." Where did they hear it? They may have read a report that certain buildings were going up, but they never read a word saying that carpenters and laborers were scarce and would be given employment.

One might well wish we had a better system for caring for this very thing. Two men from Belleville "heard" and away they went, probably in the high hope that they would have employment. Hitch-hiking is not the most pleasant way to travel, but "they heard" there was work to be had in London, and that was sufficient. A trip of 250 miles or so only to find that what "they heard" was not so, and after that there will be another 250 miles to get home. All for nothing. The presence of war has possibly made us forget something of the people who are up and going when it is rumored there is work to be had.

The Government has employment offices in cities and they would be in a position to tell plain facts about employment or prospects in any part of the province. If they were more used for that purpose it might to some degree prevent those mass movements of anxious people who "hear" about workers being scarce in various localities.

Can't Escape It

Italy has done well by staying out of the war. We have seen that stated a number of times, and the contention was that Italian liners were well employed and her merchant carriers had been busy.

But if that is the case the people in the country are finding they have to put their hands deeper in the family purse because other countries are at war. There is a strict form of rationing in certain lines and two days in each week in which people can have no meat. Coffee, sugar and gasoline are so severely rationed that one can secure less of them than in some of the countries which are at war. Gas for cooking purposes is cut off after nine in the morning.

Coffee is $1.10 per pound when it can be secured, and coffee is a popular drink in Italy; sugar is 18 cents per pound and eggs are 55 cents per dozen. The significance of the prices quoted here becomes more apparent when it is stated that $75 per month is considered a good salary for a man holding what we might refer to as a fairly select white collar job. The people of Italy are finding that if their country is not at war, then they are paying because other countries are.

Their Last Ride

It may be the truth that people are accustomed to seeing so many pictures of wrecked and smashed cars that they accept them as common. Not only do they see them in pictures, but they see them being towed along the street on the way to the places where they mend them. Smashed-in things they are, strung up in front and riding on their hind wheels only. People turn and stare at them as they pass.

There is a picture in a paper on the desk at the moment. One section shows a wrecked car, and it looks like one of those old fellows with curtains on the side. It has been smashed all to pieces. Looks as though a giant had taken a clout at it and landed full force.

The rest of the picture shows a railway track where it crosses a road, and some distance down the track there is one of those arrows which they paint on such a picture, indicating the place to which the car was carried on the pilot of the locomotive.

But it's not a picture of "just another wreck," and it is not one of those events which we can regard as commonplace and bound to happen.

There were two men riding in the car, Melvin Armstrong and Mathew Bilger, and they were both in their seventies, and we read they had been friends from boyhood and "were lifelong residents of the Courtland district."

We don't know anything more about it, but that smashed and battered car and that arrow away down the track tell a good deal if one cares to stop for a few moments and think it over.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Sumner Welles, U.S. peace delegate to Europe, is in Berlin to talk with Hitler, and we have no doubt Hitler will take sufficient time out to tell him plenty.

The censor of shows in Boston went back stage after the first act and ordered the ladies to put on more clothes or the show would be shut. Possibly it looked too much like a skin game.

The Bowmanville Statesman says "Most editors have untidy desks." The editor of that very fine paper will have to do better than that because there's no news in that statement.

In California an auto raced a train toward a crossing. The car with four occupants was tossed or dragged 400 feet, but no one was seriously hurt. After which the driver was given a police ticket for failing to heed a crossing signal.

Members of a women's club in New Jersey said they would rather go to jail than answer questions asked by the census takers about their age, previous marriages and income. Possibly the gals overlook the stubborn fact that we are all getting older at exactly the same rate.

We were reading in a Toronto paper about some outstanding pianist who visited that city, and from the report we quote: "She has wrists of steel and fingers of quicksilver, combined with an architect's sense of form, a painter's feel for color, a poet's sensitiveness, and muscular strength which a village blacksmith might envy." If she ever comes this way we'd be inclined to go and see the lady.

The Chatham News displayed a sort of daring in its columns the other day which is not likely to spread. It printed the pictures of four people who were celebrating Leap Year birthdays, and they were all ladies, running from eight to eighty. In between were two hovering around the fifties, but their exact ages were printed. We have known Bill Angus for a long time as a high-class gentleman and thoroughly good newspaper man, but we never suspected he was so brave.

PINK SEDAN

¶ The salesman was a keen young man, he gazed upon my pink sedan, his smile I thought was crude; he said it was a rattletrap, and little use except for scrap, I thought him rather rude.

¶ And then he went right on to state, my pink sedan was out of date, it must run very slow; he spoke about defects and such, but really didn't tell me much, I knew it long ago.

¶ He told me of the oil 'twould burn, each time a mile or so I'd turn, 'twould use my purse quite rough; nothing new at all in that, in fact I thought his talk was flat, I'd had to buy the stuff.

¶ And then I opened up and talked, my pink sedan had never balked, the seats were soft indeed; I told him 'twas a gentle thing, 'twould go again when come the spring, and be no broken reed.

¶ I told him how it looked when new, why I picked pink instead of blue, of that design I'm proud; for when it comes to summer time, when fifty cars stand in a line, I see it in the crowd.

¶ That salesman's kind of tough I think, he didn't even smile or blink, just opened once his trap; my pink sedan was out of date, a broken and a spavined crate—and only good for scrap.

MEETINGS VS. RADIO

THE political mass meeting offers an opportunity for everybody in the district to see and hear one of the country's notables, supported by a cast of lesser lights. It is an occasion for social intercourse, since the gathering brings together old friends from all parts of the district. It is a spectacle with the vast crowd, the band playing, and the thunderous applause. The political rally induces a good deal of excitement. There is a thrill in attending, just to sense the atmosphere. It is well nigh impossible to develop comparable excitement over the delivery of a radio address.—Halifax Chronicle.

Quite Modern

• Waste No Tears On Thysson

IF ANY TEARS must be shed over Fritz Thyssen, the German whose vast steel industry has been confiscated by the Nazis and who is now a refugee in Switzerland, let them be all glycerine tears. Thyssen deserves none of the pity which the occasional soft-hearted and soft-headed person in Allied countries seems inclined to give him. Thyssen is a man who sowed the wind and reaped the whirlwind.

If the whirlwind he had a large share in starting affected only himself there might be reason to pity him, but the same whirlwind is the one that is affecting millions of entirely innocent persons all over the world. Thyssen provided financial support for the Nazis at a time when the National Socialist Party would likely have collapsed without it. Thyssen was in the business of making death-dealing weapon at a time when the ordinary people of the world were demanding disarmament. Thyssen was also having labor troubles at a time when the workmen of Germany were striving to secure an approximation of employer-employee relations that exist in democratic countries. Thyssen saw in Hitler and his Nazis an opportunity to create a regime in Germany that would give him all the conditions which he selfishly desired. He was content with the Nazi regime while it was bullying and threatening small neighbors. His conversion to anti-Nazism did not occur until the still more ruthless Hitler and Goering robbed the ruthless Thyssen.

If as an exile Thyssen has any means or influence to hasten the overthrow of the Hitler regime it would be foolish of the Allies not to accept any genuine aid he can give, but there is no need to become sentimental about it. It will be time enough to do that when he proves that he has had a change of character as well as fortune.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

• Time For Dropping Personalities

THIRTY MINISTERS representing different Christian churches in Hamilton have approved the suggestion that personalities should be avoided in the present political campaign during Holy Week. The suggestion was made by a candidate in one of the city ridings in deference to Roman Catholics and Protestants who regard this period of Lent as especially hallowed. It is doubtful, however, whether the appeal will have any noticeable effect. Those campaigners who indulge in personalities are not likely to be influenced by the request that they desist from using these because of any moral obligations that Holy Week might entail.

These apparently labor under the mistaken impression that personalities lend a certain amount of picturesque strength to their orations. It is, therefore, unlikely that they will abandon their abusive tactics on the home stretch of the campaign, the election being on the Tuesday following the conclusion of Holy Week. Apart from those who think that the use of personalities is an essential part of an election campaign, there are others, notes St. Thomas Times-Journal, who are so small-souled, so mean in disposition that indulging in personalities becomes second nature to them. These are totally incapable of responding to the nobler feelings which should distinguish Holy Week.

While there seems to be little prospect that this most solemn week of the year for all real Christians will result in a reduction of election personalities, the suggestion of the Hamilton candidate and the endorsation of the ministers serve to remind one that there is need of improvement in this respect. Personalities are still the stock-in-trade of some campaigners, although not used as freely as they were in days gone by. The Hamilton ministers, in endorsing the suggestion for a personalities truce in Holy Week, expressed the hope that "this high level should be maintained throughout the whole campaign." Many will re-echo this hope. In the days when elections were red-hot affairs, when partisanship reached the boiling point and all political opponents were regarded as liars and cutthroats, for the duration of the campaign, personalities of the most lurid nature were condoned, even welcomed. Now, however, when elections are affairs more of rationality than of venomous epithets, personalities have lost whatever appeal they may have once had. Election audiences now want to hear measures attacked, but not men. In fact, when a speaker resorts to personalities there is a feeling on the part of his listeners that he does this in order to cover up the weakness of his case. A speaker, if he has a thorough knowledge of his case, and believes thoroughly in the justice of his cause, can be forceful, entertaining and convincing albeit he talks like a gentleman. But if he turns gutter-snipe, and vomits personalities, he loses both force and appeal.

FREEDOM IN WARTIME

THE Dominion Government would do a wise thing if it made clear that the administration of the Defence of Canada Regulations — the special powers granted it to restrict peace-time liberty in the interests of our war effort—should be left wholly to it and its own law officers. As things stand just now action can be taken under the regulations by any provincial attorney general, with the result that they are administered with varying degrees of wisdom and activity from province to province. In Ontario, Mr. Conant has instituted a senseless regin of terror against many harmless though foolish people. In Manitoba, on the other hand, prudence commendable in its rear our law officers have maintained a straint, its respect of freedom and its sense of the value of freedom as part of the national war effort. — Winnipeg Free Press.

HAMILTON PAYS MORE

The increase of a mill and a half in the local tax rate stands. After careful reconsideration, the City Council has approved the 40-mill rate. It is a disappointing climax to four years of consistently reduced taxation, especially when hopes had been raised that this year the administration would be able to better its former performance.

Unforeseen expenditures, a reduction in the provincial grant to municipalities, lower receipts than had been expected, increased relief costs, the requirements of the independent boards and the outbreak of war are the major factors responsible for the increase.—Hamilton Spectator.

TO SAVE THEIR CARS

Most citizens do not deliberately leave their houses open for thieves to enter. Nor do they leave money, jewelry or other valuables handy for any who would like to pick them up. If they would exercise the same care with automobiles, there would be a lot fewer stolen, and a less jail population. If motorists decline to lock their cars, they are, in a sense, accessories to crime, and cannot complain if they are compelled to do so. —Windsor Star.

DUD CONVENTIONS

THERE'S a reason why the Social Crediters' nomination meetings so far have been "duds".

Back in 1935 Social Credit was a crusade with all the religious fervor that goes along with a crusade.

Today Social Credit is a political racket run by the few for the few with the public putting up the money in the way of millions of dollars of new taxes. — Lethbridge Herald.

HOCKEY ALL NIGHT

Hastings held its annual hockey tournament for the Bert Porter trophy and this small village's rink was jammed with 1,200 hockey fans. They came to the number of 400 on a special train which started in Omemee, picked up passengers in Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Burnt River, Kinmount, Donald, Gelert, etc., on its way north and finally unloaded at the snow-covered station in Haliburton. The rest came from the village and the country immediately surrounding it.

There were several games and the final tilt was over just at three o'clock in the morning. The point is, the crowd was still there.—Lindsay Post.

KISSING IN PUBLIC

(Letter in Toronto Globe and Mail)

May I protest against the publication at this time of photographs of farewell kissing? From an artistic standpoint, alone a fervent kiss is not beautiful; both faces are pushed flat. All self-respecting Canadian women are making their farewells as painless as possible to the men who are leaving to serve their country but it is often impossible to restrain one's emotion entirely. However, there is no necessity to parade this very human failing, or to advertise to the enemy that our will to win has faltered even momentarily.

MISTRESS MARY.

A Bit of Nonsense

Casualty

With tears on her baby cheeks, little evacuee Ethel ran up to the special constable.

"P-p-please, sir," she sobbed, "will you come and lock a bad man up?" "What's he been doing?" asked the man in blue.

"Oo-boo-boo," wailed Ethel, "he's b-b-broken up my hoop wif 'is nasty bicycle."

"Where is he?" asked the special.

"Oh, you'll easily catch 'im," said Ethel, drying her tears, "They've just carried 'im into that chemist's shop on a shutter."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And he said, Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it? It is like a grain of mustard seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in he earth: but when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than al lherbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it.

And with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it. But without a parable spake he not unto them: and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.—Mark iv. 30-34.

HIS NAME WAS HITLER

At a Nazi Gestapo headquarters in a small Polish village near Vloclavac, a seventy-year-old Jew presented himself and asked for an exit visa.

In answer to the questions of the Gestapo official he said he was a Latvian citizen, a native of Riga, and that he wished to return to that town.

On being asked his name the old gentleman replied:—

"Adolf Hittler."

Suspecting an insult to the Fuehrer, the Gestapo man demanded to see the Jew's paper. There was the name "Adolf Hittler" all right, although it was spelt with a double "t".

The Gestapo man got into touch with the highest official in the district, keeping the old man in custody meantime.

There was a big pow-wow, and it was decided not to let Adolf Hittler leave the village, in order to avoid the publicity which the discovery that the Fuehrer's name was common among Jews would provoke.

The old gentleman, however wasn't standing for anything like that. Being a Latvian citizen he had the right to appeal to higher authorities in Warsaw. Last week he received permission to leave Poland for Latvia.

This is not the first time that the name "Hitler" has caused embarassment to sensitive Nazi officials. Just before the war a Slovak Jew named Adolf Hitler was refused a visa for Germany because of his moniker.

Among Rumanian and Czecho-Slovak Jews the name "Hitler" is comparatively common and many bearers have changed it for something less conspicuous during the past few years.

Four Kitchener Policemen Are Suspended

KITCHENER, March 2.—"I want a thorough investigation now, and no hang-overs. If there are to be any more charges brought against members of the force, then let them be brought now," declared Magistrate John R. Blake, at a meeting of the Kitchener Police Commission last night.

Following the meeting, four officers were under suspension. Two were suspended February 27 and two two after last night's meeting.

Magistrate Blake, who is chairman of the commission, asserted that "everything must be cleaned up now and finally wiped out, even if every member of the department has to go."

He referred briefly to action of City Council Tuesday night in demanding a complete investigation of the police force.

At yesterday's meeting of the commission, at which two members of the force appeared, it was decided to leave their cases in abeyance. The two men have been under suspension since Tuesday of last week following an automobile accident, will be dealt with at a special meeting to be called early next week.

The driver of the car, a second-class officer receiving the salary of a first-class constable, is charged with drinking while off duty and using abusive language to a private citizen, Chief Constable William Hodgson stated.

According to the chief, the officer following the accident, told a woman residing on the street to "get to hell back into the house and mind your own business."

"I didn't say that as a remember," testified the officer when called before the commission. "I think I told her to 'mind her own darned business'," he said. The officer admitted to the commission he and a fellow officer "had had three beers with an alderman of the city at a hotel in Bridgeport before their auto hit a pole. The alderman had been driven home prior to that," he said.

"I told him that I didn't think he was drunk, but that he had strong liquor breath," the Mayor stated.

Ask Resignation.

Chief Hodgson recommended the constable be asked for his resignation, and was supported by the Mayor, who said he would "uphold any move to clean up the police force," but the chairman, Judge E. W. Clement, contended a fine and demotion would be sufficient punishment.

When the case of the other officer involved in the accident came before the commission Chief Hodgson revealed he had not been suspended as a result of the accident, but for "disloyalty to the police force." His case was also left for decision until next week.

"He has been disloyal, running to the Mayor, and trying to undermine me generally," stated the chief constable. "I had every member of the police force at a meeting on December 29 in the court room, and told them that I had gone to bat for them in the past, but that after this they would have to stand on their own feet," related Chief Hodgson. "I told them then that if any of them had anything on their chest they had better get it off right now."

The commission instructed the chief constable to formulate specific charges against the officer and present them to the officer and the commission. Chief Hodgson stated he would also recommend the dismissal of this officer.

While he did not appear before the commission at last night's meeting, a third officer, a first-class constable, was suspended by the commission on the recommendation of the chief constable, who charged he had "caught another officer stealing from a store and did not arrest him."

Following the meeting, Mayor Meinzinger instructed Chief Hodgson to suspend the officer he alleged had been caught stealing, until next week's meeting.

Grandstand – And It's All Mine

The rising generation in England does not scare easily. As witness this little chap listening to what wild waves are saying somewhere on the east coat. He is squatted comfortably (we hope) atop a marine mine that had been washed ashore. For your peace of mind, however, we hasten to explain that the detonator has been removed and the infernal machine, potent enough to sink a ship, is virtually harmless.

Canon L. A. Dixon To Preach In City

The Reverend Canon Leonard A. Dixon, O.B.E., will be a week-end visitor in the city preaching on Sunday morning in St. John's Church and in the evening at All Saints' Church. Canon Dixon is a son of the late Canon Dixon, formerly rector of the well-known "Little Trinity" Church in the section of Toronto just west of the River Don and on the south side of King street. After graduating from the University of Toronto he studied theology at Wycliffe College where he was a classmate of Canon Paterson of this city. After his ordination he went to India under the ausuices of the Y.M.C.A. and later accompanied the Indian troops to Messapotamia. His good work there as recognized by the King who conferred on him the Order of the British Empire.

On his return to Canada he became secretary of the Student Christian Union in the University of Toronto and later rector of St. James' Church in Orillia. Two years ago he was appointed Field Secretary of the Missionary Society of the Church of England in Canada and on the death of Canon Gould he was appointed General Secretary of the Society.

Only a week ago the announcement was made that Archbishop Owen had made him one of the Canons of St. James' Cathedral.

Bridges Ready

Luxembourg, March 2 (AP)

THE German command was reported in usually reliable quarters today to have concentrated pontoon bridges near destroyed bridges which formerly spanned the Moselle, Sauer and Our rivers, forming the boundary of Germany and the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg.

These sources said German military engineers in recent weeks have made soundings of these rivers, especially at fordable points. Similar soundings were reported in December.

Roosevelt Will Give Wife $65,000 Cash

LOS ANGELES, March 2—(AP).—Betsey Cushing Roosevelt, without opposition from her film-producer husband James, went to court yesterday to seek a divorce under which she may receive $65,000 immediately and $50,000, if she wants it, five years hence.

She testified that relations had been strained between her and the President's eldest son, since he first asked for his freedom in May, 1938. After hearing her the judge set the case over until Monday so her brother, Henry K. Cushing, suddenly taken ill, could appear.

In October, 1938, Mrs. Roosevelt said, her husband left their home in the East and came to California without asking her to accompany him. She followed a month later, then:

"He said he wanted a divorce and asked me to leave California."

This she did, she told the court, "as I thought it was best for the children." She never was asked to return, she added.

Terms of a property settlement made out of court give Mrs. Roosevelt sole custody of their two children, Sara Delano, 7, and Kate, 4, although the father will be permitted to confer on such matters as education. It provides $167.50 a month for each child until they are 12, then $250 a month.

It also give them 2 per cent. of their father's income above $50,000 in 1940-43, inclusive, and 5 per cent. in 1944 and thereafter.

Provision was made for payments of $1,500 to Mrs. Roosevelt January 7 and February 7 and $65,000 today. At the end of five years, if she is alive and unmarried, she will receive $50,000 cash, or $5,000 a year for life. Roosevelt agreed to take out a $25,000 insurance policy for each child. The settlement remains to be approved officially by Judge Thomas C. Gould.

CAMPBELLFORD

War Song Sung At School "Lit"

CAMPBELLFORD, March 2. — (ENS).—A program dedicated especially to Canadian soldiers was presented by Fourth Form High School students before members of the Literary Society in the school auditorium. All of the boys taking part were dressed in khaki and a highlight of the entertainment was a short skit depicting soldiers enjoying a few days' leave gathered round a piano in an estamient where they joined in singing a number of well-known war songs.

President Joe O'Sullivan presided for the program which opened with a chorus by the entire form, "Hap, Hap, Happy Day" followed by Don Frederick and a group of boys doing a comic song. A chorus of girls gave "In An Old Dutch Garden," and a mixed chorus offered the popular, "Oh, Johnnie." A piano interlude preceded the one-act play, "George The Butler," which included in the cast Mary Rutherford, Doris Sherwin, Betty Keller and Alex. McCulloch. At the conclusion Murray Maxwell gave the critic's report, commending the Fourth Formers on their fine program.

Radio Photos From Airplanes

This photo of the late King Edward VII., INSET, was transmitted from Paris to London November 8, 1907, and is one of the first pictures ever sent by wire. The sender was Dr. Arthur Korn, ABOVE, a recent emigre from Germany, who is now teaching higher physics in the department of electrical engineering of Stevens Institute of Technology, in Hoboken, N.J. The scientist, who sent the first photograph over wire in 1904, and whose research laid the groundwork for the technique of modern radio and telephotography, predicts that the forthcoming military development of the war will be the radio transmission of photos from airplanes in flight. When he wired the first photo to England from the continent in 1907, his invention became a sensation in Europe.

Food Shortage

Montevideo March 2 (CP-Havas)

RUMORS of an impending naval battle along the Uruguayan coast continued to be heard today.

A radio report said a German pocket battleship, a submarine, and a large merchant vessel had been observed off the coast of Rio Grande Do Sul, Brazil. Two French and three British warships were reported in the vicinity, near Punta Del Este.

Yugoslavs Trace Ring Of Spies

BELGRADE, March 2 (CP-Havas)—Yugoslav police revealed today they are on the trail of a nation-wide ring of spies and propagandists established by the German Gestapo in this country.

The ring was first uncovered with the arrest of 10 Germans in Slovenia Feb. 23. It was later found to have ramifications. Its task was to keep tabs on the German-speaking minority and to relay information of a military nature.

Two Arrested

ROTTERDAM, March 2—(AP). — Police today announced the arrest of two men and the confiscation of a secret radio transmitter allegedly used to send weather information to Germany for the benefit of military fliers. The prisoners were listed as H. Dreves of Essen, a German, and a Hollander identified only by the initials P.B.

4 Lost In Flood Found Up Tree

MERIDAN, Calif., Mar. 2—(AP)—Four of the five persons who were thought to have drowned in a flood early to-day, were found safe in a tree surrounded by swirling water.

Six persons were thrown into the flood when their automobile overturned as they fled when a river dike burst.

Of the six, only one, Mrs. Frank Fleharty was missing, and members of her family believed she drowned.

Rescue workers said the other members of the family clung to the tree branches from 2 a.m. until 8.15 a.m.

The breaking of the dike was believed to have saved the city of Colusa from grave peril. The breach eased the pressure of back water at Colusa, about eight miles to the north, after the Sacramento River had crested at 29.5 feet, higher than the record flood of 1907.

Private Firms To Train Pilots

LONDON, Ont., March 2—(CP).—Private stock companies across Canada will play a major part in a system capable of turning out 3,000 air pilots every second month, Transport Minister Howe said here last night in an interview.

The plan will take in flying clubs and other privately financed units and students will be instructed on a basis of a contract between the schools and the government, Mr. Howe said.

"It is just a matter of adjusting cost terms," the Minister said. "There is a slight difference between those of the Department of National Defence and those of the private corporations, but it is not so far apart that agreement cannot be reached in a short time."

The scheme applies only to preliminary training, the Minister said.

QUAKER GIRLS' CAGE TEAMS CAPTURE DOUBLE WIN AT Y.W.C.A.

St. John's Lose As 'Y' Gym Drops Decision

The two Quaker teams made a grand slam of the doubleheader in the Ladies' City Basketball League series in the Y.W.C.A. Friday night, winning two of the lowest scoring games of the season. The Aces triumphed over the "Y" Gym 13 to 9 and the Debs pulled an upset by defeating St. John's 9 to 6, the loss being a costly one to the Anglican girls in their battle for a playoff berth.

It is seldom that a cage team wins a game by scoring only two field baskets but the Quaker Debs turned that trick in the first game at the expense of St. John's. The Saints scored two baskets from the field themselves but only managed to register twice out of 11 free throws while the Debs notched five out of 13 and that represented their margin of victory. Both teams were guilty of inaccurate shooting all through the engagement and their bad marksmanship threw away frequent scoring opportunities. It was probably St. John's worst display of the season and the exhibition of both teams was well below the usual standard set by the loop teams.

Close Enough

There was little between the two teams in the first half although Debs led by 5 to 4 at the rest period. In the second session, however, the St. John's girls registered only one basket, Agnes Bowler doing the trick, and the Quaker lasses matched that with a score from the field by Ruth Farr and two unsuccessful free throws to give them a margin of three points at the finish.

Only seven players on the two teams managed to get on the score sheet at all. Ruth Farr and H. White each got three points to lead the winners' attack while Agnes Bowler notched three for the St. John's girls.

Quaker Debs (9)—H. White (3), B. Frizzelle, R. Farr (3), J. Metcalfe (1), D. Smith, G. Allen, D. Gibbs, B. Fenner (2), H. Tighe.

St. John's (6)—T. Laws (1), D. Groombridge, H. Harte-Maxwell, E. Clark (2), E. Harte-Maxwell, H. Douglas, A. Bowler (3), E. Foster, F. Gynane.

Referee, H. Smith. Umpire, J. Cooper.

Close Checking

Quaker Aces and 'Y' Gym started out as if they were going to set up a lower scoring record than the other two teams and at the end of the first period the count was only 3 to 2 with the Aces leading because S. Alexander had scored on a foul as well as tossing in a field basket while all the 'Y' had to show on the score board was a solitary basket from the field by Ruth Dalliday.

In the second half however, the teams began to roll a little better, Aces score 13 points of which Peggy Lawless was responsible for six and the losers getting seven with Ruth Dalliday clicking for five of them. An oddity of the game was that Ruth Dalliday was the only 'Y' player to score a basket from the field and got all but two of her team's points; B. DeMaio being responsible for the other two by converting two foul throws.

S. Alexander with five points and Peggy Lawless with four were the chief marksmen for the winners. As in the first game it was their success with free throws that set up the Quaker victory, the Aces getting five points in this way out of 11 chances.

Quaker Aces (13)—D. Weese (2), J. Fowler, E. Kirn, M. Sullivan, P. Lawless (4), M. Hooten, M. Duncan (2), S. Alexander (5), A. Grady.

'Y' Gym (9)—L. Wesley, B. DeMaio (2), R. Dalliday (7), I. Young, S. Florence, F. Craig, R. Sullivan, S. Zakos, B. Flynn, B. Pomeroy.

Referee, Ken Gillespie; umpire, J. Cooper.

Hard To Catch On

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 2.—Maybe you would think New York Yankees would be satisfied with Babe Dahlgren at first base. He is one of the flashiest fielders in the game, batted in 89 runs last year, and the champs could afford to carry a light hitter if any club could.

But Manager Joe McCarthy is giving a lot of attention to Johnny Sturm, a first sacker up from Kansas City, and in addition has disclosed Mike Chartak, an outfielder for the Newark farm, would be tried at first.

Curling Classic Will Use Neutral Rocks

WINNIPEG, March 2.—(CP)—Neutral rocks will be an innovation of the 14th annual Macdonald's Brier Bonspiel opening here Monday, first time the Canadian curling classic has been played outside Toronto.

The stones will be place on each of the five sheets of ice laid out in the amphitheatre rink and will remain there for duration of the round-robin series. Only one rink, number nine in the draw, will play the same set of rocks twice.

The rocks, of standard weight and club style, replace the former practice of individual stones selected to each curler's idea of weight and type. One set on each ice will be painted blue, the other red.

General etiquette of curling demands that the oldest club always play blue rocks but rinks entering the Brier automatically lose their identity as club or association rinks and become a provincial entry only. Therefore the color of the stones each rink will use will be determined by the draw.

Crowds of 2,000 and 3,000 generally attend final matches of the Manitoba bonspiel and, with Brier interest keen, the classic is expected to attract the largest galleries since is inauguration in 1927. The amphitheatre seats 5,000.

Bert Hall's Kitchener, Ont., rink is intact for defence of the Tankard won last year in Toronto but two others competing skips, Cliff Manahan of Edmonton and Howard Wood, Winnipeg, are former champions.

PRO PUCK PERSONALITIES

(By Central Press Canadian).

Muz Patrick

Youngest, largest and most athletic of the Patrick clan, that is so much a part of the National League — or of hockey itself, for that matter — is Murray, more familiarly known as Muz. Next to Lionel Conacher, Muz could possibly be called Canada's greatest all-round athlete. He won the Dominion amateur heavyweight boxing championship. He was good enough at basketball to play on a Dominion championship team. He's been an ardent bike racer and taken part in six-day grinds, been better than fair at soccer, rugger, track and field and dabbled in about everything else. But this is supposed to deal with hockey, so how has his ice career gone? He first played on the Pacific coast, where the Patricks lived, later in Montreal when the family moved east, and made a preliminary move into Ranger circles by joining the amateur Rovers five years ago (they were called the Crescents then). After a couple of seasons with them he moved up in the usual Ranger fashion to Philadelphia Ramblers and first saw N.H.L. action two seasons ago, although most of the season was spent at Philly. For the past two winters now, he's been a full-fledged Ranger, teaming with the veteran star, Art Coulter, to form a pretty tough pair to get by. Twenty-five years old, he stands six-foot two, and makes the scales quiver around the 210 mark. He's not a polished all-round defenceman yet, but he's constantly improving.

Garcia Is Held To A Draw With Armstrong

By ROBERT MYERS
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

LOS ANGELES, Mar. 2 — (AP). —Welterweight champion Henry Armstrong's quest of Ceferino Garcia's middleweight title is still a 50-50 wager and take your pick.

The two fought to a standstill in 10 rounds of bloody combat last night before a paid attendance of 16,228, and Referee George V. Blake called it a draw. The fight drew a gross gate of $55,963.

The draw decision may have spelled the end of Hammerin' Armstrong's hope of acquiring a fourth title in his career, although a rematch might be made some time later.

Garcia, the Filipino who is recognized as the middleweight champ in California and New York, weighed 153½ and Armstrong 142.

Called a "Dirty Fight."

Arguments raged to-day over the outcome. George Parnassus, the Filipino's manager, openly charged that Armstrong waged a "dirty fight," and said illegal use of his shoulders and head robbed Garcia of a chance for a clear-cut victory.

Many ringsiders thought Garcia earned it with his clean, staggering uppercuts to the head that twice had the negro lad reeling backwards, but just as many gave the fight to Armstrong for his uusal relentless, ever-punching aggressiveness.

Blood flowed from the third round on. Garcia suffered an eye cut—his corner claimed he was butted—and Armstrong's mouth was cut in the same round and his left eye was shut tight for the last three frames.

The two lost no time getting to work. They started in a few seconds after the first bell and 10 rounds later they were standing in Garcia's corner, toe to toe, still whaling away with all the power and punches they could muster.

Counted Against Him.

Referee Blake said afterward that Armstrong's shoulder tactics counted heavily against him.

Garcia landed the hardest punches punches of the bout when he was able to shake Armstrong loose from his in-fighting style. Once in the third and again in the eighth his looping uppercuts seemed to have Henry in distress, but each time Armstrong rallied, rushed him and pinned him to the ropes with a steady barrage of chopping lefts and rights. Twice the referee warned Armstrong for using his head illegally in the clinches and once he took away a round for low blows.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEL. PERDUE

And that's another one in ye olde gunny sack—one we won't have to worry about in this O.H.A. intermediate "A" round-robin playoff serial. The 5-2 win for the Petes here last night over the Kitchener Greenshirts about indicates the way the play went, in our opinion. The local crew looked maybe three goals better on the night's play, but not any more. Those Greenshirts will be no setup on their own ice — and it'll be the Buckland bunch who will be tired out from a long trip the next time these outfits clash. Yeah, the Greenshirts lived up to their rep with a good showing, being as fast as the Petes and with a smooth-passing attack. And a bumping defence. They'll be plenty potent ere the playoffs are o'er.

* * * * * *

On the other hand, the Petes turned in a good performance last e'en. Some 2,000 rabid rooters — by far the best crowd yet this semester—seemed to enjoy the contest all the way. It was a fine, speedy and quite exciting fray. When even the inhabitants of the press box start to root out loud, it must be something of a thriller. And the Petes showed up real well. They skated fast all evening, passed neatly and checked back. With the defence tossing the torso and working their heads off, and the goalie right on his toes. Only in shooting did they look bad at times, and we think the boys can cash in a bit better in sniping. Yet they also got a couple of goals by sheer battling at close range, when less inspired players will turn around and skate out—waiting for another chance.

* * * * * *

Plenty Of Moxy

That fighting spirit was prominent yester e'en, with our second line showing more of the old moxy when it came to boring-in and corner battling than for some time. Both lines did fine, and we're not attempting to pick individual stars, as 'twould only be guess-work, and unfair to organized labor—er, we mean, organized hockey. They all did swelegant (Art Heal was out with a bad cold) and chalked up that second straight playoff win at a good time. If they can keep clicking in this manner, the speedy Petes will be a tough morsel for any rival crew to chew upon in this series. No word yet of the next game.

* * * * * *

There are several bright stars on the Greenshirts' lineup, especially that starting line of Bauer-Vrooman-Grau. They click like Spanish castanets going both ways, and are harder to stop than a malicious rumor. And big Lederman (No. 3) on defence is bad news to rival forwards. He plays bank and carom shots with opposing puckists' bodies off the boards—and should have a few doctors trailing him! This same Lederman is by no means a chicken, having played back in '26 for New Hamburg against our senior "A" champs, and then having a long term of pro hockey with Buffalo. Yeah, on the whole, they're a good outfit.

Referee In Dutch

Referee Max Reesor of Markham wasn't very popular with the crowd. Bennett was first slated to handle the game, but Reesor got the job and the fans didn't like his work. Nor did we. As a matter of fact, the ref. was most impartial — and we liked that about him — but he was either over-zealous or nervous or something. Kept tooting his tooter, and tossed several guys off for practically nothing. Two players, Ellis and Lorentz, were gated for roughing it — yet they were only checking and trying to hold each other away from the play, and both were grinning all the time! But off they went. However, Reesor tried hard enough and was no homester. The game was rugged but not dirty and everyone was satisfied. Except the Greenshirts with the runty side of the score.

Omemee Hawks dropped a 9-6 O.H.A. intermediate "B" first round tilt to Whitby on the latter's ice last twilight. Return game of the goals-to-count series will be Monday in Omemee, and should be something of a something. Or something. Whitby had previously erased Port Hope and Gananoque in blitzkreig battles, whilst the Hawks cleaned up on their district. A four-goal lead is hardly as lopsided as a one-eared mule, and the O's might yet manage to squeeze out the series decision o'er the Vipond-Bagnell-Hooper-Dafoe crowd. Tripp and Dart did most of the cookie dunking last night for the Hawks.

As Winter Wanes

Puck winners around the city and district are being declared these days oftener than party promises, as a balmy March sun puts a sweat on outdoor ice surfaces. St. Peter's won their O.J.H.A. district series over Norwood and may now meet Port Perry. Campbellford juveniles clipped Cobourg last p.m., whilst the elder Campbellford crew romped through Madoc for a sweet T.V.L. win—as Norwood Hornets slipped again and lost to Marmora. It'll cinch first place for Campbellford. Cobourg juniors—group winners for the first time in 19 years—took an 8-6 playdown nod from Trenton. Southend Hockey League concluded a pretty fair season with Royals winning the midget title over St. Peter's 5-2 for the second straight playoff verdict. Some of the S.E.L. cards weren't sent in to us, so complete reports were at times missed.

A trio of P.C.I. hoop squads were pushed around last eve in Bowmanville, the classy boys and gals of Bowman Villa high school snatching three decisions from the Garnet and Gray. Both our senior girls and senior boys are through for the semester, but the local junior lads are still in the hunt. At the Y.W. last evening, two gals' games saw scores lower than a casualty report in Der Angriff. Quaker Aces took a 13-9 squeak over "Y" Gym as Quaker Debs kicked the dope bucket around for a 9-6 nod over St. John's. Orfuns play in Belleville tonight, and a local hoop attraction here is at eight in the Y.W. when Toronto First Ave. church crew tackles St. John's junior boys in the first game of their O.C.B.A. playdowns. Should be a swell struggle, and deserves a crowd.

Grab-bag: Scoring summary shows how the poor lights in the dim Whitby rink bothered Goalie Fisher of Omemee last night, but the O's were better in the third; Omemee rink is a lot bigger, too....Wes Champ, vice-prexy of the Petes' puckists returned from Regina in time to view the locals in action last night....Owen Sound and Collingwood went to a 3-all tie again last p.m.; dunno when they'll finish their "A" group.... Kitchener plays in Port Colborne on Tuesday....Oshawa Bees and Kingston's junior "B" bunch mix now in playdowns....Don't forget that big volleyball round-room series from six to eight tonight in the Y.M.C.A.; Kitchener, Toronto and Peterborough aces compete .... Some local pug followers will journey to Toronto on Monday to see the Pace-Salica bantam titular fight....Eddie Starr was bounced around last gloaming at the Brock but stayed in there and kept fighting....Chris Graham, just turned 61, looks more like 41 to us....Archie Minarsky, who played the outfield for St. Kitts last year, is reported headed for up north, Toronto, Fort Erie and a few more points....Crowe must have thought he was back on the grid once last e'en when Clair tackled him around the knees and hung on grimly....'Twas a fine orderly crowd at this playoff and the ice held up okay....POME: Winter has riz and winter has set—but here we is in the playoffs yet!

Madoc Outfit Shutout 11-0 By Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, March 2 — Campbellford wound up its Trent Valley League schedule with another spectacular performance here Friday night, when the Hendy coached crew copped their eighth game in a row by trouncing the Madoc squad 11 to 0.

The whitewashing which the locals handed Percy Naylor's aggregation will eliminate them from the play-offs if the protest entered by Tweed against them for using an unsigned player is sustained. The win clinched top position in the league for the locals since Norwood dropped a four point game to Marmora, and it is expected that the locals will meet Tweed here in the first game of the playoffs next Wednesday, when the initial contest of the two out of three series will begin.

Without the services of their regular net minder, Ken Martin, the Madoc puck chasers fought gamely, and though Stewart and Keller made a couple of lightning raids on the homester's net during the final stanza the starry work of the Sunoccos' read guards nullified their chances. Despite the lop-sided score Hawthorne did some showy work between the pipes for the losers, but with the way the Sunocos front line was clicking he didn't have a chance on most of the ones that got by.

Actually the winners played a superior brand of hockey all the way and had the visiting team tied up in their own territory during most of the exhibition. It was their passing attack which Hendy has been working on all season and which is now beginning to click, that put them on top. Their smoothly working combination plays showed the visitors up at nearly every stage.

The game was one of the first to be handled by a single official, and Referee Herb Payne did a good job with little escaping his notice. There were but seven penalties during the evening, and the only serious affair was in the first period when Ernie Godden, one of the least penalized players on the home squad, took a pass at Cooey.

Ralph Turner in the Campbellford net gave another dazzling performance and earned himself his second shut-out of the season, having got his first in the opening game last December when the team visited Norwood. He came out of the net a couple of times to meet Stewart and Heyworth after they rounded the defence, outguessing them each time and winning for himself the title of top notch goalie in the league.

On the play Hendy, the leading play-maker for the squad and Blake, hard-working forward picked up the most scoring points, the former gathering three goals and the same number of assists and the latter two goals and three assists. Free, who also played a consistently good game, gathered a trio of goals and an assist, while the remaining tallies were notched by McIlrath and Kelly.

It was McIlrath who notched the opening tally of the game when he combined on a beautiful passing play, with Robinson and Kelly who cruised in on the Madoc defence after twelve minutes of the initial frame. Hendy slapped home the second a a well laid pass from Free right in front of the Madoc net and dropped the disc into the corner. The period ended with the score at 3 to 0, when Blake banged home Kelly's pass.

In the second frame the Keller-Heyworth-Akey line for the visitors fought gamely, pressing their attack into Campbellford territory in an effort to break into the score sheet, but they were continually harrassed by the back-checking of Robinson. Free and Hendy went in together for the fourth, and McIlrath tore in alone to test Hawthorne with a bullet-like shot which appeared labelled. At the 14 minute mark he lit the light when he sank Kelly's pass and four minutes later Free and Blake combined to make the score 6 to 0.

At the opening of the final canto Sunocos continued to press in hotly setting a sizzling pace with Robinson, McIlrath and Kelly blazing a half dozen shots at the Madoc net without raising the score. Hawthorne was sent to the hoosegow for slashing, and Hendy and Blake each registered, while the visitors were short handed, and when Hendy was menched for roughing, the losers again failed to penetrate the closly-guarded Campbellford net.

The President's Cup games have got under way and many of the big shots have been knocked off their perches. If the C.N.R. Freighters held any hopes of repeating the Cridland turn of capturing both the Hope and the President's Cups, they lost that chance when the lowly Quaker Oats squad assisted (ahem) by the scribe took them for two out of three in a real good tussle. There is a special commission to investigate how that scribe fellow seems to get a nose-in at the President's Cup.

Both of St. Luke's teams slipped their moorings and got on the rocks when the west winds from St. Andrew's and the Fire Hall blew across their path. Those Fire Hall scabs simply withstood all the lacquering the East City Decorators could use and burst out in good style.

Bonnerworth spinners had a hard tussle to hold down the Antiques, and in the last game the score was 5 to 4.

The surprise of the week was when the lowly Fighting Parsons, after winning their first doubleheader of the season away from home met the DeLaval Heavyweights and won the only President games in two straight by 6-2 and 11-9. Some going, S.O.E.

Only one tie game reported this week when the Fire Hall Scabs lost some of their grip on fifth place by earning one point in four against L.O.L. No. 6.

Only three members now who have not paid their dues. Why not make it one hundred per cent. by the 15th of the month. Three out of 80—don't be the last man.

Sailors Ousted From Running Of OHA Senior A

By The Canadian Press

Port Colborne's last-ditch stand to remain in the running for the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" series failed dismally last night as Toronto Goodyears blasted the Sailors from further competition 7-1. Victory gave Toronto, defending champions and leaders of the group at the conclusion of the regular schedule, the best-of-five semi-final by three games to one.

Hamilton and St. Catharines will continue their best-of-five dispute in the Garden City Monday. As a result of Hamilton's 6-4 victory at home last night the teams are deadlocked with two triumphs each.

Fifteen-hundred disappointed home fans looked on as Toronto turned on the heat against the Ports in the second frame. The teams finished the opening period even, Inglis scoring first for Goodyears and Fitzgerald squaring matters. Early in the second Imlach sent Toronto ahead and O'Flaherty practically clinched the game with a brace of points three minutes apart.

Toronto widened the margin by three in the last chapter as the desperate Ports threw defensive caution aside. Imlach scored his second tally early in the frame and in the closing minutes Inglis and Cooper raced in for goals.

Big Lead Run Up

The Saints wiped out a four-goal advantage Hamilton ran up on them in the first 25 minutes but didn't have enough left to hold off the final charge of the winners.

Conick and Barlow shot the home team ahead with cleverly executed goals in the first period. Walker added another for the only point of the second frame and Hamilton went four up when Miocinovich scored early in the third. The Saints attack began clicking at this juncture and three quick goals went into the Hamilton net from the sticks of Buel, Mocha and Pinder. After some tight checking Pinder broke through to knot the count four-all with his second marker. However, in the last minute Conick and then Miocinovich beat the Saints' defence for the goals which sent the teams into a fifth game.

The winner meets Toronto in the final and the right to continue in the Allan Cup playdowns.

PETES GRAB SECOND VICTORY IN O. H. A. ROUND-ROBIN SERIES

Crowd Of 2,000 Sees Nifty Tussle With Locals Earning Win Over Speedy Kitchener Greenshirts

Racking up their second straight win of the O.H.A. Intermediate A round-robin playoff series here last night, the Petes trimmed Kitchener Greenshirts by a 5-2 score before 2,000 noisy fans. The Buckland bunch had previously beaten Port Colborne here and are well in front in the playoff standing.

Last night's joust was a thriller all through. Play was fast, exciting, rugged and classy, with little difference in the teams. The Greenshirts could skate right with the homesters and showed a smooth-passing attack that was always threatening. They also back-checked well, but the Petes dished up more finish when in scoring position to earn the nod.

It was not a rough game, but some hard checking was shown with the referee quite fair but imposing some cheap penalties. The score was 1-0 for the locals in the first period and they had a 3-1 edge going into the third. They always looked a goal or two better, but not much more, as the fast-stepping visitors played smart aggressive hockey. The Petes also turned in a fighting display to bore in and fight hard for every point, none of the goals being of the soft variety. Of the 11 penalties, the winners drew six.

All Go Well.

There were no individual standouts on the local list in this game, every puckist turning in a fine performance. While Tompkins was in on three goals and Kingdon two, all the forwards looked classy. The first line had more polish but the second line flashed a battling display that proved valuable. Drake Jopling was steady as ever on defence, but the four rearguardsmen checked effectively, and Harding kicked out a flock in a nifty display.

The Kitchener goalie was not beaten badly at any time, and his defence bumped the locals around and spoiled many rushes neatly. The first forward line stood out for the Greenshirts, Bauer, Vrooman and Grau being an offensive threat all evening. Lederman was a hard-hitting, effective defenceman, but they all worked hard after their long trip.

Started Strong.

Kitchener looked a bit the best right at the start, with a Grau-Vrooman rush nearly nailing a counter. It was fast and clean for a spell and then Tompkins battled his way around the net and slapped his own rebound home, the puck dribbling in off the goalie. The local second line came close a couple of times and it was hot and even with both sides showing plenty of foot. Harding thefted Huber of one and then Huber and F. Jopling were chased for roughing it. They returned shortly and a Kingdon-Tompkins thrust was close. Crowe went off for boarding and Kitchener pressed, but he returned with no score. A Coughlin-J. Jopling try was dangerous, and, when J. Jopling went off for tripping, the visitors tried hard, but Fehrenbach got the air for hooking just before the finish.

Right after the second opened, Kingdon checked and recovered in close to stickhandle out in front and slide one by the goalie for a 2-0 margin. The Greenshirts got it right back when Vrooman blazed a hot angle drive around defence a minute later. Blewett came close and Kuntz went off with a pulled leg muscle. A J. Jopling-Blewett try almost paid off and, with Clair in the sin box for tripping, five Petes pressed hotly but to no avail. Later, Kingdon and Starr teamed up on a real threat, but the period was on the wane when the homesters made it 3-1, Blewett taking J. Jopling's corner passout and stickhandling his way in front to slap the disc home at close range. J. Jopling was waved over for charging and Kitchener ganged up, but could not tally. Simon and Ellis drew penalties for roughing it near the end.

Petes Get Two.

With all back again in the third, Lorentz was robbed by Harding and a Coughlin-J. Jopling try was nearly good. It was fast, even and hot. Starr rifled home a nifty goal on Tompkins' assist inside the visitors' deefnce, but the Greenshirts got it back promptly when Grau took Lederman's pass at point-blank range inside defence and popped it in. Ellis and Lorentz were chased for roughing it—though both were smiling at the minor tangle—and Kingdon scored the final goal in close on Tompkins' assist after both had battled away to take the puck in and hold it there. A Kingdon-Starr thrust was close and then four and later five Greenshirts went on the attack to make it hot. The Petes got a goal, but it was after the whistle, and Kuntz was thumbed off for boarding. The locals pressed but did no damage before his return, and it was hot and even at the final gong.

The teams:

Kitchener — Goal, Bindernagel; defence, Simon and Lederman; centre, Bauer; wings, Grau and Vrooman; alternates, Kuntz, Lorentz, Huber, Hause, Clair and Fehrenbach.

Petes — Goal, Harding; defence, Gardner and Ellis; centre, Kingdon; wings, Tompkins and Starr; alternates, F. Jopling, Crowe, J. Jopling, Coughlin, Blewett, and Burton.

St. Peter's Edge Bees By 5-4 To Win Series

HAVELOCK, March 2 (ENS)—The Peterborough "St. Peters" were the victors in a sudden-death play-off tilt against the Norwood "Bees" last night at Norwood arena to decide the winners of the district O.J.H.A. series The visitors edged out a 5-4 decision over the homesters in a decidedly close and entertaining juvenile match.

The game was exceptionally clean, the only two penalties being evenly divided during the middle frame. The Eason - Routley combination clicked well for the winners, these two speedy youngsters accounting for two goals and one assist apiece. Scriver who played nicely on their defense, notched the fifth counter on a solo effort. Webb was the most outstanding member of the Bees, getting credit for a pair of goals and one assist in addition to a good chore on the defense. Creditable efforts were also given by Hill in goal, and by Thompson, Edwards, Jamieson and Gill.

St. Peters took the lead after twelve minutes of the first period, Eason accepting a pass from Routley for the opening counter. Norwood tied it up with less than thirty seconds remaining in this session, Petticrew slamming home the loose puck following a Webb sally on the visitors' cage.

Twice again in the middle stanza did the Peterborough team forge ahead on goals by Scriver and Routley, both unassisted, only to have Norwood retaliate in each case, Jamieson combining with Hamilton for the first, and Webb tallying the last.

The tie was broken by Eason early in the third, and then he set up a pass to Routley for the goal which made the score 5-3 in favor of the visitors. The remaining Norwood goal was notched by Webb on a solo try. The second and third periods especially was featured by some heavy body checks, which both sides handed out enthusiastically.

The teams:

St. Peters: Goal, Hatton; defense, Scriver, Curtis; centre, Garvey; wings, Eason, Routley; alternates, Mortimer, Horton, Chimenti, Huurd, Griffin.

Norwood: Goal, Hill; defense, Mouncey, Webb; centre, Edwards; wings, Petticrew, Gill; alternates, Yeo, Jamieson, Hamilton, Thompson.

Referee: R. Ennis, Norwood.

Fading Hornets Trounced By Micmacs 6-4

NORWOOD, March 2—(ENS).—Making a strong bid for a playoff berth, the aggressive Marmora Micmacs scuttled the Norwood Hornets by a 6-4 count, before a large gathering of fans in the final local showing of the T.V.L. schedule last night at Norwood Arena.

Dropping three straight games this week, the Hornets' slump has cost them the T.V.L. leadership, but they are still firmly entrenched in second position, with only one game remaining in the regular season. Monday night Norwood pay their final visit to Madoc and then on Wednesday the playoff series commences. The final T.V.L. standing as it now looks will be Campbellford, Norwood and Tweed, with either Madoc or Marmora in the fourth and last playoff position.

The outcome of a protest lodged against the Madoc club of allegedly using a player in a couple of their games, who was not on the list submitted the first of the season, will have quite a bearing on who will grab off the final spot.

Holding a slight edge on the homesters for the better part of the fast and exceptionally clean tussle, the visitors took an early lead, and were never headed, although the Hornets did manage to deadlock the score entering the final stanza. Only on occasion did Norwood display any of the brilliant plays which until this past week had kept them on top of the T.V.L. heap.

Marmora's opening goal came after five minutes of the initial canto, while Brady was serving time in the hoosegow, and N. O'Neill scored. The Micmacs boosted the count when Johnson was successful on E. Leonard's pass. From the resulting faceoff Hill combined with Rogers for the Hornet's first goal. Marmora broke away for a pair of quick markers, the first by Kerr from Johnson, and the second Johnson from C. O'Neill, to make the count 4-1 in their favor. E. Leonard and Kerr of the visitors both drew penalties this period.

While C. O'Neill of the Micmacs was gated for hooking O'Leary in the second and as he returned, the Hornets clicked for their second counter, Pep Rogers notching on a drive which glanced in off Callery's leg. A breakaway by O'Leary near the end of this period resulted in another Norwood marker.

The final session had barely started before N. Rogers combined with Puffer to tie the score at 4-4 and brightened the prospects of a Norwood victory. Richardson was penalized. The visitors again got the jump on the homesters and within the space of one short minute placed the game definitely in the bag, as E. Leonard scored first from Johnson, and thirty seconds later Gus Leonard notched the last goal, to make the final count, 6-4.

The Micmacs' attacking combination of Johnson, Kerr and E. Leonard were especially effective for the winners, with G. Leonard, Reynolds, and C. O'Neill also good. For the Hornets, Pep Rogers, O'Leary, Brady, Hill, Webb and McMaster were best. The teams:

Marmora.—Goal, Callery; defense, Smith, C. O'Neill; centre, E. Leonard; wings, Kerr, Johnson; alternates, Buskard, G. Leonard, T. Shannon, N. O'Neill, Reynolds.

Norwood.—Goal, McMaster; defence, Rothwell, Webb; centre, Puffer; wings, Hill, N. Rogers; alternates, Brady, Aboud, O'Leary, W. Rogers, Davis, Richardson.

Referee—W. Shannon, Marmora. Linesman, R. Ennis, Norwood.

Dewan Praises Landscaping Across Ontario

TORONTO, March 2 — (CP). — Co-operation of district horticultural societies and the Ontario Agricultural Department is gradually beautifying the Ontario countryside and awakening landscaping and gardening interest among rural dwellers, Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Agricultural Minister, told the annual banquet of the Ontario Horticultural Association here last night.

Beautified highways encourage motorists to beautify their homes and progress along these lines has been particularly noticeable in the past few years, the minister said.

"At certain highway interesections, horticultural societies and other organizations have taken charge and beautified vacant spots," Mr. Dewan said. "This is most commendable work and should be encouraged."

John F. Clark told the record attendance of 300 members that almost 24,000,000 trees will be available from the Reforestation Branch of the department for planting in the province this year. Last year 16,453 trees were planted.

Discussing flowers, Dr. Clark noted a trend in the province toward cultivation of native wild flowers and credited this to some degree to the association's sponsorship of Trillium Grandiflorum as Ontario's floral emblem. Wild Canadian flowers can now be found growing in the gardens of the royal residences in Great Britain, he said, mementoes of Their Majesties' visit here last summer, when the King and Queen expressed their delight often at the natural flora of the Dominion.

Cheeky Norse!

Berlin, March 2 (AP)

GERMAN spokesmen expressed amazement today at the insistence of Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht of Norway that Germany cease her mine warfare.

"That's barking up the wrong tree," was the burden of the comment. "It was England which started the sea warfare. Let the neutral nations look to England for remedy.

"We have at all times favored strictly sticking to international law, but if the enemy constantly breaks this law we must devise counter measures."

The Norwegian foreign minister yesterday said Norway plans a new protest to Germany against attacks on Norwegian ships.

Danes Join Neighbors In Looking To Their Defences

A striking view of a detachment of Danish troops, made during recent army exercises. In common with other Scandinavian countries, Denmark has felt the shadow of aggression and is getting prepared for the worst. If Germany should give military support to Russia in her Finnish campaign, the chances are strong that Denmark would be the first country to hear the marching meet of the Reich's soldiers.

British Secret Navy Guns Used To Aid In Recruiting

LONDON, March 2—(CP).—Of all the secrets in the Royal Navy the multiple anti-aircraft gun to protect convoys and the fleet from air attacks is perhaps the most jealously guarded.

Yet a large-scale photograph of the weapon somehow got into a show window at a recruiting depot in London's West End.

A newspaperman noticed it and telephoned the Admiralty to confirm the secrecy of the multiple gun.

"The gun is most secret," replied an official. "Nothing must be said about it and, above all, no photographs must be published."

The photograph in the recruiting window showed every barrel in clear outline and much of the machinery for altering elevation. The picture has disappeared from view now. It seems likely that the official responsible for putting it there has too.

PREFER SEGREGATION

LONDON — (CP). — Smithfield meat market is larger now and London's kosher market has been moved there from Aldgate Pump as a war measure. But Jews don't like it, and their butchers say the new arrangement won't last.

Lakefield C.W.L. Plans Tag Day

LAKEFIELD, Mar. 2—(ENS). — At the February meeting of the Catholic Women's League, Lakefield, plans were made for the annual tag day and a sale of homemade cooking on March 16.

Mrs. George Charlton, president, presided for the business period. There were also present Past president Mrs. J. McFadden, first vice-president, Miss E. V. Kennedy, third vice-president, Mrs. P. White, secretary, Mrs. J. Sabatino, treasurer, Miss M. Fortier, councillors, Mrs. H. Geraldi, Mrs. G. J. Elmsley, Mrs. Hayes, and Miss Pearl Charlton.

Correspondence was read from Rev. Mother Anthony of Cobourg Girls' Orphanage. The ladies decided to aid the orphanage by sewing up material to make rugs.

Rev. Father Garvey was a visitor to the meeting for a brief time.

It was also decided to place on display the beautiful hand-made tablescloth, made and presented by Miss C. Conn, and to be drawn for during Easter week.

Mrs. Simpson Hostess To Lakefield W.M.S.

LAKEFIELD, March 2—(ENS).—Mrs. J. M. Simpson, Queen Street North, lent her home for the regular meeting of the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church on Wednesday afternoon. The hostess, who is president of the society, led in the devotional exercises and read the Scripture. Mrs. Simpson gave an explanation of the Scripture lesson.

The Glad Tidings prayer was given by Mrs. T. W. Chaplin.

Mrs. J. W. Ridpath gave a most interesting talk on the rural life of India. She spoke of the confusion which the people of India are experiencing in putting Western ideas into Eastern minds. It is a big jump from the modern machine age to the primitive method of working which the Indian farmer has been accustomed to so long.

Mrs. Ridpath also spoke of the typical village church and the part it plays in the rural communities.

At the next meeting the various reports of the Presbytery will be discussed.

It is expected that a quilt top which has been donated to the society for the sale will be quilted during March.

Delicious refreshments were served and the meeting brought to a close with the Mizpah benediction.

Mr. Harry Loveless, Deloro, is one of the few who celebrate their birthday Thursday, and will not have the opportunity to celebrate the exact day again for four years.

Spinsters Pack Aurora Jail With Bachelors

AURORA, Ill., March 2—(AP).—Hundreds of men—charged with the crime of bachelorhood—jammed the jail house yesterday.

They were cast there by girls who took charge of this city of 52,000 in a coup de charm. In keeping with a traditional Leap Year Day custom, the young women assumed control of the City Hall, Police and Fire Departments, business houses and the bastille—and all was merry confusion for twelve hours.

Mayor Audrey Kesel, brunette dancing teacher, decreed: "Get those bachelors."

Copperettes collared hapless males on streets, in stores and factories. The prisoners were whisked off in paddy wagons, cooled in jail for several hours and haled before Mary Whitels, pretty police magistrate. Fines were assessed promptly — stockings, candy, flowers, lingerie.

The eligible Dr. Joseph Wadkins was penalized two grams of perfume for celibacy with malice aforethought. Suddenly he leaped to the bench, uttered a proposal and shouted: "I really meant it."

The flustered judge sent him back to the dungeon.

Within the next two hours 167 defendants popped the question. To one and all she addressed a coy: "See you later."

One panicky fugitive from matrimony took refuge on a roof. Another hid in a cellar. Five escaped from a patrol wagon en route to court.

The fire lassies took the one genuine alarm in stride. They slide down the brass pole, mounted a truck and rumbled off to a burning house. (But the men regulars extinguished the blaze.)

John D. Grisch, a salesman, was forced into a red dress and pressed into service as a policewoman. As his first chore he placed a cuspidor beside the comely mayor's chair. He was hustled off to the hoosegow.

The alderwomen-for-a-day railroaded through a $71,093 payroll. Items included $10,000 each for Clark Gable and Robert Taylor and 50 cents to underwrite a haircut for Harry Karner, bald mayor of Aurora.

Petticoat rule ended at a night banquet. The finery and fripperies piled up in the magistrate's court were divided.

Havelock Barber Is Honored By Friends

HASTINGS, March 2—(ENS). — Robert Anderson, Havelock barber, was the guest of honor at an unusual birthday celebration here last night. He was a leap year child and was observing his thirteenth birthday although he has reached 56 years of age. Strangely enough it would appear it was his twelfth birthday, as Mr. Anderson pointed out that the year 1900 was not considered a leap year.

Scene of the party was at the home of his son Harry of Hastings where Robert Anderson's family gathered to celebrate the rare occasion. Among those present was Mrs. Robert Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Anderson, Mr. Lloyd Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Anderson and family.

Quebec Women Active

MONTREAL, March 2 — (CP). — Women will speak from the platform at Liberal meetings throughout the province during the Dominion election campaign, it was announced yesterday with the establishment of a women's Liberal committee room. Quebec women vote in Dominion elections although they do not have the franchise in provincial voting.

Reds Contribute To Finnish Defence

The contribution was not made voluntarily, needless to say, but it is very acceptable just the same. The white-clad Finn is examining a multiple machine gun used for anti-aircraft work, particularly against diving bombers or hedge-hopping planes. It was part of the equipment captured by the Finns and later used against the former owners.

Held In Ottawa

Harry Binder, 28, has been placed under arrest in Ottawa, charged with breaches of the defence of Canada regulations. Louis Binder, 22, a brother, and Roy Saunders, 26, are also being held by police.

Long-distance runners of Sydney, Australia, are demanding cups of hot tea at the end of each race.

Marmora Friends Honor T. Foley

MARMORA, March 2 — (ENS). — Mr. Tom Foley, who has been employed by the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company for several years, has severed his connection with that firm, and left on Friday for his home in Belleville, where he has accepted a position.

On Thursday afternoon his fellow-workers in the stellite department presented him with a micrometer. The presentation was made by the superintendent of the stellite department, J. A. Paquet.

On Thursday evening a number of Mr. Foley's friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Townson, Marmora, and presented him with a pen and pencil set. A social evening was spent and lunch was served Tom has made a host of friends during his residence at Deloro, who regret his departure, and their best wishes will follow him in his new venture.

Miss Rita Shannon of Peterborough spent Friday at her home here.

The Man Who Knows

Whose military judgment do you trust? Choose between these: the local armchair strateaist and Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O.

In his address before the Canada Club in London, Major General A. G. L. McNaughton dealt with the political phase of the situation in the following words which unquestionably are clear to all whose minds are not clouded by partisan prejudice:

"Political or private patronage does not exist: it has been stamped out by our minister (Mr. Rogers) himself, and merit as judged by the responsible officers each in their proper degree, is the sole criterion for selection and promotion. There is no need for undue haste either in the armed forces or in industry.

"What is wanted from us is thorough preparation, military forces and supply clearly developing at an increasing rate and gathering momentum; these it is clear, the people of Canada are determined to provide. We are now well started and so I hope the people overseas will take our will to help on faith and in due season we shall not disappoint them.

Having reviewed the background of events since the war of 1914, Major General McNaughton pointed out the broad factors determining the pace of mobilization in the present contingency. He said:

"We have based everything on three factors—First, the high quality and training of the personnel, comprising our nucleus force, both in the permanent and non-permanent Militia. Second, the wide diversity and extensive development of Canada's peace-time industry and its proven adaptability for war supply in all its many ramifications and complexities. Careful students have shown that there is not a single weapon or instrument of war which cannot be made effectively in Canada if necessary. And, thirdly—time, which fortunately is on our side.

West Peterborough's agricultural and industrial interests must be integrated with the truly national war-time economy. As bullets are realistic, so ballots must be realistic. Make your vote count. Send to Ottawa a representative who can speak for Peterborough West out of a lifetime's experience of this riding's needs.

A VOTE FOR REALISM IS A VOTE FOR—

Liberals Hold Rally In North End

A Liberal meeting was held Friday evening in the newly constructed Queen Elizabeth School in the North end of the city. Speakers were A. L. Elliott, M.P.P., T. J. Carley, K.C. and R. M. Glover.

R. M. Glover declared that after the insistence of many friends he allowed his name to stand as a candidate but that he was inspired to offer his services because of an unbounded confidence in the ability of the present government to carry on in this time of nation emergency.

"Our opponents say that we have one of the most popular and best liked citizens in the riding as the Liberal candidate," Mr. Elliott said, "but at the same time they declare that the candidate should not be taken into consideration in reaching a decision as to how the electors should vote. If you want common sense reflected in our federal legislation in the administration of this country's affairs you must elect candidates who have common sense and experience".

Rollie Glover, declared Mr. Elliott, is popular not only because he has been successful as a business man, but because he has played his part in every community endeavor and in a quiet way, as a member of the Charity Board long before there was organized relief, working with R. C. Braund and others, has been considerate of the needs of those in unfortunate circumstances. His popularity is not the kind that can be purchased but the kind that has been earned through a lifetime of good citizenship.

Mr. Carley pointed out that with the Purchasing Board headed by Wallace Campbell, manager of the Ford Motor Car Co. and a Price Fixing and Control Board headed by Hector B. McKinnon the war effort of the country was under a business rather than a political administration now. He quoted General McNaughton's remarks in stating that there was no great hurry for men in an address made in London. With such national figures of long and tried parliamentary experience associated with Premier King like the Rt. Hon. Ernest LaPointe, the Hon James L. Ralston, the Hon. T. A. Crerar and the Hon. James G. Gardiner this country had little to worry about with their affairs in such capable and experienced hands. Dr. Manion with a few followers, and without naming any of the people who would be associated with him, has merited little support in his appeal to the people because the electors must know what they are voting for, Mr. Carley said. Gordon Deyell acted as chairman.

With Peterborough Boys

Many local people will recognize the pleasant face of the soldier on the EXTREME RIGHT of this picture which was taken in England early this year. The soldier is Gordon Huston, brother of Bob Huston, now a salesman here with the Singer Sewing Machine Co. Gordon worked in this city for a year prior to enlisting and is shown with other members of the unit, all members of Canada's Third Overseas Contingent, carrying bedding to their quarters at an English training camp. Huston enlisted with the 23rd Medium Battery, Toronto.

We salute the men of Peterborough city and district who have rallied to the Empire's call. Since the war began many have left the city to enlist in different units throughout Ontario, and in many cases this fact is known only to their immediate family and a few friends. The Examiner has made every effort to learn the names of all those who have enlisted, but undoubtedly many have been missed, and their names have not appeared in the news columns of this paper. We extend an invitation to Examiner readers to pass along the names of any local or district men who have joined the Canadian Active Service Forces.

Each Saturday a column dealing with news of interest to soldiers and their families and friends will be run in this paper. Letters or excerpts will be very welcome, and will be returned to the person who loans them.

Join Toronto Scottish.

Every week more men from the city join the C.A.S.F. and a few of the latest to enlist are Roy Hope, 218 Stewart street, prominent for many years as an amateur boxer here and a member of the local Machine Gunners He is with the Toronto Scottish. Dave McCullough, also of this city, enlisted this week with the same outfit.

Alfred Marshall, Charlotte street, for years a saxophone player on the Rangers Band, is signed with the 48th Highlanders at Toronto. He is the second bandsman to leave the Rangers in two weeks. Alf Pooley is with the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment at Picton.

Home On Leave.

Teddy McMahon, Mark street, was home on leave to-day from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. In the same crowd Romeo Leonard, also of Mark street, is a military policeman.

Two more Peterborough young men have enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Picton. They are Jack Perry and Billy Gray, the latter a student at the Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School. The boys were both home on leave this week.

Patrick Jordon, well known local boxer, has been given an honorable discharge from the Cobourg Battery. It is known that he had his jaw fractured twice during his boxing career and it is believed that this resulted in his discharge when it became known.

Ken Junkin in Papers.

A picture in the Daily Sketch, London, shows Ken Junkin, Lakefield boy with the Toronto Scottish, practising marksmanship. Ken will be remembered as "Dynamite" Junkin, ace goalie with Lakefield teams for two or three years. He held the rank of Sergeant with the Prince of Wales Rangers here. He enlisted as a private with the Toronto Scottish, but hopes to soon regain the stripes.

In a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Junkin of Lakefield, Ken tells of a heavy fall of snow which made the camp "look like home." The letter was written on January 29th and the writer says he has put on several pounds weight. For dinner that day he enjoyed beef stew and rice pudding with the usual trimmings. He posted the letter as he was going on a week-end leave.

Edwin Waterman, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Waterman, 519 Romaine street, was carrying a paper route for the Examiner in the city up to November 1st last On that date he gave up the paper route and enlisted with the Canadian Dental Corps. He is now with the unit in Kingston.

Ashamed Of Hall Council To Remodel

HASTINGS, March 2.—(ENS). — Council unanimously approved of an expenditure of $360 to redecorate the interior of the town hall and place a new maple floor in the auditorium. At the monthly session of council on Friday evening, a delegation of thirteen representing various church organizations and clubs of Hastings expressed the desire to see the hall put into shape for dancing and members of the council admitted the hall presented such a dismal appearance at present they were ashamed of it. J. L. Doherty was spokesman for the group.

M. A. O'Shea pointed out the town hall was the only civic building in Hastings and as such it did not present a very impressive appearance. He said that he believed if the hall was redecorated the move would double if not treble its present income for an expenditure of a few hundred dollars. Other delegates who addressed the council for the cause were J. V. Findly, Miss K. German, Mrs. T. A. Walsh, Mrs. A. V. German.

Reeve Lewis Kelley replied that council had in mind redecorating the hall for the past four months and added he was glad to see a delegation come before the council and state their wishes. He pointed out that the improvement, if it was all to come out of the ratepayers, would amount to slightly more than one mill to each ratepayer. "I have been ashamed as reeve of this municipality to stand on the stage before an audience with the hall in its present state," Reeve Kelley declared.

Later in the meeting, Mr. Doherty said he could guarantee an income of from fifty to seventy-five dollars to the council this year if the hall was to be put in shape. It was also suggested by the group that the council themselves stage a Civic Ball shortly after repairs were completed to help defray part of the cost.

Entering into contract with James Calberry, local contractor, the council learned that four cement piers would have to be placed under the interior walls for reinforcement for dancing to bring the spring of the floor to a minimum. This work, however, was included in the contract.

Kelly Is Welsh

REV. G. KELLY of Lakefield is a remarkable man. He proved it at the St. David's Society banquet in the Empress Hotel Friday night when he successfully passed himself off as a Welshman despite the handicap of his name.

"I'm no Irishman but a true Welshman," was his bold claim and he accounted, more or less, for the name Kelly by saying, "I think maybe my grandfather or my great grandfather must have had to leave Ireland in a hurry." Lots of good Irish, he claimed, had had to leave Ireland in a hurry, and Wales was nearby and the Welsh people were hospitable beyond all others to refugees. And so, he told them, he had been born in Wales, near Cardiff.

Most people, he admitted, take him for an Irishman because of his name, and never has he been taken for a Welshman. But often in this country, when he has spoken, natives have taken him for a Scotsman. "That's the unkindest cut of all," he gloomed.

Allied Air Chiefs At Award Ceremony

Oldest Engineer W. A. Logan Dies In 90th Year

One of Canada's oldest engineers, W. A. Logan, died at his home at 210 McDonnel street, about 10 o'clock last night after a week's illness. He was in his 90th year.

An outstanding engineer who was known by men of his profession from coast to coast, Mr. Logan had been retired for about 20 years, but still took a keen interest in the engineering accomplishments of this day.

He had held many important posts during his active career on both the St. Lawrence and Trent Valley canals. At one time he was chief of works on the Galops Rapids, and later had charge of the North Channel improvements below Prescott for a number of years. He came to Peterborough associated with the Trent Valley Canal. He surveyed the Peterborough to Hastings section in 1909, and was in charge of building of Burleigh Falls Dam.

Among men of his profession and out of it, Mr. Logan was a popular figure during his long residence in Peterborough. A charter member of the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada, he seldom missed a meeting and was one of the best informed men in attendance. He was a life member of the parent body of that organization.

In religious and fraternal life he was prominent too. For 30 years and until his death he was an elder of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, was for over 20 years its treasurer. He and H. B. Cowan, Sr., were the two oldest elders in the church in point of service, and Mr. Logan was the oldest member in point of years.

He was a charter member and past master of Royal Arthur Lodge A. F. and A. M. and a member of Corinthian chapter. All members of the Masonic order in Peterborough knew him, and held him in high regard. He was also a member of Moore Preceptory.

Born in Waddington, New York, he was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Logan and came to Peterborough after living in Prescott and Cardinal, in May of 1909.

Surviving are his wife; one son, George Logan of Toronto; and four daughters: Mrs. A. Sutherland of Toronto, Mrs. P. Hooper of Peterborough, Mrs. E. C. Steel of New York, and Mrs. F. Green of Peterborough; also four brothers and three sisters.

The funeral will be held on Sunday evening at 8.30 o'clock from the family residence; Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr of St. Paul's Church officiating, assisted by Rev. Canon J. D. Paterson of All Saints' Anglican Church. Interment wil be made at Cardinal, Ontario, on Monday.

A SONG OF REAL BEAUTY

When Welshman Friday night sang "Mae hen wlad fy nhadau yn anwyl i mi Gwlad beirdd a chantoion en wogion o Fri," they were singing a song that had its origin at the time of the War of the Roses. Those words are the opening ones in the Welsh National anthem, a song of real beauty .

JUDGMENT RESERVED

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., announced in police court this morning that he would reserve judgment for another week in the charge of careless driving laid against Charles Elmhirst of Otonabee. The evidence in the case was heard Thursday and at that time Magistrate Langley intimated that he would give judgment today.

SINGS NEW SONG

A song of beauty was heard in public for the first time last night at the St. David's banquet at the Empress hotel. It was "Love's Song I Sing to You," composed by a Peterborough girl, Queenie Hope, and was sung by Mrs. W. J. Davies, accompanied by Mrs. E. Pearse. The song is from Miss Hope's new production, Jack and the Bean Stalk, being produced shortly by St. Luke's church. If the rest of the show is as good as the song heard last night, its success is assured.

REDUCTION IN EFFECT.

Fire Chief Gimblett announced to-day that a 10 per cent. reduction in the key rate for insurance within the city limits went into effect on February 26. This news put the Chief in a happy mood for it is the second 10 per cent. reduction during the past two years.

ELEVEN MORE DEATHS.

Fewer births and an increase in the number of deaths are shown in the vital statistics for February as compared with the second month of last year. In February, 1939, there were 49 births, 19 marriages, and 21 deaths; and last month the totals were: 48 birth, 16 marriages and 32 deaths.

FIGURE SKATING.

It is interesting to note that in Kitchener figure skating is catching on fast. The craze for this sport got under way in 1938 when a club with 35 members was formed. This winter the membership topped the 300 mark and membership for juniors was closed as too many sought to join. They have 540 members in their Ski Club.

Debate Is Staged By Orange Lodge

At a recent meeting of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 50 an interesting debate was staged on the subject "That it is more advantageous to live in the city than in the country. Brothers Edgar, Silvester and Graham upheld the affirmative, and Brothers Boorman, Ridyard and C. Henry the negative. The arguments for both sides were well presented and in many cases most amusing, with the result that judges Parker, Smith and Delahaye were convinced that the country was a better place in which to live. The evening was a very profitable and enjoyable one.

The next regular meeting on March 14 will see a visit from the crack Blue degree team from Frankford to confer the second degree on a class of candidates. This is expected to be an outstanding event of the season in Orange circles. The Pot of Gold attendance prize will be drawn for at this meeting.

New Chemical Is Demonstrated

Large clouds of black smoke billowing into the air at the corner of George and Sherbrooke Streets Friday afternoon made many housewives think a downtown conflagration had broken out, but it was only an interesting experiment to show the effectiveness of a Dugas, a comparatively new fire-fighting element.

Workmen poured 90 gallons of crankcase oil into a pit, placed fifteen gallons of gasoline with it to make it more inflammable, then touched off the liquid with a match. When the fire was well underway, A. J. Carbo, the demonstrator, extinguished the fire in the short space of sixteen seconds. Gasoline dripping down over an iron plate was smothered very quickly. The third experiment consisted of pouring a quantity of gasoline along the ground and this was ignited. The new type fire extinguisher put out the flames as fast as the man holding the extinguisher could walk along.

It was a remarkable demonstration and was witnessed by representatives from all the large factories, garage men, members of the City Council, firemen and more than two hundred citizens. The demonstration was arranged by Fire Chief George Gimblett as an educational feature for city officials and factory heads, on the latest type of fire-fighting equipment.

The powder is carried in an extinguisher equipped with a gas tube. When the extinguisher is being used the powder is forced through the hose nozzle at considerable pressure and when the powder strikes the flames, it automatically expands 1,180 its volume into carbon dioxide gas which expels all oxygen, and smothers the fire. It is rated by the underwriters' laboratories in the top bracket for fighting the worst type of fires, such as burning oil, gasoline, electricity or any other highly inflammable substance.

The powder is a non-conductor, there is no moisture and the substance is absolutely harmless. It forms no harmful gases and only leaves a small white deposit of powder on a floor after a fire is out.

Masons To Buy Legion Hall

Peterborough's three Masonic lodges meeting in joint session on Friday night approved of the plan to purchase the Canadian Legion Hall, which has been offered to them, and to remodel it in order to make a new home for the Masons of this city.

Ross Dobbin reported for the building committee and described the various plans studied for a Masonic temple and finally recommended the purchase of the Canadian Legion Hall.

Warkworth May Buy Pumper

WARKWORTH, March 2.—(ENS)—Aftermath of a serious fire last week in which three buildings were destroyed on the main street of this village, and the entire business section threatened for a time, purchase of fire fighting equipment is now under consideration.

Citizens of the police village met with their commissioners on Thursday to discuss purchase of a pumper. No decision was reached but O. B. Phillips, J. F. Dingman, and Dr. C. C. Armstrong were named a committe to act with the commissioners in obtaining further information.

Wants Letters.

Mrs. Robt. Windover of Norwood, has a letter from her nephew, Phil Falconer, formerly of Peterborough, who is now in England with the C.A.S.F. and he winds up the letter with a request for mail from girls in the district. The letter follows:

Somewhere in England, Feb. 11, '40.

Dear Aunt Dorothy.—I am sorry I couldn't write to you sooner but it was impossible. The last night I was speaking to you finished my leave and we left just three days later. They would not let us write or even go out. We've been travelling since the 24th of January and just got here on the 9th of Feb. Train to the east coast, boat to somewhere in Scotland and then more trains to somewhere in England.

It really was one grand trip across the ocean. We had good weather all the way and very few were seasick. It's a sight one won't forget, when one looks at a convoy. There's the troopships, big battleships, cruisers all mixed up together, then the little sub chasers and destroyers buzzing all over the place.

You would laugh your head off at the little English trains. They are about one-third the size of ours and they go like ——.

Don't ever let anybody tell you it's nice in England in the winter. About noon it's really hot but at seven in the evening one freezes to death. It isn't cold but is so terribly damp.

That's about all there is to say about the trip except that we had first class quarters on the boats. Right in there with a big shine. Nothing to do but lie around and lap up the ship's beer—good beer too. I'm going on five days' leave next week and my pal and I are going to do our best to really see London. If you know any good looking ladies down near Norwood who would like to write to a lonely soldier "somewhere in England" tell them to drop me a line. I'll send you a picture from London. Please send me one of yours.

Well, that's about all there is this time, so Cheerio, old top, Pip, pip, and Tally-ho. I'm getting the swing of this English language fast — I hope.

As ever.—Phil.

Hendry and Mr. A. Clark. J. Harrison played the violin.

Those who contributed song numbers were Mrs. H. Tarkington, Mrs. A. McKinlay, Mrs. R. Bugg, Mrs. W. Young, Mrs. O. Sugden and Messrs. A. Milne, A. Clark, W. May, R. Hendry, D. Munro, W. Petrie and W. Young. A rendition of "Roamin' in the Gloamin'," by the children present (Doris Hendry, Betty Harrison, Marion Julian, Clifford Pirie and Jamie Harrison) received great applause.

The "quiz" contest was an exciting feature, each person receiving a number which was duplicated on a question. R. Hendry called out the numbers, and awards were given for correct answers.

Community singing and dancing interspersed the program. Sandwiches, cake and tea were served by the social committee.

Next Thursday a business meeting is to be held, when many old members are expected to attend.

MIX OR MATCH 'EM

By ALICE ALDEN

YOU MAY mix your reds and pinks or match them. We saw a red straw sailor with a large pink rose we liked the other day, the colors singing a duet. If today's picture were reproduced in color, the effect would be quite different: bag, jewelry, lipstick and nail lacquer would all be a hot pink, a dashing accent for the soft grey wool jacket dress and grey beret. Don't imagine, though, that all shades containing red go together . . . purplish lipstick and fireman's red polish definitely quarrel. Don't become bored, either, by color-matching. At times you'll want to match lipstick and polish to a scarf only, or perhaps to a boutonniere or bow in your hair. The point is, it's easy to achieve harmony in our costumes these days with cosmeticians and designers working hand in hand.

C.D.S. Fashion Pageant Distinctive Style Parade

As fresh and colorful as the early Spring flowers now appearing in florist shop windows—and just as welcome to the winter-jaded throng who viewed them—were the new materials, colors and styles presented during a fashion pageant Friday afternoon at three o'clock in the Canadian Department Stores, when manequins brought to spectators fashion favorites of the opening season.

Ivory walls, ceilings and Venetian blinds with clever touches of green have transformed the second floor of the store, which now attracts the visitor with its new lightness and air of smart distinction. Completely renovated throughout, it is an ideal setting for the new style show, which was complete even to its background of soft music.

The gay prints, the soft new shades of Spring, as well as the ever popular navy, black and white, all with the slightly martial air which will be outstanding this season, were featured. A few of the high points stressed are longer torsos, patch pockets, a military air to a coat given by the revival of braid binding, the round shirred neck on the basic plain-colored frock, and the seeping in of the Polannaise silhouette, which softens the longer waist with its upward draping at the back.

Clever hats had new trimming twists, with often an alluring veil added for extra flattery. Crisp color accents were lent by bags of fabric and patent, although black and navy accessories were also much in evidence.

Several street dresses of navy won the approval of onlookers, not only because of their smartness and crisp new touches, but also because of their practicability. One popular frock was given an air with pin tucks from neck to hem and on the bolero; a second had crisp white top of eyelet embroidery; a third was brought to life with touches of staccato red. Also winning nods of approval were a stunning frock of grey figured silk with detachable jacket; an afternoon dress in a new shade aptly called lilac, and a military style in dove rose with hand-embroidery on the bodice.

Perfectly tailored suits were shown and several formal gowns were the prettiest we've seen—one adorable model of black taffeta with an all-over design of pink lover's knots had pink ruching at the bodice top, around the hem of a full, swishing skirt, and edging an accompanying pink jacket.

An entirely new group of frocks, suits and coats are available in this department every Thursday—they are all proven styles as shown in Toronto stores, and there are sizes for every figure. Next Friday evening, March 8, business girls will also be given an opportunity of seeing these "best seller" groups, when other style show will be held at eight o'clock in the store, with a complete new range of frocks on parade.

The interior of the second floor, which is causing much favorable comment, was entirely in the hands of local firms during its period of redecoration.

Mrs. T. A. Mackay was convener of the tea room, assisted by Mrs. F. D. Kerr, Mrs. A. L. Killaly, Mrs. A. G. Howson, Miss E Anderson, Mrs. P. Bond, Mrs. J. E. R Munro, Mrs. L. W. Scott.

Branch Notes

ST. JOHN'S BRANCH.

After the weekly Lenten service, the regular meeting of St. John's A.Y.P.A. was held and took the form of a lecture. The speaker was J. F. Strickland, K.C., and the subject of his address was "Marriage, From a Solicitor's Point of View." He stated that if there was a feeling of patience, of understanding and of confidence between a man and his wife, they would in that way have considerable mutual assistance in overcoming the problems of life. He also mentioned some of the various acts that have been enacted in order to bring about a just and fair settlement of any matrimonial grievances. Roy Pitchford moved a vote of thanks to the speaker for his enlightening address and hoped that at some future date he would come back and speak again.

Then followed a short business meeting, in which business for the coming play was discussed. Members are reminded that there will be a corporate Communion this Sunday morning and the speaker is Dr. C. M. Scott. A large turnout is hoped for.

ALL SAINTS' BRANCH.

The weekly meeting of All Saints' A.Y.P.A. was held in the chapel Monday evening, with Miss S. Buck's committee in charge. A singsong was held with A. Worsencroft leading at the piano. Miss F. Outram led the prayers, and the president, Miss E. Abraham, conducted a business session.

The feature of the evening was a "quiz" contest conducted by B. Weale, who presented the currently popular radio craze in a variety of unique ways, and invested it with a refreshing novelty that kept the audience interested for an hour or more.

Refreshments served by Miss Outram and her committee brought the meeting to a close.

Mary H. Comstock Becomes Bride Of A. S. Mervin

In St. John's Anglican Church, against a background of pink snapdragon and fern, the marriage took place at one o'clock this (Saturday) afternoon of Miss Mary Helen Comstock, 211 Sherbrooke street, and the late William Comstock, and Mr. Alexander Stuart Mervin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mervin, Monaghan Road. Canon W. P. Robertson officiated, and the wedding music was played by F. G. Mann, L. Mus.

Budget to Have Money for Bills and Fun, Too

Stop Leaks in Spending

Candy and theatre tickets— such treats make life fun! But you can't really enjoy them when you know they mean putting off important bills. Still — what are people on modest incomes to do?

Budget your money. Far from restricting your fun, as many think, a well-planned budget allows for pleasures as well as necessities. And you will see that you have more money for your pleasures than you've realized.

Perhaps with a monthly income of $150 you have been spending $45 for rent, $35 for food for a family of four.

Cut those too-large items. For rent, a safe rule is one week's pay for one month's housing. Food should cost about $45, or 30 per cent. of your income.

By managing a cheaper rent, by having fewer costly meats, high-priced vegetables, you get the surplus you need for fun.

Or you may find other expenses out of line. Household operating may cost almost as much as rent if you don't watch gas and telephone bills, household supplies.

Stop leaks, plan your spending to get what you want. Our 32-page booklet tells how to budget your income according to your needs. Gives pointers on buying, ruled pages for a year's accounts.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO BUDGET AND BUY FOR BETTER LIVING to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Girls Take Boys To I.O.D.E. Leap Year Party

Tables were turned Friday night at the Leap Year dance of the Major Bennett Chapter, I.O.D.E. in the Canadian Legion Hall, when it was the girls who did the honors. Peterborough boys are admitting this morning that the fair sex really excelled themselves in making an outstanding event of last night's ball—not only because they arrived in taxis to pick up their escorts, supplied handsome boutonniers, and looked after them generally, but because they did it with such a gay and gracious air.

Insignia of the Chapter adorned the walls, and streamers of red, white and blue formed effective decorations for lights and the orchestra stand, where Jimmie Duffus and his band provided the latest in dancing rhythm. Novelty numbers included a spot dance won by Miss Olive Northey and Mr. Robert Ashton, and an elimination dance for which a prize was awarded to the most graceful couple on the floor, Miss Jean Belleghem and Mr. Don Sedgewick. PARADE IN PASTEL

By ALICE ALDEN

SOME GIRLS would rather look pretty . . . the idea of appearing in a hat or a frock admittedly smart but not particularly becoming is shocking. That's why, and good reason, that every season milliners and dress designers turn out pastels along with exotic and dark shades. Today's pastel blue dress, for instance, is one of dozens of soft wool jerseys being shown for spring, and the bird and flower hat is typical of many which will catch the eye from now on through Easter morning.

Collegians Are Beaten By Bowmanville

It was a disastrous night at Bowmanville Friday for the three cage teams of the Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School, the girls squad and the junior and senior boys all going down to defeat before the Bowmanville High School aggregations. It was the first loss of the season for the junior boys whose one-point defeat leaves them still in the running but the other two teams are out of the picture. The girls' team made it a decidedly close battle after a bad start, losing by a single point but the senior boys were beaten 40 to 26.

The junior boys fought desperately to avert their first setback of the campaign and came within an ace of doing it. Bowmanville High got the jump on them by outscoring P.C.V.S. 16 points to 12 in the first half but the visitors put on the pressure in the second session and almost pulled the game out of the fire. They hung up 12 points in that frame as against nine for the winners and thus just fell a point short of sewing up the game.

It was an exciting fast-moving exhibition with little to choose between the two outfits. The factor that turned the tide in favor of Bowmanville was McIlveen who gave a smart demonstration of accurate marksmanship to score 14 points out of his team's 25 total. Jackman and Sleman gave him able assistance in the scoring department, the three getting all but one of the winners' points. Gillespie was top scorer for the Peterborough squad with three baskets. P.C.V.S. could have earned the verdict with a little more success in their free throw efforts for they only cashed in on two out of nine chances and Bowmanville managed to get three points out of 12 attempts.

Bowmanville High (25)—Sleman (4), McIlveen, (14), Jackman (6), Tamblin (1), Rundle, Underhill, Clark, Mitchell, Allin and Wheeler.

Peterborough C.V.S. (27)—Hall (4), Gillespie (6), Moorhead (4), Ferguson (2), Richardson, Saunders, (2), Smith (2), Gardner (2).

Referee, Dufton, Bowmanville; umpire, C. M. Krug, Peterborough.

One-Sided Tilt

In the senior boys' game Mason who was a pain in the neck for the Collegiate rugby squad list fall proved just as serious a menace at the cage game for he sparked the Bowmanville attack with a string of 11 baskets from the field for a total of 22 points, nice sniping in any man's league. Fagan, another football star was an able second with nine points.

Johnston led the Peterborough offensive with 10 points, looping in four baskets in the second half. Bill Harle was the second highest scorer for the losers looping in three baskets and cashing in on a three throw.

In ability to keep Mason off the score sheet left P.C.V.S. behind the eight-ball all through the battle for he tossed in six baskets in the opening half and came back with five more in the second. Bowmanville outscored the losers 17 to 8 in the first half but the Peterborough squad showed more fight in their attack after the rest period although they were again outscored, Bowmanville getting 23 points to 18 for the losers.

Only seven fouls were called against Bowmanville and they were good for four points for the losers. On the other hand the P.C.V.S. were guilty of 13 fouls, losing Foster on four personal fouls and the winners collected six points.

Bowmanville High (40)—Fagan (9), Brown (6), Mason (22), McIlveen (2), Colville (1), Crawford, Swindles, Casburn, G. McIlveen, G. Sleman.

Peterborough C.V. S. (26)—Marshall (1), Moorehead (6), Taylor, McPherson (1), Harle (7), Johnston (10), Scott, Foster (1).

Referee, Dufton; umpire, Krug.

Sunny California was not so sunny as torrential rains caused rivers to break their banks and inundate wide sections of the state. CURLING

By HERB MARTIN

We no sooner finish one competition than we jump right into another.

On Thursday evening the Neill Trophy was brought to a successful conclusion and yesterday the ladies started play in the Sturgeon mixed bonspiel. The Leads and Seconds spiel also got under way last evening, and along with those two contests the first round in the tie play-offs for group "C" was finished, so all in all we are making progress.

Another important series was concluded also this week, when Mrs. H. Dulmage defeated Mrs. D. Lawrie in the final for the vice-skips. The ladies put on a good demonstration of curling and quite a large gathering followed the play from one end to the other.

Bachelors Safer in Leap Year Than When Girls Have to Court on Sly— Open Pursuit Gives Poor Male a Chance to Escape if He Desires to Retain His Freedom.

Dear Dorothy Dix—Leap year has a lot of us boys trembling in our boots. It is hard enough for us to steer clear of the altar when we have to do the actual proposing ourselves, so how are we to play safe when the girls have the right to pop the question? Also, will you give us some idea of the proper technique to use when, how and if a sweet young creature asks us to be hers? THE BOYS

ANSWER:

Take heart, you timid dears. Being proposed to is not half so unpleasant an experience as you seem to apprehend. In fact, it has its points, even for a man. It is soothing to his vanity, for one thing, and, for another, it may offer unexpected opportunities for gain. For surely no girl would be so little a lady as to ask a man to marry her if she was not able to support him in the style in which his father had always ing on the sly, as it were. It is the difference between being pursued in the open, which at least gives you a chance to duck and possibly escape her who is after you, and being chased under cover so silently and secretly that you do not even suspect your danger until the noose is about your neck.

Furthermore, when a girl asks you to be hers you can flatly decline the honor, and that's that. But what can the poor simp do who is insidiously inveigled and maneuvered into saying the fatal words himself some night when the moon is shining and even homely girls look pretty and he has had too many cocktails?

Now, as to the etiquette of the occasion. I confess I am unable to speak, and so far Emily Post doesn't seem to have got around to the matter. I should think, however, that if Miss Millionbucks should take your mitt in hers and say: "Dear John, marry me and your work-worn hand shall never have heavier labor to do than cut coupons," that the proper thing would be to clasp her to your manly breast and say: "Gee, Emily, that's a swell job and I am ready to sign on the dotted line." Something sweetly sentimental like that, you know.

And the timid man might fall back on the feminine formula of "How sudden this is! I never suspected you felt about me like that," when Sally Gogetter offers to share her flat and job with him. And the widower with many children might at least say "yes" and "thanky," too, when the old maid offers to mother his brood.

And, of course, in case you don't want to marry the girl who wants to marry you, you can always tell her you will be a brother to her, which sort of lets her down easily.

No, indeed, being proposed to isn't at all bad medicine. In fact, it is pie.

A New Suggestion for Mothers

Dear Dorothy Dix—When boys first begin to take notice of girls, why don't their mothers give them little parties and have them invite girls to their homes, give them a good time and encourage them to come again? They do that for their girls. Why could they not do it for their sons? G. B. L.

ANSWER:

This is one of the finest suggestions that has been made to this column for a long time, and I hope that a great many mothers who read it will act upon it. For it will settle for them many of the problems that turn their hair gray with worry.

Every mother knows that the only way in which she can possibly find out what kind of boys and girls her own daughter is playing about with is by having them come to her house, where she can look them over and get a pretty good perspective on their manners and morals. It is a lot of trouble to have young people rampaging through the house, turning on the radio at unseemly hours, eating up the fresh chocolate cake and driving Father to read his paper in his own bedroom, but it saves many a heartache later on, because Mother can probably nip Mary's little romance in the bud by a caustic comment on some hoodlum youth who smells of liquor or by making fun of some Weary Willie who lets his mother support him.

And Mother could do just as much for Tom if she would let him invite his girl friends to the house. Maybe more, because she could make him see the different girls through her eyes and point out to him traits of character which his boyish vision did not recognize. She would tell him which were fine and which were common, which were ladies and which were not, which were gold-diggers and which liked a boy for himself instead of what he could give her. It would be a rare education in feminine psychology and would prevent many an unsuitable marriage.

No Cure for a Lazy Wife

Dear Miss Dix—What can a man do who is married to a woman who is intelligent, has many fine qualities and who is charming in many ways, but who is one of the world's worst housekeepers and who cannot and will not make him and the children a decent home? I adore a neat home and the little comforts that go with it. I was brought up in such a one and am miserable in the pigpen in which I have to live. I am mortified beyond all telling when day after day I face dirt and disorder. I am well off. I provide all the money necessary to run the house on properly and to dress my wife beautifully, but she will not use it for either purpose. The house is run down and slovenly, and she won't even take the trouble to buy good clothes or to wear them. My nerves are wrecked by this. What can I do, as any effort to reform her has failed? BLANK

ANSWER:

Evidently your wife is lazy and there is absolutely no cure for that. There is no possibility of galvanizing her into action, and so the only thing for you to do is to tell her that, as she cannot keep the house, you will take over the responsibility of running it.

If you will get one of the highly trained graduates of any of the domestic science schools she will reorganize your house and make it the kind of a home you desire, and she will probably save you enough by stopping the wastage to pay her salary. Or else sell your house and go to live in some good family hotel or boarding house.

Cavan Couple Are Honored On Anniversary

FRASERVILLE, March 2—(ENS)—Several dozen close friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. G. Fred Clarke of the ninth line of Cavan met at their home on Wednesday evening and gave them a real surprise on the occasion of the 34th anniversary of their marriage. The early part of the evening was spent in playing games such as young people play in the gay days of life, "Wink" for example and many older people were surprised to find how out of practice they had become with the passing of years.

Among those present were Joseph Madill, an old neighbor and very warm friend especially of Mr. Clarke, with whom he had been closely associated in church work at Fraserville for so many years, where Mr. Clarke had succeeded him as superintendent of the Sunday School and where Mrs. Clarke had played the church organ for over thirty years. Mr. Madill was one of the guests at the wedding thirty-four years ago. Mr. Albert Hunter, the best man of that day, did not feel well enough to attend the Wednesday evening function but was represented by his son James and Mrs. Hunter. Mr. Gordon Finlay in a short address said he and his wife had come all the way from Toronto to be present but that it was a pleasure to do so in respect to Mr. and Mrs. Clarke and in acknowledgment of their wonderful kindness and in appreciation of their remarkable citizenship. Miss Jessie Schaffer in her inimitable, humorous way, spoke for the ladies. Others who gave brief speeches and who spoke in glowing terms of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke as neighbors, citizens and church workers were Melville H. Johnston, S. S. Staples, Harold Cathcart, James Might and Bruce Elliott. The latter intimated that he and his brother Frederick had lived beside Mr. and Mrs. Clarke during the whole thirty-four years, with the exception of two when the Clarkes had been in the west, and stated that Mrs. Clarke had been so kind and motherly to them that words could not be found to express their feeling of indebtedness. Among the speeches was an address which was read by Mrs. Albert Hunter congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Clarke, who were presented with a beautiful Aladdin lamp with a pretty shade and a silver bon-bon dish and wishing them many more years of happy and prosperous married life.

Mrs. Clarke, who was a Fraserville girl before her marriage, came as a bride to the farm where she and her husband still reside. The original home was destroyed by fire some years ago, after which the present modern dwelling was erected.

As Anzacs Arrived In Suez

General Freyberg, commander of the New Zealand forces which recently arrived in Suez along with a force of Australian troops is shown here as Anthony Eden, CENTRE, and Sir Miles Lampson, RIGHT, British Ambassador to Egypt, welcomed the Anzacs to the Near East. Military observers feel that it is quite possible that warfare in the Near East may break out this Spring with a Russian and German attempt to seize the valuable oil wells of Rumania. This picture was transmitted upon its arrival in New York by phonephoto.

Not Disappeared

HOLLYWOOD, March 2—(AP).—A railway report on a round-trip ticket issued to film actress Gloria Dickson laid to rest fears of her estranged husband that she had disappeared. Perc Westmore, studio makeup artist, asked for a check on the ticket after Miss Dickson failed to arrive from New York Monday.

Peterborough Boys and Peterborough Jobs

The weak feature of such a slogan as "A Peterborough Boy for a Peterborough Job" is that it brings sharply into relief the cold, stark tragic fact that under the King Government Peterborough boys are finding it impossible to get Peterborough jobs.

Superintendent Bill Mellis of the Government Employment Bureau is reported in The Examiner as late as Thursday as saying that in the past year at least 120 Peterborough men have left this city to find work. Many more than that number are without jobs here at the present time. From The Examiner's news story of Thursday we quote:

"There are still a great many men calling daily at the Employment office on King street in search of work of any kind. At the present time no local jobs are open to them "AND THE PROSPECT OF IMMEDIATE WORK SEEMS REMOTE. Superintendent Mellis issues an appeal to the citizens of Peterborough for odd jobs of any kind to help tide some of these men, most of them married and with families, over a difficult period."

The simple truth is that while Liberal advertising and Liberal speakers paint rosy pictures of Canadian industry completely geared up on a war rating the Government bureau in Peterborough is sending out an SOS for "odd jobs of any kind" Peterborough has been as completely neglected in the matter of substantial war orders for her factories as she has been in the matter of recruiting. Local manufacturers have gone to Ottawa and come back disappointed; no orders, no information.

The start of the seventh month of the war offers nothing for Peterborough unemployed save the intimation from the Government employment office that "the prospect of immediate work seems remote."

This community owes nothing to the King government and it is surely asking too much of the people of Peterborough to expect them to vote for five more years of that kind of thing simply because of the regard most citizens have for the Liberal candidate.

Five more years of King government is too high a price to pay for a sentimental vote.

This is one election in which the electors should do a little voting for themselves by voting for a government of action, the National government of Hon. R. J. Manion.

DR. STEPHEN BLACK—Brother of Mary.

CHAPTER IX

JANIS wondered if any of the women now sitting beside her beneath the long row of driers had problems similar to hers, if any of them were in love, had film- star aspirations, knew a lot of thoughtless people.

So much of Mary Black's furniture she must send to the refinishers, so many carpets and rugs to be cleaned. It was going to cost a great deal. She must find a way to discourage people who continually dropped in, expected to be invited to meals.

Altogether too often these days the face of Stephen Black came into her thoughts to haunt her with its severity, its disapproval, even. She wondered why she ever thought of him—a man who hadn't bothered to come near her since that first day they met. Undoubtedly he had only been nice to her so that she would lease his sister's house. He was probably laughing at her now, laughing at "that rich little girl who had rented a famous actress' house and was trying to make a big splurge."

"But the dear man doesn't know the half of it," she thought, her mind leaping to that ragged bank balance of hers. Oh, well, why worry? She'd soon be in pictures. She would show everybody—Dr. Stephen Black included.

Rock Waits for Her

When the beauty parlor experts did finally release her, she came out to the coolness of early evening with a sigh of relief. The sun was already beginning to drop down behind the mountains, coloring the sky in a blaze of iridescent glory, and there sat Rock in her car by the curb, anxiously peering toward the beauty parlor entrance.

She advanced to his broad smile like steel to magnet. Her auburn curls lay on her hatless head in a beautiful symmetry, framing her pink and white face like a softly persistent caress.

"Where's Lucinda?" she asked Rock, now standing beside the car holding open the door.

"Oh, I dropped her home — I wanted to be alone with you."

He took her crimson-feathered hat from her hand and tossed it to the shelf behind the seat.

Janis glanced at him obliquely over her fox collar and tried to look reproachful; but only laughed happily instead and allowed him to assist her into the car.

When they got under way he took one hand off the wheels, laid it firmly on her knee. "We're on our way to get the marriage license," he announced confidently.

Janis swallowed the lump in her throat. "Please, Rock," came from her tremulously. "I can't marry you—now."

She Accepts Proposal

He put his hand back on the wheel, said nothing for a long while. He looked straight ahead, seemed wholly concerned with winding in and out of traffic. The car swung into Hollywood Boulevard. The shop fronts aglow with colored neon signs made a fairyland of unbelieveable beauty in this humming business mart.

It suddenly seemed to Janis that nothing was real here. Everything had a froth, an inconsistency, a pretention that stirred the senses to lofty pitch, inciting a courage as false as must be the hopes in many hearts among the promiscuous crowd now sauntering along the sidewalks. A strange forboding clutched her relentlessly. Then suddenly she came to herself.

She exclaimed: "Rock! You're going in the wrong direction. You must take me home!"

"Skip it, Beautiful," he returned calmly. "We'll get the license—then talk things over."

She was half inclined to be provoked with him. She had been planning to give Rock dinner, send him home early. She would have to have her beauty sleep if she expected to look her best tomorrow for that test. But, of course it would do no harm to get the license, and perhaps would convince Rock of her love for him.

"All right, dear," she told him brightly. "Then we'll celebrate with dinner at the house. But—if the studio finds out——"

"Lots of couples get licenses, then don't go through with the ceremony. The studio won't know about the marriage—I'll fix that."

They Get the License

Acquiring a marriage license in the Courthouse took only a matter of minutes, and they marched out, arm in arm. Rock was beaming with new importance, and Janis' flushed cheeks and sweetly reticient manner made her look bridelike. Certainly, she felt like a bride, with her nerves tingling in that gloriously disturbing fashion; and her trancelike air nearly spiritual, was a kind of submission to whatever fate held in store for her.

She and Rock exchanged few words as they again rode through the busy city streets. Many times afterward Janis looked back to this night and knew that her heart had sanctioned all of it, that it had led her into what followed without much volition on the part of her reason. She wondered if all girls had as susceptible hearts as hers and pitied them.

They turned at last into a wide smooth highway, rushed through suburban towns that did not show where one left off and another began. But presently Janis knew by the signs that they were in Glendale. It didn't matter much now that Rock had determinedly taken everything into his own hands and brought her out here because he loved her, she thought dreamily.

He stopped the car before a small white stucco cottage, and she stumbled to the ground in the dark with his assistance. Trying in vain to stop trembling, she went with him to the door. What he said after he lifted the knocker was: "We're getting married—in case you're interested."

Her grasp on his arm tightened, but otherwise she gave no sign, offered no protest.

And then the door opened, and a white-haired elderly man beamed genially upon them. "Bless you, my children," he greeted kindly, "come in."

Janis glanced questioningly up at Rock.

"Come on, darling," he said, gently shoving her forward. "I phoned Mr. Werrington this afternoon—told him to expect us."

Janis knew what to do now. She went quickly over the threshold—fully convinced that she was taking the right step, the one she wanted to make, would never regret.

Married

The Rev. Mr. Werrington closed the door, ushered them into a small living room and introduced them to his frail-looking, sweet-mannered wife. She and the bony-faced housemaid, Ella Berwanger, were the only witnesses to the short ceremony which presently united Rock Conover and Janis Sheldon in the holy bonds of matrimony.

In infinite content the bride rode away with her new husband. They had little to say to each other, even when pausing at corners for the light to turn green. There was nothing that Janis wanted to hear said. She felt that the silence between them now was far sweeter than any words could be; sweet in an oddly sacred way that united them.

Back again at Janis' door, Rock hastily kissed her. He burst out: "Sorry, honey, — can't stay for dinner. We'll celebrate later. You ought to rest to be in shape for tomorrow's test, and I'll have to read script till midnight—or miff everything on the lot tomorrow. I'll hop a bus on the corner."

The light from the porch lamp over his head fell directly on his face. He looked concerned over something; he acted nervous. Janis wondered what she had done to displease him. She could think of nothing.

Tears filled her eyes. She said in a voice that wobbled: "I'm—disappointed, Rock. I thought we'd have dinner together—you could leave early——"

More words would not come. There was something decidedly wrong with Rock, something which filled her with a kind of doubt of him, and she couldn't shake it off. "Oh, this mustn't be—it mustn't," she thought swiftly. "I love him—I've married him!"

"Kind of a sentimental little idiot, aren't you?" he said with brusque tenderness, and took her shoulders firmly in his two hands. He looked at her soberly a long moment, then gathered her to him in a swift embrace, bruising her lips with his kisses—one, two, three of them—then shoved her rudely away. "You know we have to be careful—not air our—our secret, darling. I'll call you tomorrow."

Alone on Wedding Night

He swung down the steps before she could protest further. She stood stock still where he had left her, too hurt and puzzled by his strange behavior to move. Was he already regretting having married her?

Slowly she put the key in the lock and opened the door. All the lilt in her heart was gone now. She went blindly upstairs to her sitting room, her thoughts racing in miserable confusion.

She stared at her set white face in a mirror. Was this the girl who had left this room so blithely only a few short hours before? She glanced down at the booklet clutched in her hand. Her wedding certificate. She sank int a chair, flicked the leaves of the little book, staring stonily at the signed evidence of a legal ceremony which had united Janis Sheldon and Rock Conover in marriage; been witnessed by Bertha Werrington and Ella Berwanger, with Clark Werrington officiating.

Suddenly she heard laughter—laughter and sobbing—and realized it was coming from herself. Then abruptly she gave way to it in wild hysterical abandon.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

ACCEPT WELL ENOUGH

"LET WELL enough alone" is a motto worth following in some bridge situations. One of these comes when an apponent, playing a slam contract, concedes that he is down a trick or so. Even if you think you may be able to set him more, it will pay you to study the situation carefully before objecting. Bear in mind that, if you make him play it out, or tell you how he is going to play it, he may produce a line of activity which will enable him to make his contract. Then how will you feel?

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ♥	Pass
Pass	2 ♠	3 ♥	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♥	Pass
5 ♥	5 ♠	6 ♥

Lewis L. Bucks, president of the Drake Bridge club of Philadelphia, tells this one as a joke on himself. First he had a chance to prevent the slam by passing the 2-Hearts, which would have closed the bidding, but a better joke was to come.

West led the spade 7 to dummy's A. The heart K and A were taken, then South spread his hand, saying "Down one, losing a heart and a spade."

Mr. Bucks saw a chance to set the hand two tricks, by getting a ruff if clubs were played, so he told the declarer to pick up his cards and "play it out."

"All right," said the young man in the South. He studied a bit, then took the diamond finesse and discarded his losing spade on the diamond A, making his contract.

"That's the last time I'll refuse anybody's concession of defeat in a slam contract," philosophized the victim of the case.

Deloro Smelters Adding New Buildings

MARMORA, March 2 (ENS). — Several new buildings are being constructed at the plant of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, Limited, and an addition to the cobalt opide plant is well under way. This building will be used to treat the cobalt residues from South Africa which will be brought to Deloro.

There is also being installed a considerable amount of new equipment in the present opide plant which allow the Deloro Company to increase their out put of cobalt oxide. A further building is being constructed for the treatment of cobalt metal which the Deloro Company will in future be required to produce.

The new buildings and additions are being rushed to completion as the Deloro Company has to be in production on their new process in the early summer.

The increased activity at Deloro means much to the Marmora district as a large number of the Deloro employees reside in the village.

Mr. J. Arnold Thomson, Belleville is the architect on the new building and M. Sullivan and Son, Limited, Arnprior, Ontario are contractors.

C.G.I.T. Session

The regular meeting of the C.G. I.T. was held at the parsonage on Friday with a good attendance. This will be followed by a bunch of delicacies of India.

After the business period songs and games were enjoyed and Joyce Kouri told a very interesting folk story.

Badminton Tourney

A very enjoyable evening was spent in Marmora Town Hall on Wednesday evening when Marmora badminton club entertained the Hasting club. Marmora rather excelled themselves in the tournament but in most cases the scores were close and they will need to show the same skill in the return game.

After the play all retired to the council chamber where tables were set and a lovely lunch was served.

Mrs. Baker thanked the Marmora Club and extended an invitation to return the games next Wednesday night which the Marmora Club readily accepted. Dancing was enjoyed for about an hour with Mr. and Mrs. G. Davis, H. Auger and H. Linton supplying music.

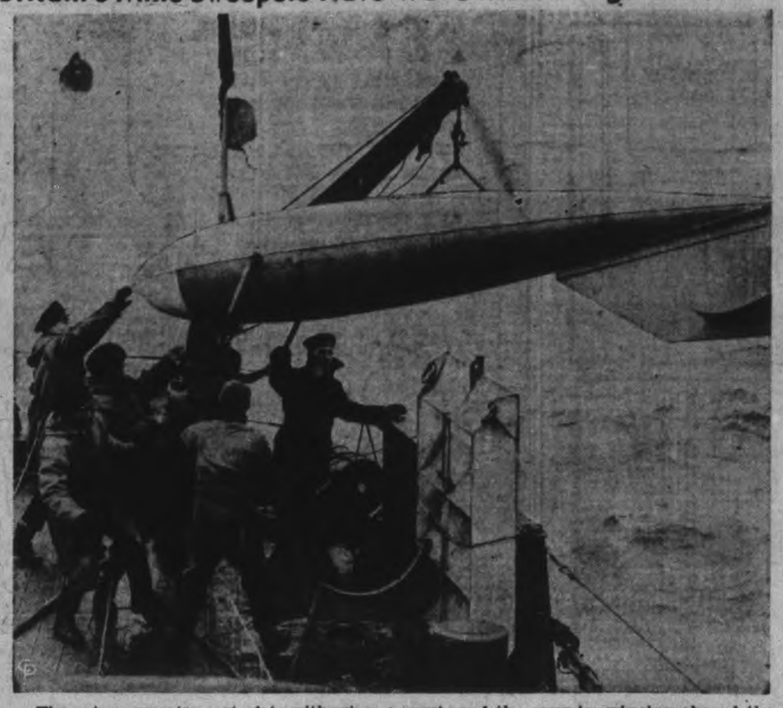
Britain's Mine Sweepers Have War's Most Dangerous Job



The mine-sweeping patrol is without a doubt one of the present war's most dangerous jobs and here are some of the men who hunt Nazi mines in the North Sea. This sweeper is putting in at an unnamed port, and the crew is swinging aboard the paravane, mine-cable cutting device which snips the mine cables, sending the deadly weapon bobbing to the surface, where they're exploded by rifle fire.

Farm Problems

the old familiar ground over which so many Canadian elections have been fought.

"Vigorous encouragement" of all forms of co-operative marketing, regulation and distribution of farm products were promised by Dr. Manion. Farm marketing boards would be set up with the provinces, overseas agencies expanded and measures taken to increase preferences in Empire markets.

A seasonal tariff protection scheme for the home market was advocated and the return to 1926 price levels was set as the party's objective. The Canadian Farm Loan Board would be expanded to provide long-term mortgage money at low interest. Price spreads would be under continual scrutiny.

With practically the entire cabinet out of the city on election tours, Ottawa is quite politically. Work in the various war departments continues unbated but there is scarcely any activity on Parliament Hill, usually deep in a session at this time of year. Busiest political spots in the city are the Liberal and Conservative headquarters.

Would Insure Troops

At Beausejour, Man., J. S. Woodsworth, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation leader and veteran of five other Dominion election campaigns, opened his speaking tour of the present one last night. He said Canadian soldiers should be insured sufficiently to cover rehabilitation after the war and to care for dependents of those who do not reurn.

Conscription will come to Canada in spite of the pledges that it would not, made by Dr. Manion and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, he said. Equality of service could only be achieved if wealth was conscripted first.

Through the excess profits tax, a large proportion of war profits will be turned over to the Dominion treasury, labor minister McLarty said in an address to a Liberal nomination meeting at Brantford.

The convention gave unanimous endorsation to the selection of W. Ross Macdonald, member of the last parliament, as candidate in Brantford city.

The war purchase board and the wartime control board are proving effective in preventing profiteering hoarding. Mr. McLarty declared. Of 16 boards named since the war started, none was chosen through previous political affiliations.

"Which is better, a brain trust of men selected for their qualifications or a brain trust of the cabinet?" he asked.

Crerar Outlines Changes

Hon. T. A. Crerar, federal minister of mines and resources, outlined the achievements of the Mackenzie King government since it took office in 1935 in a speech at Deloraine, Man.

Mr. Crerar said that in 1935 Canada had no Air defences, no serviceable military planes, no artillery protection and only two destroyers to protect the country's coastlines.

Four years later, when war broke out, the Dominion boasted six destroyers, a flotilla leader and several mine sweepers. In addition, up-to-date coastal defences guarded the Atlantic and Pacific shores.

Last year Canada was fourth among the world's exporting nations. National parks and roads, together with increased tourist trade and gold production, were described as constructive policies increasing Canada's national wealth.

Reads Censored Passages

Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, read to a federal election campaign meeting in New Toronto passages which he said were censored from a radio address which he delivered Thursday over a network of Ontario stations.

"I submitted my speech to the radio station with instructions that they should take whatever steps were necessary to let me know exactly what I should say," he said. "I received the copy of my speech back with the information that the deletions had been made by the radio censor.

Col. Drew cited one deletion as showing "perfectly clear the political nature of the censorship which is now in force.' It read: "On your shoulders rests the full responsibility for the fact that our defence forces have pratically no modern weapons of any kind."

Another had to do with the weapons of Canadian infantry and artillery, which Col. Drew said were brought back from the first Great War. Another said that "incompetence in the department of National Defence" was responsible for an insufficiency of propellors for airplanes manufactured for the Royal Canadian Air Force by the National Steel Car Corporation, Ltd.

Other References

Other references which he said were deleted were:

"The peace establishment of our land forces is six divisions."

"Our mechanized cavalry was without mechanical equipment of any kind.'

"Others are drilling with only half or a quarter of the number of weapons they require."

"You are aware that the only pursuit ships we had in Canada then were five ancient Sopwith-Siskins which had been obsolete for at least 10 years and had a top speed of 145 miles an hour. These were the machines with which you were going to give advanced training to men who would be called upon to handle fighters with a speed of 400 miles an hour.'

Col. Drew said that Prime Minister Mackenzie King was "not only permitted" to criticize the extent of defence preparations under the last Conservative administration, but his words "received headlines in many papers."

"When I gave exact facts to show how incorrect his statement was and pointed out that it was in fact his responsibility, then the political censor stepped in to protect Mr. King," Col. Drew asserted.

"It should be remembered that there have been dictatorships under the British flag before this. And it should also be remembered how those dictatorships were established and maintained.

"The last dictatorship under the British flag was that of Cromwell. It may be worth remembering that the method by which Cromwell established his dictatorship was to dissolve Parliament and deny the right of criticism. Obviously Mr. King has been studying history."

Living Costs Up

Postmaster-General C. G. Power in an address at Brandon stated, as proof that Canada entered the war "on an even keel," that the cost of living in the Dominion advanced only 3.4 per cent during the first six months of war.

Canada is organized on an economic and civilian basis that will direct every effort toward winning the war, Mr. Power said.

He gave great credit to the civil servants carrying the bulk of the work under direction of cabinet members. Two year before the outbreak of war, when world events indicated it was coming, the Liberal government had set the proper machinery in motion to prepare Canada for such a catastrophe.

Emergency legislation was prepared, air defence plans outlined and other steps taken to assure the Dominion's entry into conflict without disruption of essential services.

Revenue Minister Ilsley said at Windsor, N.S., that no government could have raised large amounts by taxation for purposes of national defence in Canada between the years 1931 and 1936.

From 1936 to 1938, he said, $94,000,000 had been spent on defences. Of this amount something over $50,000,000 were spent for maintenance, repairs to buildings, transportation and training camps. A considerable sum was also spent for other purposes such as civil aviation.

This left a little more than $32,000,000 which was spent on construction and equipment. He listed some of the equipment as including three destroyers, 300 airplanes, defence works and additional naval stores.

Sub Attacks

rumors that Nazi U-boats were being sought by the Royal Navy on this side of the Atlantic.

In Washington, it was said the position given by the Southgate was near the area where the United States' Atlantic squadon is engaged in manoeuvres.

5 Big U-Boats in Area

At least five submarines capable of trans-Atlantic cruising, some reports said, were prowling Central and South American waters in quest of British and French cargo vessels loaded with grain, wheat, oil and other materials.

On the trail of the undersea craft the American and West Indies squadron of the Royal Navy, it was understood, has been pressing a relentless and ever widening search.

The British command is particularly on the alert against any Nazi effort to avenge the loss of the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee which was beaten by three British cruisers, Ajax, Exeter and Achilles, off Montevideo, Uruguay, last December.

On Jan. 25, The Associated Pess was informed authoritatively of the imminence of a German U-boat campaign against freight lines linking Caribbean, West Indies and South American ports with Great Britain. A spokesman at the White House in Washington called this information "mere reports," but no United States government source issued a specific denial.

Last night, following the reports of the attack on the Southgate, well-informed sources went into greater detail on the hide-and-seek game being played.

Engine Trouble.

So detailed was this information that it was learned one U-boat had been troubled repeatedly by breakdowns of its diesel engines, the power plant for surface cruising, but was able to conduct diving operations on her batteries.

The submarine flotilla's tender ship, it was said, might be able to make the needed repairs—if the U-boat could find a safe spot to hole up. The tender ship was described as heavily armed, with a speed of about 16 knots.

Possibility of a fight within the "peace zone"—the area outlined by the 21 American republics at the inter-American neutrality conference in Panama City last October but not accepted as such by the belligerents—prompted the United States navy to order all vessels in the 10th naval district, with headquarters at Puerto Rico, to stand by and give such assistance as their positions permitted.

The Misses Wilhelmine Northey, Evelyn Coones, Helen Smith, Anna Brown and Zelda Adams helped the bride unpack the presents. Games, dancing and lunch were enjoyed by all those present. Mr. McCallum, on behalf of himself and his bride, thanked the people of Lakehurst for their kindness.

Havelock Lodge Holds Father And Son Banquet

HAVELOCK, March 2—(ENS). — Seventy-five brethren and guests were in attendance as the Royal Lodge, I.O.O.F., No. 286, Havelock, sponsored their first father and son banquet on Wednesday evening. Among the visiting brethren were Bro. J. E. Anderson of Lindsay, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, and Bros. H. Frost, D.D.G.M., and William Constable, Grand Messenger, both of Peterborough.

The banquet was served in the local lodge rooms, commencing soon after 7.30 p.m., by a committee under the leadership of Bros. D. A. Forde, Joseph Little, B. Haryett, R. Jack, C. Coon, J. Cartwright, and G. Rutherford.

Toastmaster Bro. E. J. Leeson, P. D.D.G.M., following supper, brought the gathering to order with the customary toast to the King, which was responded to by facing the flag and singing the National Anthem.

Bro. H. Frost of Peterborough proposed the toast to the Grand Lodge, which was appropriately replied to by Bro. William Constable.

The toast to the sons and friends was proposed by Bro. H. W. Roche, P.N.G., and responded to on their behalf by James Watson.

The toast to Royal Lodge was given by Clarence Hubel, and replied to by Bro. Harry Ferguson, Noble Grand of the local I.O.O.F.

"This Above All" was the text of an inspiring address by Bro. J. E. Anderson of Lindsay, guest speaker of the evening. He directed the first part of his interesting talk to the younger men and boys and the latter half dwelt on Oddfellowship, setting forth why the lodge was first organized, its aims and beginning.

A musical selection by Douglas Anderson and Clifford Wrightly, with mouth organ and guitar, was heartily applauded by the gathering. Progressive euchre was afterwards played, with prizes being won as follows: First, H. Frost, Peterborough; second, Joseph Little; third, Earl Gordon.

Enthusiastic Welcome

A British Tommy gets an enthusiastic welcome as he arrives home in London on leave from the western front.

Mr. Picobac draws a line

"I'm no fire-eater", declared Mr. Picobac, applying a match to his pipe as though to belie his words. He carefully closed his seal-tight Picobac pouch and returned it to his pocket.

"I'm a man of peace", he continued. "Peace and friendship. What I mostly enjoy is a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke in good company like we have here tonight. But — there's a line, gentlemen. There's a line. I have to draw the line somewhere."

"Just like Mr. Chamberlain", said Les, wiping the soap off his razor.

"Exactly", agreed Mr. Picobac. "And the whole British Empire's behind him!"

U.S. Mine City Begins To Settle

Homes, Shops, Factories Crack Or Collapse In Middle Of Night

SHENANDOAH, Pa., March 4 (AP) — Mid-city Shenandoah sank slowly today, toppling homes and cracking business buildings, as abandoned anthracite mine workings below the town collapsed after a 24-hour rain.

Residents, awakened by the rumbling that warned of the caveln, fled from a 16-block area that settled slowly and steadily. Police Chief Frank Alinsky said no one was reported killed or injured, but property damage was heavy.

Seven hours after the subsidence first was detected many buildings had settled 18 inches and widening cracks streaked across factories and sturdier brick structures.

Many homes were split in two. Gas and water mains were broken. Street pavements caved in.

Women sobbed hysterically among the hundreds of spectators who looked on from safe areas outside

Byrd Expedition Refused Another $250,000

WASHINGTON, March 4—(AP).—The House of Representatives' Appropriations committee refused to-day to approve another $250,000 appropriation for the Byrd Antarctic expedition, saying that it had been misinformed last year as to the expedition's needs.

At the same time the committee made other cuts in the Interior Department bill, to trim a total of $2,986,277 from President Roosevelt's requests for the department.

The $250,000 fund for the Byrd expedition was refused on the ground that the committee was given wrong information last year as to how long it would be necessary to provide money for that project. Asserting that $350,000 already had been appropriated for

Rome Warns London Relations Endangered By Blockading Of German Coal; Test Comes As 5 Colliers Leave Holland

Charge Britain Trying To Force Sale Of Italian Arms

ROTTERDAM, The Netherlands, March 4 (CP-Havas) — Five Italian ships loaded with German coal consigned to Italy sailed today and nine other taking on cargo are expected to leave before the end of the week.

The Orata was the first to leave today. The collier, together with three others, had sailed for home last Saturday, but put back to port on orders from Rome following extension of British contraband control to German coal en route to Italy.

ROME, March 4—(AP).—Italy, protesting against the British blockade of German coal shipments to Italy, has told Great Britain that "economic and political relations" of the Rome and London governments are endangered.

Britain is reported reliable to have made a counter protest over the way the matter has been handled in the Fascist press.

The Italian note of protest, delivered yesterday to the British Embassy and published today, went beyond a formal protest against the London Admiralty's order to halt the coal shipments. It struck at contraband control generally and charged that interception of mail at sea was a violation of The Hague convention of 1907.

The submission of all maritime traffic of non-belligerent countries to contraband control, the note said,

Youngest Soldier In Canadian Army

Bob Wright, of Marmora, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wright, is reported to be the youngest Canadian with the C.A.S.F. in England, and the youngest to have enlisted in Canada since the war started. He enlisted before Christmas and celebrated his 17th birthday on February 25 at Aldershot, England. He is with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, while an older brother, Bill, is with the depot company at Picton. The father is a veteran of the last war.

Japs Suspicious

Tokyo, March 4 (AP)

WAR MINISTER Shunroku Hata declared before the diet (parliament) today, that the Salvation Army must be placed under "proper regulations" for prevention of "espionage."

Hata said military authorities had started watching the organization's activities.

"Aside from questions of its dependency on Britain, or its religious beliefs," he said, "I believe that the Salvation Army must be placed under proper regulations in in order to prevent espionage."

Italian Protest To Be Given Cool Reception

LONDON, March 4—(CP).—Foreign Office circles indicated today Italy's protest against Britain's stoppage of German coal shipments would meet a cool reception here.

The Italian protest, against blockading German coal bound by sea to Italy, contained a statement that the British measure might "disturb and compromise" Italian-British political and commercial relations.

"It cannot be assumed that we can waive rights and international interests which are maintained under international law," one British source said.

It was reported in authoritative quarters that "the most rapid and careful consideration" would be given the Italian note, and that an effort would be made "to be as accommodating as possible."

Full German Apology Given Belgium For Plane Shot Down

BRUSSELS, March 4—(CP). — Germany presented a complete apology to-day for the killing of a Belgian army aviator in a clash between three Belgian planes and a German bomber on Saturday.

The Belgian foreign office said the German ambassador, Vicco Karl Von Buelow-Schwante, called on Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak and expressed "very sincere regrets."

German aviators have again been warned not to fly over neutral nations, it was reported. A German version of the Saturday incidents was that the pilot of the Dornier bomber thought he was over France and facing three allied fighting planes when he opened fire on the Belgians.

It was announced that Germany was prepared to examine any indemnity demand by the Belgian government.

LONDON, March 4 — (CP).—Two leading London newspapers today suggested changes may be necessary in Britain's war leadership, concurrently with reports of the first German aerial attack in the English channel.

A Heinkel bomber swoped on the 8,441-ton liner Domala with bombs and machine-gun fire, probably killing 108 persons—the heaviest toll aboard a merchantman since the Canada-bound Athenia was torpedoed with a death list of 113 on the first day of the war, Sept. 3.

The attack, the first by a German warplane west of the Straits of Dover, occurred about dawn Saturday, but it and other week-end attacks on British shipping became known amid widespread discussion over the course of the six-month-old war.

700 Canadians To Join 250 Finns Sail Shortly To Fight Russians

TORONTO, Mar. 4 — (CP). — Col. Fraser Hunter of Toronto announced to-day that a force of 700 Canadians, including many aviators, will join approximately 250 Finnish volunteers and leave for Finland in the near future.

Many details remain to be settled.

"We are now making arrangements to take advantage of Winston Churchill's offer to convoy all ships," said Col. Hunter, member of the Ontario Legislature for Toronto St. Patrick's. He said he was arranging the force as a private citizen.

"We can only take those who are willing to go in a spirit of high adventure," the Colonel added. "It will be a few weeks before they go. We only found out details of pay, equipment, and so on the other day.

"We can now make public appeals for volunteers. We cannot recruit Canadians, but we can advise them and assist them in transportation and other details. Our greatest fight now is against the impression that Finland cannot carry on much longer. So far as I can see she can hold out indefinitely if she gets a force of 30,000 men, and even without help she could hold out for many months.

"I expect even that the Royal Canadian Air Force will soon provide facilities of some kind to give advance training to Canadian fliers before they leave for Finland. Now that $20,000,000 has been granted to Finland by the United States, I think we in Canada should start some issue of Finnish bonds."

Col. Hunter, Liberal member of the Legislature, is working with Eino Lackstrom, chairman of the Finnish War Veterans' Association of Toronto, who has for some time been handling arrangements for all Finnish volunteers from Toronto and district.

Mr. Lackstrom said today that 250 Finnish-Canadians, exclusive of the Canadian volunteers, will be ready to sail later this month and that these will be joined by about 200 more from the United States.

He also revealed that about 12 men a day have been leaving for Finland for some time and will continue to do so until the main body goes.

Col. Hunter was a former member of the British army in India and served during the first great war. He had a distinguished military career. He has knowledge of 10 languages and has served in executive positions with many clubs, including several veterans' organizations.

Hannibal Wreck Found In Iran

NEW DELHI, March 4—(CP).—Imperial Airways announced today that wreckage of the Hannibal, its missing 42-passenger airliner, had been sighted by a searching plane along the coast of Iran (Persia), but that observers were unable immediately to learn the fate of its eight occupants.

Four passengers and four crew members were aboard the four-motored biplane which disappeared last Friday 20 minutes' flying time from the Persian Gulf port of Sarja on a flight there from Jiwani, Arabia.

Some hope was held that the occupants may have extricated themselves from the wreckage and started overland toward Jask, but searchers were unable to alight there on the rugged coast. The plane came down about two miles east of Ras-al-Kuh.

Marmora Youth At Aldershot On 17th Birthday

MARMORA, Mar. 4 (ENS).— To Bob Wright of Marmora goes the honor of being the youngest soldier from Canada now in the Canadian Active Service Forces. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wright of Marmora and celebrated his 17th birthday on Sunday, February 25 at Aldershot, England.

The boy's father is a veteran of the last Great War. The son had been attending school until a year ago, but showed little interest in military affairs until the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment started recruiting. He was one of the first to offer his services and enlisted at Madoc.

The recruiting officers must have followed Nelson's example of turning a blind eye when he gave his age as he did not look to be eighteen years old at the time. He developed rapidly in the unit, becoming several inches taller andd broadened out proportionately. He was six feet tall when the unit sailed overseas.

His mother objected to Bob going overseas at such an early age, but when he was given the option of

Fresh Divisions Seen Joining German Lines

PARIS, March 4 (AP)—French military dispatches reported fresh divisions were entering the German lines and mounting activity today on the western front.

Reichswehr reinforcements of "several" new divisions trained during the winter were said to be arriving behind the active front while aerial feints back and forth across it intensified over the week-end.

Other German units were reported moving into the region facing Switzerland.

The Germans simultaneously took the initiative in a series of week-end raids between the Rhine and Moselle rivers.

A German raiding party succeeded in taking several French prisoners after an attack yesterday on the edge of the Vosge mountains apparently in a search for information on French troop assignments.

The French countered with an ambush in the Wissembourg gap on the Eastern flank of the front where a German squad was trapped and several of its members captured.

52,000 Pamphlets Jail Girl, 2 Men

HAMILTON, Ont., March 4—(CP)—A total of 52,000 pamphlets containing material of an allegedly subversive nature and said to urge support of the Communist party in the approaching Federal election, were seized last night when Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrested two men and a woman.

In police court today, Grace Fugler, 24, Hamilton; Victor Guy, 37, and Robert Keays, 27, Toronto, were remanded one week on charges of breach of the Defence of Canada Regulations. They were taken into custody, police said, when an automobile containing the circulars was stopped on a Hamilton street.

The seizure was believed to be the largest made in Canada since the start of the war. The pamphlets were said to be similar to those seized at Ottawa last week when three men were arrested.

The charges against those arrested here read that they had in their possession documents likely or intended to prejudice recruiting, training, discipline or administration of any of His Majesty's forces.

Bail was set at two sureties of $2,000 each for each of the three accused. Assistant Crown Attorney Harvey McCulloch objected when the court suggested bail of $1,000 for each of the three and said that in Ottawa "where similar material was seized" the bail was $3,000 to $5,000.

Police said the largest pamphlets of those seized covered six pages of closely-typed matter. There was a concentration of R.C.M.P. in this district during the week-end and several officers were present when the car was stopped.

Finns Fling Russian Hordes Back In Battle On 3 Sides Of Viipuri

HELSINKI, March 4.—(AP)—The Finnish high command announced today that its forces, fighting invading Russians almost at the gates of Viipuri, had repelled attacks aimed at the city from three sides.

In addition the Finns reported fighting in the Arctic region far to the north, near Petsamo, and northeast of Lake Ladoga, where they said 1,200 Russians were killed.

The attacks against Viipuri were beaten back yesterday, according to the daily army communique, as the Russians attempted to advance across the ice of the Bay of Viipuri, at a second point between the bay and the Vuoski River and at a third point near Ayrapaa, a few miles farther to the northeast.

As the Russians continued to pour a heavy land fire into deserted Viipuri, the Soviet air force backed up the attack with an aerial onslaught.

Finns Do Some Bombing, Too

The Finns for their part said their own air force bombed "enemy columns and sites of assembly."

On the eastern flank of the Isthmus front the Finns reported heavy artillery exchanges in the Taipale sector, but made no mention of new Russian attacks. The communique mentioned "heavy" Russian losses in the fighting around Viipuri, but did not estimate the casualties.

In the far north, the Finns said, ther force had driven the Russians back about two miles from Nautsi, to which the spearhead of the Red army drive penetrated last week. Nautsi is about 60 miles southwest of Petsamo.

The communique said Russian war planes had been active yesterday, supporting ground troops on the Isthmus and bombing areas behind the front. Lappeenranta, about 30 miles northwest of Viipuri, was described as hardest hit.

The Finns said that so far as could be ascertained there had been no civilian casualties, and announced that four Russian planes had been shot down.

Yesterday the high command announced 1,000 Russians had been slain at Kollaa, northeast of Lake Ladoga, where their attacks were repulsed by artillery fire.

Plan To Cut City Off

MOSCOW, March 4.—(AP)—Red forces, closing in on Viipuri reported new advances to the north and south of the port city today and indicated its strategy would be to encircle it and sever supply lines before the knockout blow.

Two newly won positions were Tuppuransaari, a bay of Viipuri Island 15 miles to the south, and Saarela, a hamlet an undisclosed number of miles to the north, the Red Army announced.

On the island, the Reds reported capturing six fortifications, five of them iron and concrete forts with heavy coast defence guns in work-

Canuck Linesmen Show Their Stuff Pinch-Hitting In British Blizzard

ALDERSHOT, England, March 4. —(CP)—Officials of the Southern Railway Company have a special reason for regarding the Canadian soldiers as a "little bit of all right."

During the height of the recent blizzard which swept the country, the company's communications system was disrupted seriously. Snow, which later turned into freezing druzzle, brought one of the worst tie-ups in living memory. Poles and wires snapped under the accumulated weight of snow and ice several inches thick and although every available company repairman was rushed into action there was little hope of restoring services quickly without emergency aid.

For reasons of national security details of the storm's havoc and dislocation were withheld at the time. Censorship restrictions have now been lifted, services are again back to normal—an achievement in which a group of Canadians played a leading role.

In response to an urgent appeal for assistance, a party of 24 expert linesmen from 1st Canadian Divisional Signals, under Lieut. H. S. Hadwin, of London, Ont., was despatched to the scene.

Through raw, foggy weather, and biting, cold wind, they slogged through snow and ice for more than a week, leaving their camp in Aldershot at 5 o'clock every morning and working until dusk, putting up poles, cutting trees and stringing new wire. They took with them a sandwich lunch, often consumed around a brazier in the open or munched right on the job.

Every man in the gang was aware of the importance of his task. From long experience in Canada they knew the very life of some community might depend on the speed of their efforts and the mending of signal channels was urgent from the standpoint of vital deliveries.

Altogether, the Canadians restored more than 25 miles of disrupted communications, which brought enthusiastic tribute from M. D. Lucas, sub-inspector for the railway company and a letter of congratulations from the regional officials.

"I only wish I could keep such an efficient gang on my staff permanently," the inspector said to Lieut. Hadwin. "I have never seen more thorough and hard-working men. Really I don't know what we would have done without them."

Lieut. Hadwin accepted the tribute with a smile.

"It has been excellent practical training for the men," he said. "I know they have the experience

BERLIN, March 4—(AP).—The story of a forced landing within France's Maginot Line fortifications and two German fliers, one seriously wounded who made their way back to the German lines, was told in the high command's communique today.

The communique, which also cited minor patrol operations, follows:—

"Between the Saar River and the Palatinate Forest seven French soldiers and at another spot two Frenchmen were taken prisoners by a German scouting squad.

"The German Air Force during the night of March 2-3 continued reconnaissance activity against the English coast and Eastern France.

Find 100 Americans In First Division, Thousands Applying Says Ottawa

OTTAWA, March 4.—(CP)—From border to border and coast to coast young Americans have shown desire to engage in the fight against Nazilism by joining the Canadian armed services, it was learned today.

A good number already have joined, some of them signing up with units now training in the United Kingdom. Others, running into the thousands and representing every state in the American Union, have applied for enlistment.

After the first overseas division of the Canadian Active Service Force reached England it was reported about 100 Americans were members of the first contingent. They had enlisted as Canadians just as many did in the first Great War.

With recruiting now confined to enlistment reinforcements or specialists, young Americans who apply, along with young Canadians, must figure on their applications going on a waiting list. Many battalions keep waiting lists, it was said.

No definite figure of American enlistments is available because, under existing regulations, only British subjects, including those who have been naturalized, may be taken on strength of the Canadian armed forces.

However inquiries have been received from Americans as far off as New Mexico.

An American citizen may come to Canada as a tourist, gain a Canadian address and enlist as a Canadian and take the oath of allegiance. In the handling of enlistment applications he might not be questioned too closely.

Once enlisted, it was said, some Americans have revealed their nationality, but, having taken the oath of allegiance, their status was that of a soldier of the King without British citizenship.

Many women in the United States have applied to join the army nursing service.

In the case of Americans living in Canada prior to the outbreak of war, enlistment has been comparatively easy. They had a Canadian address and were able to satisfy recruiting officers' queries with ease.

Bulk of the applications from young Americans have been for enlistment in the Royal Canadian Air Force, where the effect of an order-in-council published in the Canada Gazette October 28, 1939, would seem to let the bars down completely so far as the air force reserve is concerned.

Last September this R.C.A.F. reserve was created and under the order-in-council those enlisting in the reserve were excepted from the

Liberals Attack Manion's National lead

(By the Canadian Press.)

Switching from defensive tactics to a more aggressive attack, government speakers during the week-end concentrated on an offensive against Conservative Leader Manion's National Government proposal.

During the first phase of the Dominion election campaign, Liberal cabinet ministers generally based their electoral appeals on outlines of the government's war record but there are signs now that National government will be fought more vigorously in the remaining three weeks. One week from today is official nomination day and the campaign will become much keener as the March 26 voting day approaches.

In Vancouver Saturday night, justice minister Lapointe said Canadians have a right to know just whom Dr. Manion proposes to include in his National government. They were not going to vote "for a number of ghosts."

"The collection of brains" which the Conservative leader says will make up his cabinet is "the darkest blackout of the war," the justice minister continued.

Canadians had a right to know just whom Dr. Manion proposed the purpose, the committee left provision of further funds to future action.

An argument as to whether Rear Admiral Richard Byrd would profit personally from the government-sponsored expedition took place in a house sub-committee hearing on funds for the venture, it was disclosed today.

Out For a Fortune?

Representative Jed Johnson, Oklahoma Democrat, told his colleague son the subcommittee he had evidence that Byrd, commanding officer of the expedition, was in line to "make a personal fortune."

"Has Admiral Byrd some advertising and radio contracts advertising cigarettes, tooth paste, perfumes, and other contracts from which he expects to make a fabulous sum of money out of this expedition?" Johnson asked Lieut.-Commander Robert English, executive secretary of the Antarctic service's executive committee.

"No, sir," replied English. "I am pleased to have the opportunity now to remove that impression from the minds of any of the committee members. That is not true."

English indicated to the subcommittee that the expedition would be maintained as long as Congress would permit.

waiting for a later unit he begged to be allowed to sail with his chums and his request was granted. His father favored this plan because he feared the boy might slip away and enlist with another unit, then his whereabouts might be unknown. Bob's older brother Bill Wright is also in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment now at Picton.

Recent news articles have indicated that the honor of being the youngest Canadian soldier with the C.A.S.F. belongs to Earl De Forge of Sault Ste. Marie. This boy joined the Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury Militia unit when he was sixteen. At the outbreak of war the regiment was called for civic guard duty, and a short time later this boy enlisted for active service with the Employment Battalion. A parcel addressed to his as the "youngest soldier in the Canuck Forces," brought the question of his age to the front. Pte. De Forge is older by several months than Marmora's young soldier, Bob Wright, and it is unlikely that there is another soldier from Canada in the C.A.S.F. who is as young.

ing order. At Saarela, the Russians said they took the fully equipped headquarters of a "large military formation" and four 75-millimetre guns.

The communique reporting the guns did not mention fighting in battered Viipuri itself, into which the Russians had said they battled their way Saturday, seizing the railway station and the surrounding southern end of the town.

Closing of the noose on Viipuri would compel the Finns to withdraw completely, or run the risk of siege without promise of reinforcements and supplies.

Charges Against Allies

The communique followed a fresh Moscow accusation that Great Britain and France are plotting to expand their war against Germany by entangling Russia.

Reviewing the first six months of the western European war, Pravda, Communist party newspaper, said:

"There is no doubt the British-French imperialists are eager to repeat 'the Finnish experiment' in the near East," an apparent reference to the reported concentration of 600,000 Allied troops there.

In a statement supplementing its daily communique, the Leningrad military headquarters claimed Finland is "approaching the end of the adventure" of the "Finnish white guards." The statement described the Finns as unwilling to fight for "hopeless cause."

It dismissed as "absurd" Finnish claims of major victories apparently referring to recent Finnish reports that the 18th Russian infantry division and the 34th Moscow Tank Brigade had been shattered.

Percy Farmer Lost Livestock WhenBarn Burnt

CAMPBELLFORD, March 4.—(ENS).—Fire swept a barn on the Wesley Remington farm in Percy township, seven miles west of here Friday. The blaze, which completely razed the building, was first noticed by a neighbor, Lee Isaac, at 4.30 in the afternoon. It was he who gave the alarm to Mrs. Remington who was alone in the house with her children at the time. Though the child had returned from school twenty minutes earlier he had failed to notice any smoke coming from the barn. Mr. Remington had been away since morning. The loss included 8 head of cattle, 4 horses, 6 pigs, a considerable amount of machinery and between three and four hundred bushels of grain. The building had been remodelled three years ago, according to Mr. Remington. A breeze from the east was all that saved the house, located about three hundred yards east of the building. Cause of the fire is not known. The loss is estimated at $3,000.

State police from all nearby stations were summoned to help the Shenandoah police force maintain order and patrol the endangered section.

Telephone service to Shenandoah from nearby communities in the anthracite section was disrupted.

After the confusion of the first scare, police said residents of the area might go back to their homes or carry out possessions—"if they wanted to."

The affected section includes almost a quarter of the town of 21,000 population. Damage was reported within a bloc of the intersection of Main and Centre streets —the heart of the town.

The ground began to settle and split open about 1 a.m., Alinsky reported. Seven hours later it was still sinking slowly.

Policemen, warned by loud rumblings, aroused residents and led them to safety.

Gas and water lines were broken as the ground sank around them and police ordered valves of pipes leading into the area closed.

"Some of the buildings were split in half," Chief Alinsky said. "In some houses, doors jammed so tightly that the people had to crawl out of windows to get away."

Many Are Weeping.

Alinsky ordered the section roped off and stationed guards. Hundreds of persons, many weeping, stood outside the guard ropes silently, watching the houses settle.

A steady downpour of rain which fell for the past 24 hours, added to the discomfort of those who fled their homes.

In addition to private residences, the area included the Junior and Senior High Schools, a hook and ladder fire hose, a hotel, a shirt factory, a packing plant and numerous smaller business places.

"The Senior High School building is cracking now," Alinsky reported at 8.30 a.m. He described the school as a two-storey brick structure and said huge cracks were appearing in various parts of the building.

The chief said the settling "probably would continue most of the day."

fight ensued between four Messerschmitt planes and 12 Morane craft. After one French plane was shot down the French evaded a further clash despite a three-fold supremacy.

"One German Heinkel reconnaissance plane after an air fight with three French chasers in the region of Metz, in the course whereof both motors failed, made a forced landing within the French fortification line.

"The crew burned the plane. Two of the crew, one of whom sustained a serious shot in the thigh, wormed their way back through French lines to German positions."

Three Officers Escape Car Drops 12 Feet

KINGSTON, March 4 (Special)—Three officers of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals escaped serious injury Sunday when their automobile struck the steel guard rail on the LaSalle Causeway, turned over and fell 12 feet to the solid ice.

Captains R. L. Huston, W. D. Wishart and W. G. Sherriff scrambled out of the machine with no other injuries than bruises.

So violent was the impact 5 feet of the steel railing was torn away. One of the large steel bars of the rail knifed through the radiator and stopped a few inches from where the three men were sitting.

Nazis Extend Front

Germany is reported extending her westwall defence line in modified form and the entire length of the Belgian and Dutch frontiers to the North Sea. Dotted line indicates old forts. Line of squares indicates the new fortifications, which would serve as hopping-off places if the Lowlands are invaded by the Nazis.

A broader German assault on two French advance posts in the Nied river sector near the centre of the front also was reported repulsed.

The French morning communique announced a "decided renewal of activity" on the front and intensified aerial operations.

More Day Activity.

The text of the communique, one of the largest in the six months of war, follows:

"A relatively quiet night on the whole.

"Two of our outposts east of the Moselle repelled a local attack.

"These last days have on the whole been marked by a decided renewal of activity on the part of contact units as well as patrols and reconnaissances on the entire front between the Rhine and the Moselle.

"During the day of March 3, numerous aerial flights took place in which two enemy pursuit planes were probably brought down. All our crews returned safely to their bases.

"A German reconnaissance plane was brought down by British aviation in the zone of our advance posts."

The aerial feints back and forth across the Western front, or outflanking it to the north, stressed the belligerents' anxious watching of each other for a hint of springtime tactics.

(The German communique yesterday acknowledged that two German scouting planes were missing, but said one French plane was shot down in a battle between four German planes and 12 French over the Moselle River sector. Three French craft were said to have been brought down in other encounters.

(Germany reported also that on Saturday "northeastern France as far as the Paris region was scouted," while Britons reported reaching Berlin Saturday night, the fifth such flight in six days).

Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State and President Roosevelt's special investigator, travelled today from Berlin, en route to Paris and London, by way of Lausanne, Switzerland, to continue his fact-finding, after having talked with Adolf Hitler and the Fuehrer's three senior aides. He is expected to reach Paris Thursday.

Havelock Father, Son Banquet Hears Leo Copp

HAVELOCK, March 4.—(ENS)—The special significance of "boys' work" in the present day and age was stressed by Guest Speaker Leo Copp, of the Peterborough Normal teaching staff, as he addressed a largely attended "fatherly and son" banquet, held Friday evening in the Havelock United Church basement. The banquet was sponsored by the "Firebrands" group, Trail Rangers, under the direction of their mentor, Mr. Foy Wright, and served by the members of the Women's Association, shortly after 7 p.m. o'clock.

W. D. Duncan, public school principal, officiated as chairman and toastmaster for the program which followed the sumptuous supper. The toast to the King was proposed by Reeve Ernest Seeney and responded to by singing the National Anthem. Chief Ranger Elton Bannon proposed the toast to Canada, which was replied to with "O Canada."

Other toasts included: to the fathers, proposed by Chief Ranger Trevor Pollock and replied to by R. W. Goheen, high school principal; to the sons, by Mrs. A. C. Denike, responded to by Tally Glenn Price; to the church, by Jim Watson; reply, Rev. R. E. Lemon of St. John's Anglican church; to the teachers and leaders, George Rigby; reply, D. C. Drinkwalter; to boys' work, by Mento Foy Wright; reply, Leo. Copp; to the hostesses and visitors, by Cache Walter Nobes; replies, Mrs. T. Easterbrook and John Ruttan. Rev. A. McLauchlin also addressed the gathering.

Musical items were contributed to the interesting program by Wallace and Wayne Young and Ross Goheen. Piano accompanist for the community singing was Maurice Williams.

24-Hour Drizzle Soaks Ontario

TORONTO, March 4. —(CP)— A 22-hour drizzling rain which began about 9.45 a.m. yesterday made Sunday a bleak and miserable day all over Southern Ontario. Sleet made walking difficult and motorists ran into a multitude of difficulties with traction and visibility badly impaired.

Rain and ice formation washed out all air schedules in and out of Toronto and the air "blackout" was still in force today and will remain so until weather improves.

Rainfall wasn't heavy, but the drizzle was driven before a 20 to 23-mile east wind all yesterday. In Toronto the rain didn't let up until about 7.15 a.m. today.

Kingston had the heaviest rainfall, two-thirds of an inch. Toronto and the rest of the area affected had around .42 of an inch. All day the temperature here hovered just above freezing.

In Georgian Bay and in Eastern Ontario there was a mixture of rain and snow.

Colder weather is to replace the comparatively mild spell by tonight, though it will continue cloudy with light rain most of today. Tuesday is to bring a little colder weather with light snowflurries.

Art Gallery For Peterborough Is Hope Of Katherine Wallis

Hope that Peterborough would one day possess a large share of her works of sculpture and that it would constitute the nucleus of an art gallery was expressed by Miss Katherine Wallis, a daughter of Peterborough who has won fame in Europe as a sculptress, in addressing the members of the Peterborough Rotary Club at the weekly luncheon today.

Miss Wallis, the only Canadian who has been honored by membership in the Societe Nationale des Beaux Artes, Paris gave a delightful chat upon her family history, her work in Europe and finally upon some of her experiences since the outbreak of war.

She was introduced by Rotarian Dr. H. R. H. Kenner who referred to the fact that her father had been one of the pioneers in Peterborough county, living on the Wallis farm which was then called Merino because Miss Wallis' father had been the first to import merino sheep into Canada. The speaker referred to the fame Miss Wallis had won as a sculptress and artist in Paris and to the fact that some of her work was to be seen at the Public Library and in the library of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute.

Triumph For Canada.

Miss Wallis in acknowledging the introduction said that the plaster cast of one of her major works was in Peterborough while the stone statue was in Toronto. "I would much rather have it in Peterborough" she said as she went on to point out that she regarded the recognition she had gained in Paris as a triumph for Canada rather than for herself.

The speaker told of some of her adventures since she arrived back in Paris from a visit to America on the day war was declared, how she had to get out of Paris in a hurry, leaving her possessions to be shipped and how she finally arrived at the home of her sister in Somersetshire in England.

"The blackout that has prevailed since the beginning of the war," she said has been terribly depressing and very dangerous. In the winter months it began as early as 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon and the accidents and deaths that has resulted have been terrible."

Miss Wallis described the ice storm that struck England late in January just the night before she was to leave for Liverpool to take boat for America. Huge elm trees were borne down like nine-pins by the weight of ice, every telegraph pole was down and wires were strewn everywhere. The train on which she travelled from Bristol to Liverpool had been four and one-half hours late because every signal box was out of order because of the storm.

Despite very rough weather the voyage to America had not been bad, she said, although no lights could be shown and it was forbidden to open a port hole and let in some air. American customs officials had treated the travellers with every kindness when they reached New York, informing them that they knew what the passengers had been through and were eager to help.

Remarking that she was going to California to live Miss Wallis expressed the hope that she might have the privilege of doing something to promote a better understanding between the American people and the British. It was essential to the self-preservation of both, she said, that they should stand together in the battle of democracy against the common menace.

Speaking of her experiences in Paris, Miss Wallis expressed gratitude for the assistance she had been given by some of the most famous artists of her time.

Rotarian T. A. Mackay expressed thanks to the speaker, and in passing on the vote of thanks President E. L. Sackville said that Miss Wallis' talk had shown what the people of England were going through and the necessity of Canadians doing everything they could to help.

In acknowledging the thanks Miss Wallis said that it was vital that the people of England and France should be backed up in their struggle. France was fighting with her back to the wall, threatened with invasion again. "The French people are united like one man, however," she said. "Don't let anyone tell you anything different."

Welsh Society Attends Service At St. George's

St. David's Welsh Society attended Divine service in St. George's Anglican Church on Sunday evening, continuing an annual practice of the Society since its organization in Peterborough.

The rector, Rev. T. H. Floyd, extended greetings to members and their president, Mrs. G. Pakenham. Mr. Morris Parry, vice-president, read the second lesson. The life of St. David, the Patron Saint of Wales, was outlined by Rev. Floyd, who spoke also of the natural love of song that is in every Welshman, and of the Welsh speech, which is a distinct and separate language from the English. Several Welsh hymns were sung, and following the offertory Welsh Society members sang the Welsh National Anthem in their native tongue.

Following the service, Society members were guests of the choir during a social hour when refreshments were served. The appreciation of the Society for their welcome to the church was expressed by Mrs. Pakenham, president.

Orpheus Music Club Plans Essay Contest

The rules of an essay contest were outlined by Miss M. Rome at a meeting of the Orpheus Music Club, held at the home of Miss Eleanor Chapman, London Street. Subjects were chosen for the contest, in which two classes will take part. The essays will be judged by one who is prominent in young people's work, and prizes will be donated by Mr. Noel Duranceau, who presented music pins to Club members last season. A paper on the life of Stephen Foster, American composer, was given by Beatrice Fairbairn, and Miss Barbara Grey conducted a quiz contest. Musical numbers included piano solos by Miss Patricia Watson, who played Haydn's "Gypsy Rondo," and Miss Edna Wilson, who played "Sonatina" by Kullan. Prizes were also presented for several interesting games.

A bowl of shamrocks and green candles in black holders were used on the lace-covered tea table, from which dainty refreshments were served.

Lacy-Pattern Doilies a Pleasure to Weave

Loom Is a Circle of Cardboard

Delightful—a luncheon set of these lacy, hand-woven doilies! And you'll enjoy weaving them yourself.

To make your loom, cut 16 notches on a circle of cardboard—a 17th notch between any two.

Begin warp by pasting an end of cotton thread to centre of circle. Now draw thread through a notch and carry it around through the adjacent notch. Then draw thread straight across loom and through another two notches. Wind through all notches this way.

To weave, thread loose end of cotton through a needle and, starting at the centre, go over and under warp threads. After a few rows, begin the lacy pattern—weaving back and forth for several rows on the same few warp threads. Now skip diagonally across the adjacent threads, as our diagram shows, and begin weaving on the next group of threads. And so on around the circle.

Fun to weave other lovely things, too—a gay pillow top on a dishcloth base, a cellophane evening bag on a breadboard loom.

Our 32-page booklet gives complete instructions for these and many other attractive articles for home and personal use—among them scarves, belts, afghans, rag rugs, chairback sets.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO WEAVE USEFUL NOVELTIES to Home Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

An Ice Gal From South Africa

Edwina Blades (appropriate name for a skating star), one of the charmers who are entertaining the Gotham peasants at Madison Square Garden in the European ice revue, takes time out to lace up her skates during rehearsal. Miss Blades hails from South Africa, where the only ice is found in refrigerators and highballs.

Mary H. Comstock Becomes Bride Of A. S. Mervin

In St. John's Anglican Church, against a background of pink snapdragon and fern, the marriage took place at one o'clock on Saturday afternoon of Miss Mary Helen Comstock, daughter of Mrs. Comstock, 211 Sherbrooke street, and the later William Comstock, and Mr. Alexander Stuart Mervin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mervin, Monaghan Road. Canon W. P. Robertson officiated, and the wedding music was played by F. G. Mann, L.Mus.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Maxwell Comstock, wore a graceful Schiaparelli model of Bermuda blue French crepe, designed with fitted bodice, long sleeves, and full flowing skirt. Her hat was of Britannia blue straw and she wore a corsage of pink roses and blue forget-me-nots. Mrs. Wilfred Preston of Kingston, formerly of Peterborough, matron of honor, was in a period gown of pointe d'esprit with touches of turquoise velvet ribbon. Her flower hat was of a matching shade, and she carried a muff of sweet peas. Mr. Jack Mervin was groomsman for his brother.

At the reception afterwards, held at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Comstock received in a suit of navy French crepe with hat of matching straw, and corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Mervin, mother of the groom, wore a gown of grey French crepe, with flower hat of navy and dubonnet, and corsage of dark pink roses.

The bridal couple left on a motor trip, and will live in Toronto.

Pastel Shades Lead Wall-Paper

Twenty wall paper panels, four feet by eight, placed on the walls of Coleman's store on George above Brock clearly show what the housewives can choose for their 1940 decoration schemes.

A wall paper exhibition is in progress at the store all this week, and a visit to the shop revealed that stripes and two tone patterns, almost all in pastel shades top the list in popularity this year. Color styling, a plan that tells a person the colors to use on ceiling, walls and baseboards is gaining in demand, and few people now follow the old style of buying wall paper and forgetting the rest of the general color scheme. Wallpapers are also being shown on large stands, and to better illustrate the beauty that may be obtained from different arrangements, drapes to correspond to different papers are being used.

Valuable draw prizes will be given on Saturday night, and everyone who clips the Coleman coupon from Saturday's paper is eligible to win.

DOROTHY DIX

Man Expects His Wife To Be a Paradox of Nature. His First Interest in Woman Is Her Looks. Then He Demands Millennium.

There is nothing of which men are more firmly convinced than that they cannot abide brainy women. To them, in theory at least, a clever woman is anathema, and for a girl to have the reputation of being a highbrow is a greater handicap to her popularity than for her to be the heroine of a scandal. The first question that any man ever asks about a strange woman is about her looks. Is she pretty? He never inquires whether she is intelligent or not. And no mother trying to launch a debutante daughter would ever dream of bragging about Mame's record at school. On the contrary, she would shush it up as much as possible and discourse loud and long about Mamie's profile and what a good dancer she was. That men still cling to the superstition that they don't want clever women for wives is amply proved by the fact that statistics show that the Dumb Doras have nearly twice the chance of getting husbands as the intelligentsia have. And yet:

Every man wants his wife to be a companion to him. He wants her to have enough education and culture to be able to talk interestingly. He wants her to read the Books that he does and keep up with the papers and magazines and to know what is going on in the world. He wants to be proud of her when he takes her out among his friends.

He wants her to interest him and amuse him, and to know what he is talking about when he tries to explain his hopes and plans to her. And, if she isn't, if she is dull and stupid and tiresome, he is mighty apt to leave her for some more sprightly lady.

He wants a wife who is as good a financier as any banker. He wants a wife who will know how to pinch the pennies and get a hundred and twenty-five cents out of every dollar, because he knows that whether a man is sitting pretty on Easy Street in his middle age or wallowing in debt up to his neck, depends, as a general thing, upon whether his wife was money-wise or a silly little spendthrift.

He expects his wife to rear his children and develop them into fine men and women. He expects her to be enough of a doctor to look after their health and keep them well and hardy; enough of a dietician to feed them properly; enough of an Emily Post to form their manners; enough of a judge to hold a strong hand over them and keep them in the strait and narrow way. He knows that a mother molds her children's characters and he would hate to turn his youngsters over to a fond fool who would wreck their lives before they fairly began.

Every man wants a wife who is a philosopher. He wants a wife who can rationalize marriage and balance its gains and losses and strike a good working average. He wants a wife who knows that no situation on earth is absolutely perfect and who won't expect marriage to be the exception to the universal rule. He wants a wife who won't weep and wail over every hardship; who won't expect a busy man to tell her every day how beautiful and wonderful she is and how much he loves her, and who won't have hysterics every time he is late for dinner.

He wants a wife who can take

We Noticed

....After you slipped and slid your way to work this morning over annoying, frozen sidewalks, did you find yourself arriving at the office in a depressed, unhappy mood typical of Monday mornings—particularly a morning when the sun should be giving a prognostication of Spring instead of hiding behind several layers of sleet-laden clouds?

....Colors that run the gamut of flower-garden colors, accessories to match or contrast, and styles that will make any figure or type look smart or glamorous, are to be on parade in the Green Room during the Spring fashion tea of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E. If you can't get away until five, the second show will just be starting — we'll guarantee you'll find no hint of grey weather in such an atmosphere, and that your spirits will be given an automatic lift in contemplating the choice you'll have in selecting your Spring ensemble!

FASHIONS

Your suit is the most important item of your Spring wardrobe, so be sure to select yours with care, and an eye to figure-flattery and style interest. This classic design carries out the traditionally correct lines of a tailored suit, at the same time adding this year's features—a longer jacket, pockets just above the hips, and wide lapels. You may make it of one material to give you added height, or contrast skirt and jacket if you are tall enough already. You can make the jacket of plaid with skirt plain to emphasize your chest and shoulders, or if your hips are too narrow, reverse the process.

Style No. 3183 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 54-inch material.

Something Wrong

Col. George Drew delivered a radio address in the election campaign over a network of Ontario stations. Previously he submitted a copy of his speech to the radio station with the request that such steps as were necessary should be taken to show him just what he would be allowed to say.

The copy of the address was censored and Mr. Drew observed the markings of the censor and delivered his address accordingly. After he had concluded that he attended another meeting being held in the interests of a National candidate and read to that meeting in a public hall the portions which he was not allowed to state over the radio. Of course that was unusual, and it became news. It went on the wires and was offered to all newspapers which cared to publish it.

The first paragraph Mr. Drew read was directed toward Prime Minister King this way: "On your shoulders rests the full responsibility for the fact that our defence forces have practically no modern weapons of any kind."

There were others but we give that for an example. He could not say that in a radio address, but the Conservative leader in Ontario could go shortly after and repeat it in a public hall where all present could hear it.

Our contention is that regulations of that sort do not make sense. A statement which is wrong on the radio is also wrong on a public platform or in a newspaper. If it is wrong then it stays wrong all the way through no matter where it is made.

People who are writing in newspapers every working day of the week have no censor looking over their copy. They have, though, the general idea of sound and sane censorship before them all the time. They know too that their paper can be held responsible for what they put in it. Also they have the advantage of years of experience and training. But in the end they are responsible and they know it.

It would be better for those in authority to iron out some of the present regulations because the one-night's adventure of Col. Drew shows plainly something is wrong. He said things publicly in a hall which had been scored out as not fit to use on the radio, and that doesn't add up and give the right answer.

Mr. Welles Finds Out

Sumner Welles, the delegate named by President Roosevelt to go to Europe and secure information about peace prospects, has been in Berlin. When he met Von Ribbentrop he probably heard all there was to be heard. When he met Hitler he would hear the same thing over again. Because he met three people, Ribbentrop, Hitler and Goering, would not mean he would have three reports. Just the one report stated three ways.

Probably Mr. Welles will put his actual reports in his grip and say little or nothing about them, but meantime there is sufficient known to indicate that the German mind is not inclined toward peace. It is bent toward conquest and war, and the purpose of the war is to smash Britain; to do away with the influence and power of that Empire and its control of the Suez and the Mediterranean. Germany insists on freedom of the seas, insists that British power be removed from Europe, and toward this end Germany will fight.

And that is just about the answer which could have been expected. Freedom of the seas according to German interpretation would mean control of the seas by Germany—Germany of the submarines and the scattered mines.

Removal of British influence would mean more and easier conquests of Austria, Czechoslovakia and Poland. It would mean a goosestepping Europe with Berlin as the centre. It would mean greater freedom to plot and scheme with a Stalin, and it would point with unerring certainty toward the day when there would not be a nation in Europe, small or great, which would not pay tribute to Hitler.

Mr. Welles may gather a good deal of information; we hope he does. Back of it all though he will have to put the attitude of Germany as one in which there is no peace and in which there can be no peace—not even for United States.

How Much Aid?

Plans for advancing a $20,000,000 credit to Finland have been advanced to the stage of completion in United States. The Finnish Minister in Washington expressed his gratitude for the assistance and said his country was far from being beaten.

The 20 millions, under the terms of the loan, can be spent only in United States, and will probably be used for oil, gasoline, wheat, lard and corn. None of the money can be used for purchasing implements of war.

Finland is at war with Russia, and on the surface it might appear that United States is doing a generous thing to aid the Finns by advancing them a credit of $20,000,000, and at the same time stipulating that the money must be spent in United States and also telling the hard-pressed Finns they cannot buy war implements.

A great deal of the gasoline used by Russia to send planes to blast Finland was sold by United States. From the States the same Russians have been buying metals used for war machines, and the buying has been going on in increasingly large quantities.

So it is pretty much open to question how much United States is actually aiding Finland.

When The Welsh Gather

The Welsh folk of Peterborough gathered together on the evening of March 1. That feeling of one common birthplace is a strong force; it draws people together and seems to keep them together. Many of these people have been living for years in Peterborough; they have their homes here and their circle of friends in this new country, but that does not crowd out the memory that they were born in Wales.

There was something in the cables on March 1 about a little ceremony which a Welsh battalion was having in France at the noon hour, and it was recorded that the youngest member of the company, as part of the ceremony, had eaten a leek. That will require a little explanation, as the eating of the leek is not part of St. David's Day celebration.

The trouble is in finding sufficient which is actually correct about St. David, the patron saint of the Welsh. The claim is he was born in Glamorganshire, and was some way related to King Arthur, he of the "Round Table." Historians who have reached as far as possible into the past make him either 47 or 115 years of age at the time of his departure.

The St. David tradition is closely allied with the leek. It came about during one of the battles between the Welsh and invading Saxons. Uniforms were not of present-day pattern, and it was difficult to tell defender from attacker, and St. David it was who caused the Welsh to wear leeks in their caps so they would not be attacking each other. We can find no record of eating leeks as having become a matter of national significance.

But the Welsh folk have a merry time when they gather together. They sing their national song in the native tongue and the outsider with only a Sassenach understanding and language is left a trifle bewildered.

Naturally at such gatherings one looks for typical Welsh names, Davies, Morgan and so on, and the Peterborough gathering achieved something close to notoriety by the claim of Rev. G. Kelly of Lakefield that he was indeed a Welshman. What's more this accomplished gentleman proved it, named the exact spot where he had been born and was also able to pronounce it. When one looks at some of the Welsh place names it is easy to realize what accomplishment it is to pronounce them so that other Welsh folk will not be moved to laughter. The length of them is probably the reason for having 27 letters in the Welsh alphabet.

Welsh songs are given a musical vehicle which is distinctive. One might say weird in spots, militant in many instances and yet they are such that challenge participants to patriotic participation. But we admit that after considerable searching, and after attending a gathering with the Welsh folk we are still somewhat in the dark regarding St. David. Had there been good reporters in existence in his day no doubt his history and the record of his missionary and battle exploits would be more fully revealed.

No New Paper In 40 Years

There was a pleasant and apparently capable young man in this office a few days ago, and he had been with the Regina Daily Star, a paper which recently suspended publication. There were 68 on the staff, including 15 in the editorial department. The young man was "looking around" because he desired to get placed as soon as possible. As far as he knew none of the staff members had so far secured new positions.

This most recent newspaper failure was the point on which the Sydney Post-Record based an interesting if not an entirely comforting article. It recalled that the Regina Star had started in 1928 and so had lasted 12 years. From there its investigation came to the point of declaring there is not one English-speaking daily paper in Canada which was not in existence at the turn of the century, and that is 40 years ago. The one exception which might be urged is the Morning News-Herald of Vancouver, and it is actually the successor of a paper which had previously found the going too hard.

In that period of 40 years there have been amalgamations and failures. Almost without exception all the small cities of the province supported two papers. Today but one. Toronto had in the morning field the Globe, Mail and Empire and the World, and in the afternoon the Telegram, Star and News—six daily papers. Now there are three. Hamilton at one time had the Spectator, Herald, Times and the Post, but now it has the Spectator only.

While that thinning-out process has been going on there have been no newspapers starting and surviving. In several places across the Dominion a start has been made, but it was accompanied by the cross entry of a subsequent failure. Not a new English-speaking newspaper successfully launched and maintained in 40 years! That goes back to the time when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in the early years of his regime at Ottawa, and when Hon. G. W. Ross was premier of Ontario.

And in that 40-year period the Dominion has seen remarkable developments. Peterborough 40 years ago was a place of less than 14,000; today it is 25,000. The progress of this city is similar to the progress of others. Within those 40 years new industries have been established and existing ones have expanded. The entire automotive industry has come into existence with its wide range of garages, service stations and dealers' headquarters. There are people in business who have started in recent years and they have succeeded. And yet in all that period there has not been one English-language paper started in Canada which has continued until the present.

Papers today are published under a system where costs are driven to heights which were unheard of 40 years ago. At that time the amount of telegraph or cable copy being received was relatively small. Today it is positively large and it is correspondingly expensive. The newspaper in the daily field at the moment, no matter where published, must have equipment which 40 years ago was restricted to the larger cities.

Often enough we have heard it stated that newspapers are subsidized in some mysterious manner and that they are willing to throw their support to those from whom they receive the subsidy. That one startling fact that while there have been dozen of papers going out of business there has not been one successfully launched in the last 40 years is about as effective an answer as can be supplied to the subsidy talk.

ROMANCE

¶ When Rosie was a sweet eighteen, her view on husbands was quite keen, she knew the kind she'd take; he must stand six feet in his socks, have muscles hard as native rocks, and have a goodly stake.

¶ At twenty she was more pronounced, and suitors three she then had bounced, she raised the ante then; her husband must have curly hair, be headed toward a millionaire, rank with outstanding men.

¶ At twenty-two she had not wed, still held convictions in her head, of prospects turned down two; and they were rated good and sound, about as good as could be found, but still they would not do.

¶ At twenty-four she walked alone, nor had she prospects of her home, her head was still held high; the man she'd take had not applied, she passed two fair ones in her stride, high hope was in her eye.

¶ When Rosie came to twenty-six, she feared that she was in a fix, no millionaire in sight; no six-foot chap with golden hair, but some whose thatch was getting bare, she thought might be all right.

¶ At twenty-eight she got her man, bow-legged and with a homely pan, he has no wealth in store; but Rosie grabbed him when he came, upon one side he's rather lame—but she could wait no more.

Cannot Find Hope For Peace In Europe Now

T. R. YBARRA, the noted commentator of foreign matters, in an article in the New York Sun concludes that it looks like a long war. In their speeches of last Saturday in Birmingham and Munich, Prime Minister Chamberlain and Fuehrer Hitler were as far apart mentally as the north and south poles are geographically.

If there is any considerable element in Britain or France that wants, at this stage, peace without victory, Chamberlain's remarks give no hint of it.

His words were as truculent as any of their predecessors. Those of Chamberlain breathed a firmness and determination surpassing, in some ways, anything he has ever said before. If there is the slightest reason for believing that things in Europe will get better before they get worse, neither the steersman of Downing Street nor the autocrat of the Wilhelmstrasse permitted the least inkling of such a thing to peep forth from their grim utterances.

In the matter of war aims, the divergence between the Briton and the Teuton is no mere rift. It is an abyss of terrifying breadth and depth. Reading their speeches, one seems to smell the smoke of many battles still interposed between the cruel realities of the present and the roseate hopes of better tomorrows.

Chamberlain again states, with the absolute ring of conviction, that, before there is a chance of peace Germany must restore freedom to Czechoslovakia and Poland. He states categorically that the main German goals in this war are the military destruction of the entire world. He says in unmistakable terms that there can be no question of peace negotiations until Germany has rid herself of Hitler and the whole Nazi mentality.

That thought is behind sentence after sentence in his speech. "Under the present Government of Germany there can be no security for the future." "Germany's rulers have repeatedly shown that they cannot be trusted to keep their words to foreign Governments nor even to their own people." "It is for Germany to take the next step." If the man who said those things still harbors the vaguest hope of negotiating peace with the man who betrayed him at Godesberg and Munich he is the most consummate political actor of his era.

BRITAIN'S Prime Minister speaks of the strength of his country's alliances in terms whose meaning, if they mean anything, is that big matters are brewing military behind the British-French lines.

Britain and France, he declares, are bound together more closely than ever. Turkey is falling into step beside them. The dominions and colonies of the British Empire stand shoulder to shoulder with the mother country.

Against all this, Hitler breathes furious challenge:

"We Germans lay no claim to world domination." "We ask only to be left alone in the space that we must have in order to live." "The influence of England has not been perceptible in Central Europe. Central Europe has been built up by Germany and we will suffer no threats to this, our Lebensraum."

That certainly give no hint of any willingness to relinquish Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, so ruthlessly annexed within the year to the Nazi Reich.

Hitler, too, thinks highly of those helping him. To Russia, he insists, Germany is bound by a complete understanding. "We are travelling along parallel lines with Italy," he adds. And Japan, according to him, is a friendly neutral, "not on the side of our enemies." In a final ferocious outburst of uncompromising hostility to those arrayed against him, he shouts "God did not create the world for England alone!"

Does all this mask uneasiness and apprehension, even incipient panic? Possibly. Does Chamberlain's word camouflage eventual willingness to compromise? Maybe. But no matter whether unspoken implications lie behind the spoken word on the German or British side, the only point I wish to make is this: the odds seem dead against any gathering, around a green table, of negotiators with the slightest chance of coming to an understanding, until more campaigns have been launched, more battles joined. It looks like a long war.

NO SUPERMAN

GREAT men, like the moon, require distance for enchantment. Mr. Chamberlain is always at his surest when dealing with the suggested appointment of a superman. You will recall Maeterlinck's exquisite moment in "The Blue Bird" when he cries: "There are no dead!" Mr. Chamberlain is almost as moving when he cries: "There are no great!" He has seen Mussolini, Ciano, Daladier, Hitler and Ribbentrop. Not one of them has shifted from him the firm conviction that the superman exists only in the mind of the young or the deluded.

Mr. Chamberlain has no doubts of his own usefulness as Prime Minister, but he does not regard himself as an immortal. Bonar Law shared this distrust of men blown up beyond the normal size. When he drove to Westminster for the first time as leader of the Conservative Party his companion urged him to remember that he was now a great man. "If that is so," said Bonar Law, "then all the great men of history are frauds."

Therefore Mr. Chamberlain refused to appoint an economic superman to the Cabinet, and his followers endorsed his decision.—Atticus, in Financial Post.

• "Gott Mitt Uns" Once Again

WE HEARD a lot during the last war about "Gott mit uns." The Kaiser was fond of saying "God is with us." His successor as Supreme War Lord, Adolf Hitler, has not had much use for God and Christianity. He has cracked down hard on pastors an churches unless the pastors and the parishioners put Hitler and the Nazi policies first. In the Fatherland, in Czecho-Slovakia and in Poland he has "liquidated" a great number of Christians and churches.

But on Saturday night at Munich he suddenly announced a new interest in God. Perhaps it was because he finds that he has, without the guidance of God and Christian principles, got Germany and himself into a mess from which he is feverishly seeking a way out. Perhaps he spoke in the mood of the devil, who, when sick, a monk would be. Said the Fuehrer:

"Do you think Providence would have blessed us only to drop us now? There is a God—He creates people with equal rights."

Ah, yes, God creates people with equal rights. But the Fuehrer takes those rights away. Has he not destroyed the freedom of the Jews, the freedom of the Czecho-Slovakians, the freedom of the Poles, and is he not a party to the taking away of the freedom of the Finns by his anti-Christian Bolshevist partners in crime? Has he not ordered thousands of civilians to be shot, beaten to death, maimed, starved, thrown into concentration camps and prisons that exceed the worst horrors of the Inquisition? Is he not planning to do the same to other people—if he wins, God created those people meaning that they should have an equal chance to live, too.

Apart from his awkward interest in God, there was nothing new in Hitler's speech. Still more living room; return of the German colonies, etc. Most of his speeches of the past twelve months could have been kept standing in type and used again. They would still have represented what he said on Saturday. He was on the defensive as regards why he forced war on his unwilling people. There was a note of whining in his address; of the injured and misunderstood innocent.

But there is one aspect of the case against him to which he never replies. That is Premier Chamberlain's reiterated statement that the Allies will consider peace proposals as soon as a regime is established in Germany which can be relied upon to keep its word. Hitler, as the prime minister said on Saturday, does not keep his word to anybody—not even his own people. That is the crux of Hitlerism. That is where Hitler is vulnerable. If Hitler had the courage to step out, taking his associates with him, people might be negotiated and the whole war called off. He knows that, but he has not the moral courage to do it. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

• German Leaders Are Wealthy

HITLER delights in representing himself as a man of the people fighting the battles of the masses so that they can find a place in the sun, secure enough to eat and enjoy a few modest pleasures. He screeches loudest when he tells what he is doing for the "poor German people."

Let us see what the "poor German people" are doing for Hitler.

The statement is made on authority which has not been disputed that Hitler's annual income approximates the equivalent of a million dollars made up as follows: Salary as president of the Reich, $80,000; personal entertainment expenses, $85,000; personal out-of-pocket expenses as chancellor, $15,000; salary as a member of the Reichstag, $3,000; income as leader of the National Socialist party, $15,000; royalties from sales of Mein Kampf, $370,000; royalties on other published material, $102,000; dividends from "Volkischer Beobachter," $80,000.

And so it will be seen that Hitler is doing not so badly from a personal financial standpoint in his Dictator job.

As for Herr Goering, his income last year is estimated at a sum in the neighborhood of half a million dollars, its sources being in part as follows: Field marshal's salary, $50,000; personal entertainment expenses as field marshal, $75,000; income as premier of Prussia, $11,500; personal out-of-pocket expenses, $15,000; air minister's salary, $11,500; income as member of Reichstag, $3,000; entertainment allowance as president of Reichstag, $1,000; income as president of state council, $5,000; income as chief of four-year plan, $37,500; out-of-pocket expenses as air minister, $830; dividends from industrial shares in B. M. W. Motors and Junkers and Benz Motor Company, $385,000.

No wonder these two War Lords are anxious for the German people to continue this war, in the hope that something may turn the tide towards Nazi victory. They've got a lot at stake.—Chatham News.

• Australia Sees Our Election

ALREADY the First Division of the Canadian Active Service Force has arrived in England, and a second division is well under way. Canadian ships are prosecuting the war at sea, and a program of naval construction has been undertaken. Substantial supplies of munitions are being produced for the Allies, and the Canadian war loan of 200 million dollars was promptly oversubscribed.

Most important of all, perhaps, Canada is being transformed into a vast training area for the Empire Air Scheme. The most striking feature of the impending election is that it will be fought, not on any domestic controversy or on the question of whether Canada should actively participate in the war, but on the issue of whether or not the Government is prosecuting the struggle with the utmost vigour of which the nation is capable.

It will be, in effect, a competition in patriotism between the Liberals and Conservatives, each party seeking to persuade the people that it can conduct the national war effort most effectively.

This demonstration of the national determination to fight with Britain and France is the more significant in that it comes from a Dominion which cherishes its independence most jealously, and which, under President Roosevelt's explicit extension of the Monroe Doctrine to shield Canada, stands in the least fear of invasion among all the British Dominions.

It combines with the amazing victory of the Liberals over the Isolationist Duplessis in the Quebec elections of last October to give an unmistakable declaration of Canada's loyalty, and of the belief of the whole Canadian nation in the justice of the Allied cause.—Sydney Herald.

Blow To Liberty Says Manion Of Day Session

BELLEVILLE, Ont., March 4. — (CP).—If Prime Minister Mackenzie King can dissolve parliament to suit his own political purposes, it might be closed for some other reason next time or even be closed permanently—unless the people of Canada declare themselves definitely against that sort of thing, Conservative Leader Manion warns.

"I don't think this country wants Mackenzie King or me or anybody else to do away with the liberties which go without parliamentary institutions," he said here Saturday night before 1,200 people who jammed the Collegiate auditorium.

"Both French-speaking and English-speaking Canadians believe in those liberties and we are not going to give them up unless our lives are taken first."

From here, Dr. Manion went to Ottawa where he will rest until Wednesday, when he begins a swing through the Maritimes and Quebec, starting at Sherbrooke Wednesday night.

The Conservative leader laid three issues before his audience for consideration in this election—the record of the government in peace and war, the supremacy of parliament and the formation of a National government to carry on Canada's part in the war and to deal with post-war problems.

Positive action would be necessary to provide youth with a square deal, he submitted. The country's youth were its finest resource, without which its other resources were not worth much.

"Mr. King has shown no signs of appreciating that. He has done nothing," Dr. Manion said. The Toronto Youth Council had estimated there were 400,000 youths in Canada who had never worked, a state of affairs which could not be permitted to continue long. Plans had to be made for the future.

Flood Control Plans

Among numerous post-war proposals, he included flood control projects. At the cost of one flood works could be constructed to prevent flood damage for all time.

He advocated a revised tariff policy for Canada to protect the home market for Canada's farmers and Canadian industry. That would not mean increased prices, though, he said. If advantage was taken of a tariff in that direction, consideration should be given to removing the protection.

In 1930 the Bennett government had increased tariffs only after it obtained assurances from industry that if such protection were given, prices would not be increased—and only one manufacturer went back on his word.

The farmer, as well as industry, needed protection, Dr. Manion held. He felt that Canadians could well wait for Canadian Strawberries to come in season, for instance, instead of buying imported berries, regardless of price. Likewise they might well wait for Canadian Apples instead of importing so much Citrus fruits.

Mr. King had said he would not join a National government because Dr. Manion had been "too bitter," the Conservative leader said. Mr. King had not called him in for consultation in four and a half months after the special war session, so "if he doesn't want to discuss things with me any more in the future than in the past, it doesn't much matter whether I'm bitter or sweet," Dr. Manion said.

He commented incidentally that Mr. King could "quote his own speeches on any question—and on either side, too." He challenged the prime minister to deny Canadian troops went to England to pick up their artillery there, although it was claimed they were fully equipped. They went over, he said, with old rifles, obsolete machine-guns, no anti-tank guns and no artillery.

Mr. King's real objective was to win this election first of all, Dr. Manion went on.

"Send him over," shouted a veteran.

"I'm afraid he wouldnt be much good over there,' Dr. Manion replied. 'That goes for most of us older fellows, too."

Statesmen's Snapshots

Impetuous but judicial, a member of the Mackenzie King cabinet but one who has never held a seat in the House of Commons, is Hon. Raoul Dandurand.

One of the six foremost Canadian politicians of his time, he is almost better known in the capitals of Europe than he is in Canada.

Few higher honors have come to a Canadian than have come to him. Few Canadians have been more deserving.

Before either Wolfe or Montcalm were born, Raoul Dandurand's people live in Canada. For two centuries they have been one of Montreal's leading families.

Raoul was brought up in an atmosphere of Liberalism, free thought and free spirit. As a boy he built a raft, and three times sailed forth upon the St. Lawrence to gain his fortune. True, they weren't long voyages, not more than a day.

At 13 he was through public school and planning a career. At 18 he was a lawyer, and an instant success. At 24 he was president of the Club National. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier became prime minister, Dandurand, at 36, became a senator, the youngest member of the upper House.

He entered the senate as a reformer—and a reformer he remained.

From 1905 to 1909 he was Speaker and in 1922 became its leader.

As Canada's delegate to the League of Nations he was elected president of the sixth assembly in 1925. In the voting he received 41 ballots, the representative from Denmark who placed second received two points.

As president of the league he profoundly impressed Geneva. Knowing something of the fear of minorities, he was a patient and sympathetic listener to the representatives of small people who came before him time after time to submit their grievances.

He was the first Canadian minister to visit Poland, Rumania, Serbia, Austria, Hungary and other European capitals.

One of his most coveted possessions is the Legion of Honor of France. When, in 1890, the head of the House of Bourbon, the Count of Paris, heir apparent to the throne of France, announced his intention of visiting Montreal, there was a great stir. The mayor suggested a civic reception. A meeting was called to discuss the proposal. On the day of the meeting Dandurand, on his way to the law courts, stopped to listen to the discussion. Some one asked, "How would you vote, Dandurand?" He replied immediately "against." Then he took the floor to challenge the entire plan. It was all right for French royalists to entertain the count, he said, but the taxpayers' money should not be spent in this manner. As a result of his challenge the meeting was disbanded. A few months later he was vested with the ribbon of the Legion of Honor for having "befriended the French Republic."

During the first world war, Raoul Dandurand was chairman of the French Canadian recruiting campaign.

Unique U.S. Flag Greets Minister

VAL D'OR, Que., March 4.—(CP). —What probably is one of the most unique United States flags in existence was unfurled here yesterday on the occasion of the visit to this north-western Quebec mining town of James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister to Canada, and Mrs. Cromwell.

Organizers of a luncheon for Mr. Cromwell found they lacked a United States flag to pin on the wall behind their guest of honor. They broadcast an appeal throughout the district and, to be on the safe side, asked the Minister to bring one with him from Ottawa.

Mr. Cromwell did this but it was not needed for Mel Shaw of Val D'Or offered one he had stored away. This flag, seven feet long and three feet high, is just a bit out of the ordinary.

Shaw, a native of Toronto, lived for a time in the United States and one of his impressions is that some Americans know little of their country. He believed that by inscribing historical events on their flag, United States citizens might become better acquainted with the nation.

This idea developed into a hobby and Shaw embroidered in black thread on his flag important events in United States history, names of all the presidents and of the 48 States.

It was the first visit of the Minister and his wife to Northern Quebec and they soon joined in the festive spirit. After landing on Siscoe Lake in the plane that brought them from Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell were driven into town in an open sleigh.

They watched the finish of the Goldfields International dog derby and Mrs. Cromwell presented little Emile Martel, veteran driver from Quebec, with the Jack Hammell trophy he won for winning the 140-mile, five-day grind.

'Y' Volleyballers Get One Win From Kitchener

Kitchener won the senior volley-ball round-robin series here Saturday evening in the Y.M.C.A., defeating Toronto Central "Y" and the Peterborough "Y" team. About a hundred fans saw some close and exciting action between the top-notch teams of the province.

The Kitchener champions won three and lost one game—losing to Peterborough in one game and barely nosing them out in another. Toronto split even in their four game competition, while Peterborough won one and lost three.

Tight Scores.

Toronto took two from the local volleyballers by scores of 15-13 and 15-13. Kitchener defeated Toronto 15-11 and 15-12. Peterborough captured a 15-13 game from Kitchener in an excellent showing, and then just lost out 16-14 to the visitors.

Members of the winning club were: J. McLeod, D. Kropf, E. Ennis, L. Current, M. Devitt and C Dunke; Toronto's team was: Saunders, West, Smart, Selyen, Robins and Brooke; the Peterborough line-up included: Stan Payne, Don Crawford, Cliff Cadd, Nels Stanger, Russ Kitchen and Ken Kingston.

Cleveland Made Clean Sweep Of Philadelphia

It would be happy day for Cleveland Barons and Syracuse Stars if they could get Philadelphia Ramblers and Pittsburg Hornets respectively for permanent opposition in the International-American Hockey League.

The Barons haven't lost a game this season to the Ramblers and the Stars hold a similar record against the Hornets. Both teams kept their record intact in week-end games, Cleveland beating Philadelphia 3-2 and Syracuse winning 4-2 from Pittsburg in two of last night's four games.

In other contests last night New Haven Eagles edged out Hershey Bears 6-5 and Providence Reds whipped Springfield Indians 4-1. Springfield beat New Haven 4-3 Saturday night and Hershey downed Cleveland 3-2.

Charlie Mason scored two goals and Don Deacon one in the Barons victory last night, with Levinsky and Smith getting the Rambler points. The victory put Cleveland into a second place tie in the western division with the Hornets.

Eddie Convey and Bennett divided the goals in the Syracuse victory while little Billy Taylor and Babe Tapin scored for Pittsburg.

troubles on the chin and laugh off misadventures instead of making tragedies out of them.

Every man wants a wife who is a psychologist who will understand him, and know why he acts like he does and realize that under an unromantic exterior may dwell a passion that is as flaming as any ever immortalized by a poet. And every man wants his wife to have studied him well enough to know how to manage him.

Every man wants a wife who is a sleuth who can find his lost cuff buttons and locate his fishing tackle that he hasn't used for three years. And he wants a wife who will be a discreet pres sagent and know how to show him off in company. And he wants a wife who will laugh at his jokes and ask him to tell that funny story over again. And he wants a wife who will open social doors for him. And he wants a wife who will write his family letters, and get him out of scrapes, and tell his white lies for him, and do about a million other chores.

And it takes a smart woman to do these things. And perhaps the cleverest thing about most wives is that they never let their husbands know how clever they really are.

Forget the Past

Dear Miss Dix — A year ago I married a very charming young widow. I love her devotedly and provide for her amply, and all would be well except that she is constantly talking about her first husband which makes me feel that she cares nothing for me and that all of her love was given to him. This is driving me insane. What should I do?

READER

ANSWER:

I don't know unless you gag her, but any woman who has little enough sense to be continually throwing her first husband in her second husband's face should be in a home for the feebleminded. With The Boy Scouts

Scouters' Club

Alex. C. Kay will be the guest speak at the club meeting being held Monday next, at 8 p.m., in the association headquarters.

It is hoped that all scouters and assistants, and this means cubs, scouts and rovers, will do their best to be on hand and hear good bird news from the district bird warden for the Dominion Government.

St. Luke's Scouts

Flag break at 7.30 p.m. sharp opened up a busy night in the troop meeting. Jim McIlvena, Bob Laing, Bob Graham and Doug Butcher passed elementary first aid.

On Saturday, the cubs and scouts united in a pleasant hike where many passed tests in fire lighting and signalling from the hill tops.

Signalling by buzzer is proving of great interest in the scout meetings of late, and is greatly assisting in badge work.

Sacred Heart Troop

After the opening ceremonies, Scouter Grady turned his charge over to Akela Dominik.

Akela was assisted by Jerry Corbet, a new face in scout circles.

T.L. Don Corrin assisted the leaders in instruction of tenderfoot and second class work. Floor hockey was the central interest in game periods.

At camp fire, Jerry Corbett told the boys about the old 4th Peterborough troop, with its headquarters on Simcoe street. Akela Dominik took the closing ceremonies.

The Cubs.—A quiet session was held in the jungle last week, but will be a meeting well remembered by two boys; the first, George Drumm was invested into the world brotherhood of scouts when he became a tenderpad with the pack.

The second was Jim Daley, who received his leaping wolf badge as a mark of having both eyes open before being to the scout troop.

All Saints' Crew

A short round-table discussion was held last Tuesday, and it was decided to hold the next meeting on Thursday, March 7, and permission has been granted to hold this in the local association headquarters. All rovers of the 5th Lord Strathcona crew, are requested to be on hand at 8 p.m.

St. John's

The Crew.—A good turnout of Rovers was at the den to hear a talk from Bruce Forsythe on his work. The skipper was absent, Rover Mate R. Gynane being in charge.

The Pack.—A large gathering of cubs met in the jungle last Friday evening. Games played were bean relay led by Rakesha and circle bag relay led by Baloo.

Progress was made in various instructions as each six went under the supervision of an old wolf for that period.

Skits by the Red and Grey sixes combined with many riddles told by several cubs did much to make a successful redflower.

The pack welcomed two new leaders to the council rock when Miss Jean Coleman (known as Bagheera) and Max Coones (known as Kim) entered the jungle and joined the pack. We wish them both a happy and lengthy stay with us and good hunting.

Each cub is reminded to bring a pencil and paper with him to the next meeting.

At St. Andrew's

The scouts and cubs were practising their various stunts for the banquet being held on Thursday of this week at 6.30 p.m. in St. Andrew's Sunday school. Edgar Jones, field secretary of provincial headquarters, Toronto, will be guest speaker. This will be a Father and Son affair, and visitors are welcomed.

Scout Craft Show Committee

Members of the above committee are requested to meet in the association headquarters on Monday evening next, at 7 p.m. sharp, to prepare a report for the scouters' club. Mr. Siddall, R. Gynane, F. Pammett and P. Dominik please take notice.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, March 5

A productive and progressive day is read from the predominant planetary configurations, although success must be wrested from difficulties, obstacles and hostile opposition. Determination, perseverance and hard work, as well as initiative, are likely to attract the interest and solid support of employers, superiors or others whose cooperation is essential in putting over important projects. The conflict may be with groups, such as unions, guilds or organized opponents. Private affairs unfold romantic aspects.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year calling for all their skill, resolution, perseverance and industry, as well as boldness and initiative, in successfully launching new and important projects. There also will be obstructions, opposition and enmity, but these may be met by firm resistance, fidelity and patience, thus winning the definite support of those in prestige and influence. Enduring progress and stability should ensue.

A child born on this day may be able, industrious, practical and constructive, and should win against obstacles by patience, persistence, enterprise and co-operation of those in power. It may have jealous or passionate outbursts.

Pharaoh Sennes Buried Centuries Found Decked In King's Ransom

CAIRO, Egypt, March 4—(AP).—A king's ramson in gold and jewels that for 3,600 years had graced a Pharaoh's mummy shone in the fierce Egyptian sunlight today.

Archaeologists rejoiced in the discovery and exploration of a tomb some considered more important to historians than Tut-Ankh-Amen's—that of Psou Sennes, second king of the 21st dynasty and possibly one of Solomon's many fathers-in-law.

Discovery of the tomb two weeks ago and the opening of the royal sarcophagus on February 28 in the presence of modern Egypt's ruler, King Farouk, crowned ten years of toil by the French Egyptologist Pierre Montet.

Working for Strasbourg University, Professor Montet grubbed patiently for a decade in the sands of San el Hagar, west of the Nile Delta site of the ancient City of Tanis built by Rameses the Second as a holiday resort.

There under the great temple built by Rameses, Montet found the tomb entrance, a shaft four feet deep, which led to an ante-room. A short passage led the scientist to the burial chamber, twenty-two feet long, nine feet wide and nine feet high, with walls of rose granite.

Head Encased In Gold.

Inside the huge sarcophagus, also of Rose granite and carved with symbolic figures of the dead king and the god Osiris, lay the body of the man who ruled an empire which was old and dying when Homer sang of Troy, the head encased in a mask of pure gold and the body swathed in silver gilt.

The prize, sought in vain by such distinguished Egyptologists as Sir Flinders Petrie in the ruins of the city from which Moses is believed to have led the exodus, is a rich one.

An inner sacophagus is in the form of a statue of the king carved in silver. Adorned with the gold crown's of upper and lower Egypt the royal effigy lies with hands folded across the chest. One hand holds a golden sceptre, the other a flail. The royal face is that of a young man, leading archaeologists to believe that the likeness was cast before the Pharaoh's death.

The second and third sarcophage are of black granite and gold. The outer sarcophagus which fills half the tomb—eleven feet long, seven feet wide and four feet deep—is in the form of a carving showing the Pharaoh lying on his back. Osiris watches over him and an unnamed goddess supports his head and protests him with outstretched arms.

the tomb includes twenty-one gold-

The profusion of jewelry found in en bracelets, ten found on the right arm and eleven on the left. These are most important, as inscriptions on the gold furnish a record of the king's family and genealogical tree.

42.5 Mill Rate Recommended For Lindsay

LINDSAY, March 4—(ENS). — A rate of 42.5 mills was struck by the finance committee of the town council at the estimates meeting Friday night. This rate is the same as 1939. Alderman Lorne Jordan, chairman of finance, told the committee the town was budgeting for a deficit of a little more than $3,000 but that it is hoped they will get through the year with the aid of a surplus of $4,000 from 1939.

Mayor A. T. Claxton said the rate was kept the same, in spite of an increased appropriation for the Board of Education and loss of a half mill subsidy from the government. The increased demands will amount to more than $10,000.

On the matter of education, Mayor Claxton said if the per capita cost of education were the same today as it was 60 years ago the tax rate could be reduced by eight mills. "I think the people 60 years ago were educated just as well as they are to-day, too," he said. "We are paying heavily for frills in our educational system."

Blow To Liberty Says Manion Of Day Session

BELLEVILLE, Ont., March 4.—(CP).—If Prime Minister Mackenzie King can dissolve parliament to suit his own political purposes, it might be closed for some other reason next time or even be closed permanently—unless the people of Canada declare themselves definitely against that sort of thing, Conservative Leader Manion warns.

"I don't think this country wants Mackenzie King or me or anybody else to do away with the liberties which go without parliamentary institutions," he said here Saturday night before 1,200 people who jammed the Collegiate auditorium.

"Both French-speaking and English-speaking Canadians believe in those liberties and we are not going to give them up unless our lives are taken first."

From here, Dr. Manion went to Ottawa where he will rest until Wednesday, when he begins a swing through the Maritimes and Quebec, starting at Sherbrooke Wednesday night.

The Conservative leader laid three issues before his audience for consideration in this election—the record of the government in peace and war, the supremacy of parliament and the formation of a National government to carry on Canada's part in the war and to deal with post-war problems.

Positive action would be necessary to provide youth with a square deal, he submitted. The country's youth were its finest resource, without which its other resources were not worth much.

"Mr. King has shown no signs of appreciating that. He has done nothing," Dr. Manion said. The Toronto Youth Council had estimated there were 400,000 youths in Canada who had never worked, a state of affairs which could not be permitted to continue long. Plans had to be made for the future.

Flood Control Plans

Among numerous post-war proposals, he included flood control projects. At the cost of one flood works could be constructed to prevent flood damage for all time.

He advocated a revised tariff policy for Canada to protect the home market for Canada's farmers and Canadian industry. That would not mean increased prices, though, he said. If advantage was taken of a tariff in that direction, consideration should be given to removing the protection.

In 1930 the Bennett government had increased tariffs only after it obtained assurances from industry that if such protection were given, prices would not be increased—and only one manufacturer went back on his word.

The farmer, as well as industry, needed protection, Dr. Manion held. He felt that Canadians could well wait for Canadian Strawberries to come in season, for instance, instead of buying imported berries, regardless of price. Likewise they might well wait for Canadian Apples instead of importing so much Citrus fruits.

Mr. King had said he would not join a National government because Dr. Manion had been "too bitter," the Conservative leader said. Mr. King had not called him in for consultation in four and a half months after the special war session, so "if he doesn't want to discuss things with me any more in the future than in the past, it doesn't much matter whether I'm bitter or sweet," Dr. Manion said.

He commented incidentally that Mr. King could "quote his own speeches on any question—and on either side, too." He challenged the prime minister to deny Canadian troops went to England to pick up their artillery there, although it was claimed they were fully equipped. They went over, he said, with old rifles, obsolete machine-guns, no anti-tank guns and no artillery.

Mr. King's real objective was to win this election first of all, Dr. Manion went on.

"Send him over," shouted a veteran.

"I'm afraid he wouldnt be much good over there,' Dr. Manion replied. "That goes for most of us older fellows, too."

Meet The Dominions' Secretary

General Freyberg, LEFT, commander of the detachment of New Zealand troops recently arrived in the Middle East, introducing Anthony Eden, CENTRE, Minister for the Dominions, to the troops. Statesmen's Snapshots

Impetuous but judicial, a member of the Mackenzie King cabinet but one who has never held a seat in the House of Commons, is Hon. Raoul Dandurand.

One of the six foremost Canadian politicians of his time, he is almost better known in the capitals of Europe than he is in Canada.

Few higher honors have come to a Canadian than have come to him. Few Canadians have been more deserving.

Before either Wolfe or Montcalm were born, Raoul Dandurand's people live in Canada. For two centuries they have been one of Montreal's leading families.

Raoul was brought up in an atmosphere of Liberalism, free thought and free spirit. As a boy he built a raft, and three times sailed forth upon the St. Lawrence to gain his fortune. True, they weren't long voyages, not more than a day.

At 13 he was through public school and planning a career. At 18 he was a lawyer, and an instant success. At 24 he was president of the Club National. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier became prime minister, Dandurand, at 36, became a senator, the youngest member of the upper House.

He entered the senate as a reformer—and a reformer he remained.

From 1905 to 1909 he was Speaker and in 1922 became its leader.

As Canada's delegate to the League of Nations he was elected president of the sixth assembly in 1925. In the voting he received 41 ballots, the representative from Denmark who placed second received two points.

As president of the league he profoundly impressed Geneva. Knowing something of the fear of minorities, he was a patient and sympathetic listener to the representatives of small people who came before him time after time to submit their grievances.

He was the first Canadian minister to visit Poland, Rumania, Serbia, Austria, Hungary and other European capitals.

One of his most coveted possessions is the Legion of Honor of France. When, in 1890, the head of the House of Bourbon, the Count of Paris, heir apparent to the throne of France, announced his intention of visiting Montreal, there was a great stir. The mayor suggested a civic reception. A meeting was called to discuss the proposal. On the day of the meeting Dandurand, on his way to the law courts, stopped to listen to the discussion. Some one asked, "How would you vote, Dandurand?" He replied immediately "against." Then he took the floor to challenge the entire plan. It was all right for French royalists to entertain the count, he said, but the taxpayers' money should not be spent in this manner. As a result of his challenge the meeting was disbanded. A few months later he was vested with the ribbon of the Legion of Honor for having "befriended the French Republic."

During the first world war, Raoul Dandurand was chairman of the French Canadian recruiting campaign.

Unique U.S. Flag Greets Minister

VAL D'OR, Que., March 4.—(CP).—What probably is one of the most unique United States flags in existence was unfurled here yesterday on the occasion of the visit to this north-western Quebec mining town of James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister to Canada, and Mrs. Cromwell.

Organizers of a luncheon for Mr. Cromwell found they lacked a United States flag to pin on the wall behind their guest of honor. They broadcast an appeal throughout the district and, to be on the safe side, asked the Minister to bring one with him from Ottawa.

Mr. Cromwell did this but it was not needed for Mel Shaw of Val D'Or offered one he had stored away. This flag, seven feet long and three feet high, is just a bit out of the ordinary.

Shaw, a native of Toronto, lived for a time in the United States and one of his impressions is that some Americans know little of their country. He believed that by inscribing historical events on their flag, United States citizens might become better acquainted with the nation.

This idea developed into a hobby and Shaw embroidered in black thread on his flag important events in United States history, names of all the presidents and of the 48 States.

It was the first visit of the Minister and his wife to Northern Quebec and they soon joined in the festive spirit. After landing on Siscoe Lake in the plane that brought them from Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell were driven into town in an open sleigh.

They watched the finish of the Goldfields International dog derby and Mrs. Cromwell presented little Emile Martel, veteran driver from Quebec, with the Jack Hammell trophy he won for winning the 140-mile, five-day grind.

'Y' Volleyballers Get One Win From Kitchener

Kitchener won the senior volley-ball round-robin series here Saturday evening in the Y.M.C.A., defeating Toronto Central "Y" and the Peterborough "Y" team. About a hundred fans saw some close and exciting action between the top-notch teams of the province.

The Kitchener champions won three and lost one game—losing to Peterborough in one game and barely nosing them out in another. Toronto split even in their four game competition, while Peterborough won one and lost three.

Tight Scores.

Toronto took two from the local volleyballers by scores of 15-13 and 15-13. Kitchener defeated Toronto 15-11 and 15-12. Peterborough captured a 15-13 game from Kitchener in an excellent showing, and then just lost out 16-14 to the visitors.

Members of the winning club were: J. McLeod, D. Kropf, E. Ennis, L. Current, M. Devitt and C Dunke; Toronto's team was: Saunders, West, Smart, Selyen, Robins and Brooke; the Peterborough line-up included: Stan Payne, Don Crawford, Cliff Cadd, Nels Stanger, Russ Kitchen and Ken Kingston.

Cleveland Made Clean Sweep Of Philadelphia

It would be happy day for Cleveland Barons and Syracuse Stars if they could get Philadelphia Ramblers and Pittsburg Hornets respectively for permanent opposition in the International-American Hockey League.

The Barons haven't lost a game this season to the Ramblers and the Stars hold a similar record against the Hornets. Both teams kept their record intact in week-end games, Cleveland beating Philadelphia 3-2 and Syracuse winning 4-2 from Pittsburg in two of last night's four games.

In other contests last night New Haven Eagles edged out Hershey Bears 6-5 and Providence Reds whipped Springfield Indians 4-1. Springfield beat New Haven 4-3 Saturday night and Hershey downed Cleveland 3-2.

Charlie Mason scored two goals and Don Deacon one in the Barons victory last night, with Levinsky and Smith getting the Rambler points. The victory put Cleveland into a second place tie in the western division with the Hornets.

Eddie Convey and Bennett divided the goals in the Syracuse victory while little Billy Taylor and Babe Tapin scored for Pittsburg.

troubles on the chin and laugh off misadventures instead of making tragedies out of them.

Every man wants a wife who is a psychologist who will understand him, and know why he acts like he does and realize that under an unromantic exterior may dwell a passion that is as flaming as any ever immortalized by a poet. And every man wants his wife to have studied him well enough to know how to manage him.

Every man wants a wife who is a sleuth who can find his lost cuff buttons and locate his fishing tackle that he hasn't used for three years. And he wants a wife who will be a discreet pres sagent and know how to show him off in company. And he wants a wife who will laugh at his jokes and ask him to tell that funny story over again. And he wants a wife who will open social doors for him. And he wants a wife who will write his family letters, and get him out of scrapes, and tell his white lies for him, and do about a million other chores.

And it takes a smart woman to do these things. And perhaps the cleverest thing about most wives is that they never let their husbands know how clever they really are.

Forget the Past

Dear Miss Dix — A year ago I married a very charming young widow. I love her devotedly and provide for her amply, and all would be well except that she is constantly talking about her first husband which makes me feel that she cares nothing for me and that all of her love was given to him. This is driving me insane. What should I do?

Skits by the Red and Grey sixes combined with many riddles told by several cubs did much to make a successful redflower.

The pack welcomed two new leaders to the council rock when Miss Jean Coleman (known as Bagheera) and Max Coones (known as Kim) entered the jungle and joined the pack. We wish them both a happy and lengthy stay with us and good hunting.

Each cub is reminded to bring a pencil and paper with him to the next meeting.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, March 5

A productive and progressive day is read from the predominant planetary configurations, although success must be wrested from difficulties, obstacles and hostile opposition. Determination, perseverance and hard work, as well as initiative, are likely to attract the interest and solid support of employers, superiors or others whose cooperation is essential in putting over important projects. The conflict may be with groups, such as unions, guilds or organized opponents. Private affairs unfold romantic aspects.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year calling for all their skill, resolution, perseverance and industry, as well as boldness and initiative, in successfully launching new and important projects. There also will be obstructions, opposition and enmity, but these may be met by firm resistance, fidelity and patience, thus winning the definite support of those in prestige and influence. Enduring progress and stability should ensue.

A child born on this day may be able, industrious, practical and constructive, and should win against obstacles by patience, persistence, enterprise and co-operation of those in power. It may have jealous or passionate outbursts.

Pharaoh Sennes Buried Centuries Found Decked In King's Ransom

CAIRO, Egypt, March 4—(AP).—A king's ramson in gold and jewels that for 3,600 years had graced a Pharaoh's mummy shone in the fierce Egyptian sunlight today.

Archaeologists rejoiced in the discovery and exploration of a tomb some considered more important to historians than Tut-Ankh-Amen's—that of Psou Sennes, second king of the 21st dynasty and possibly one of Solomon's many fathers-in-law.

Discovery of the tomb two weeks ago and the opening of the royal sarcophagus on February 28 in the presence of modern Egypt's ruler, King Farouk, crowned ten years of toil by the French Egyptologist Pierre Montet.

Working for Strasbourg University, Professor Montet grubbed patiently for a decade in the sands of San el Hagar, west of the Nile Delta site of the ancient City of Tanis built by Rameses the Second as a holiday resort.

There under the great temple built by Rameses, Montet found the tomb entrance, a shaft four feet deep, which led to an ante-room. A short passage led the scientist to the burial chamber, twenty-two feet long, nine feet wide and nine feet high, with walls of rose granite.

Head Encased In Gold.

Inside the huge sarcophagus, also of Rose granite and carved with symbolic figures of the dead king and the god Osiris, lay the body of the man who ruled an empire which was old and dying when Homer sang of Troy, the head encased in a mask of pure gold and the body swathed in silver gilt.

The prize, sought in vain by such distinguished Egyptologists as Sir Flinders Petrie in the ruins of the city from which Moses is believed to have led the exodus, is a rich one.

An inner sacophagus is in the form of a statue of the king carved in silver. Adorned with the gold crown's of upper and lower Egypt the royal effigy lies with hands folded across the chest. One hand holds a golden sceptre, the other a flail. The royal face is that of a young man, leading archaeologists to believe that the likeness was cast before the Pharaoh's death.

The second and third sarcophage are of black granite and gold. The outer sarcophagus which fills half the tomb—eleven feet long, seven feet wide and four feet deep—is in the form of a carving showing the Pharaoh lying on his back. Osiris watches over him and an unnamed goddess supports his head and protests him with outstretched arms.

the tomb includes twenty-one gold-

The profusion of jewelry found in en bracelets, ten found on the right arm and eleven on the left. These are most important, as inscriptions on the gold furnish a record of the king's family and genealogical tree.

42.5 Mill Rate Recommended For Lindsay

LINDSAY, March 4—(ENS). — A rate of 42.5 mills was struck by the finance committee of the town council at the estimates meeting Friday night. This rate is the same as 1939. Alderman Lorne Jordan, chairman of finance, told the committee the town was budgeting for a deficit of a little more than $3,000 but that it is hoped they will get through the year with the aid of a surplus of $4,000 from 1939.

Mayor A. T. Claxton said the rate was kept the same, in spite of an increased appropriation for the Board of Education and loss of a half mill subsidy from the government. The increased demands will amount to more than $10,000.

On the matter of education, Mayor Claxton said if the per captia cost of education were the same today as it was 60 years ago the tax rate could be reduced by eight mills. "I think the people 60 years ago were educated just as well as they are to-day, too," he said. "We are paying heavily for frills in our educational system."

Liberals Attack

taking into his government, Mr. Lapointe declared in an address in which he appealed for unity, defended the government's war effort and termed the present government the only possible truly National administration.

Only What the People Want

The Justice Minister said he had heard some sponsors of a National government suggest it would be the best way for parliament to adopt unpopular war measures. He declared that was the main reason why he opposed such a form of government, adding: "We do not want anything which the people do not want."

Mr. Lapointe declared neither the British nor French leaders had seen fit to form national governments when the war began and said there was no need for one in Canada. The present Dominion Government "trust one another, know one another and work in harmony and cooperation," and this government is one of the best governments the Dominion has known, he said.

He said there was only one issue in the campaign—the prosecution of the war—and expressed surprise at the bitterness of some opposition attacks.

"Hate flows everywhere in the world," he said. "Can we not here in Canada run against that tide and unite our various qualities? Let us not inflict any wounds that cannot be healed. Let us be friends even if we don't agree on some questions and let us decide to do our share to keep Canada united."

Postmaster General Power spoke at Neepawa, Man., and opposed National Government too. He pointed to the Union Nationale Government of former Premier Duplessis of Quebec, made up of both Liberals and Conservatives, as an example of a failure of such a Union. At Craik, Sask., Agriculture Minister Gardiner warned against placing in power those without legislative experience.

The national chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation M. J. Coldwell, said at Tyndall, Man., that he would refuse to enter a national government and he was sure his party would maintain its independence. However, there might be policies advanced by such a government which would command C.C.F. support.

Effective conscription could be introduced in Canada without initiating any new legislation, Mr. Coldwell said.

He recalled the House of Commons debates last fall when the Militia Act was under discussion. He said former Defence Minister Ian MacKenzie had interpreted the Act as meaning that able-bodied Canadians could be called out to fight in defence of Canada on any field it was decided the defence should be made.

"The Prime Minister pledged his government would never introduce a conscription measure," Mr. Coldwell said, "but he would not have to introduce a new measure. The power is there in the Militia Act if the government chooses to say the defence of Canada is to be fought overseas."

"The C.C.F. party is opposed to war and believes it settles nothing," Mr. Coldwell said. "But now that Canada is in it we must do all we can to help the Allies win.

"That help can best be given by supplying Britain and France with war essentials but it must be done without profit to Canada and certainly without any individual profiteering."

After-war problems should be the immediate consideration of whatever administration takes office after the general election, Mr. Coldwell said. That problem should be anticipated and planned with the greatest care.

Protection For Farmer

Before a Brockville, Ont., audience, Dr. Manion ennunciated the traditional Conservative policy of protective tariffs and said Canada needs moderate tariffs, sufficient to protect the home market and the Canadian worker. The farmers needs protection as well as industry, he added.

The government's peacetime record, its conduct of the war and dissolution of parliament all came under Dr. Manion's fire.

Hon. Earl Lawson, Minister of National Revenue broadcast that he supported National Government. He said it would be non-partisan and could administer Canadian affairs efficiently and prosecute the war effort intelligently.

Mr. Lawson said that "out of the confusion of charges and counter-charges, scant information, concealment of facts and babble of tongues, there glimmers a golden thread of hope and reason and solidarity for Canada with which can be sewn together a united Canadian people bent on conserving Canada's resources, efficiently administering Canada's affairs, and intelligently prosecuting Canada's war effort."

Mr. Lawson said that "golden thread" was a non-partisan national government.

"No such government would have Canada's men fighting overseas for freedom and the government itself fighting at home to stifle freedom," he said. "No such government would scuttle parliament because, being non-partisan, it would have nothing to conceal."

Mr. Lawson said the government's methods were those "of Hitler in 1936."

"We are limited by the bureaucratic creature of the government, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, in the length of time which we can have for broadcasting," he said. "We are prohibited from broadcasting from a public meeting. And we are throttled from giving you facts in connection with Canada's preparation for defence and war effort since the outbreak of war."

The War First.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Dominion Agriculture Minister, in an address at Craik, Sask., warned against placing in power those without legislative experience.

The main issue in the March 26 elections, he said, was the prosecution of the war and those best able to carry on this work should be placed in power.

In his brief address the Minister declared Prime Minister Mackenzie King is the man for leadership during this time of war.

Hon. Maurice Dupre of Quebec, Solicitor-General in the Conservative Government of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, said at St. Boniface, Man., that if Prime Minister Mackenzie King really sought national unity he would form a National Government such as in Britain.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King had made appeals for national unity but had rejected the idea of a National Government and plunged the country into an election.

Mr Dupre said government candidates were speaking on the questions of national unity and conscription. While being "careful not to answer the charges that they had seriously repleted public funds."

tivities of the Royal Navy and Air Force, it warned of the necessity of knowing "we have the right men" in the government.

"It may become necessary to inquire whether we are as well served as we should be by the higher command of the Royal Air Force," it said, "and whether these posts should not be filled with younger officers familiar with the up to date machines and strategy and tactics appropriate to their use."

The Times also forecast changes in high places.

"New situations," it said, "are expected in time—perhaps no long time—and as in the past will without doubt demand new methods and men.

Some New Ministers

"In this country, for the first six months, power has been in the hands of a cabinet admittedly experimental and transitional in composition. No prospect of the coming months can exclude the certainty that it will in time undergo further changes in plan and personnel, adapting it ever more closely to the imperios requirements of war."

The Mail said "Men who don't survive the test of real war must go," and "we believe Mr. Chamberlain will discover before long that he can very usefully replace some of his ministers, both great and small."

It suggested that there might be necessity "very soon" to review some of the appointments of former War-Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha.

The Domala, towed to an undisclosed port after bombs had set her afire and shattered her bridge, was the first big British passenger ship victim of German warplanes.

Of 301 persons aboard, 20 Britons and 88 Indian sailors were feared lost. The Domala carried 253 Lascars being repatriated from internment in German ports. She sailed from Antwerp, Belgium.

Many were said to have been killed in their bunks when the plane dived and swept the ship's decks with machine gun bullets.

Nine Britons and 42 Indians were rescued by a Netherlands ship and landed at a south coast English port. The others were rescued by British ships.

Thought It British Plane

One eye-witness said the bomber carried full navigation lights, and the Domala's crew mistook it for a British plane until it dropped to 40 feet about the ship and released the first bomb. The Admiralty said four bombs were dropped, and three scored hits.

"We were blazing from stem to stern in 20 minutes," the eyewitness said. "After the first bomb, the plane sprayed the deck with machine-guns."

Another survivor said the passenger and crew were attacked after they fled the ship.

"I was in a small lifeboat with 15 others," he said. "Every few seconds the plane dived and poured lead into our sides.

"After the third raid, I jumped into the water and crawled on a raft. It contained a dead Lascar, his body riddled with bullets. Five minutes later, I saw the lifeboat sink with my dead comrades."

Many of the survivors were injured, and several died of exposure.

The sinking of an unidentified British vessel was reported at Amsterdam yesterday when two Netherlands ships, the 2,248-ton Sint Annaland and the 2,249-tone Schieland, reached port.

Their crews said they took cover and escaped bullets from a warplane, but that they saw it bomb and sink the British ship.

The British steamship Albano, 1,176 tons, sank in the North Sea yesterday after striking a mine which, survivors said, lifted the ship from thew ater. Two persons were killed.

The Netherlands freighter Limburg, 345 tons, was said to have been raked with machine-gun fire at sea by a German plane.

Two crewmen were killed when the 710-ton British steamship Cato, also beleved to have struck a mine, sank off the west coast. There still were 11 missing.

Bomber Down In Mistake

Thet Royal Air Force during the week-end accounted for three German airplanes, but lost one bomber when by mistake three R.A.F. fighters shot it down. They mistook it for a German bomber.

The Admiralty recalled to active service five veteran naval officers, all of whom carry the rank of admiral of the fleet, the highest in the navy.

They are Sir Henry Oliver, Sir Osmond Brock, Sir Roger Keyes, Sir Frederick Field and Sir Reginald Tyrwhitt. It was indicated that they probably would not be asked to go to sea, because of their advanced ages, but that shore positions of importance are open to them.

Of the five perhaps Sir Roger Keyes is best known to the landsman. An active member of parliament for many years and a forceful speaker inside the House of Commons and on the political platform, he won fame in 1918 for his famous St. George's day raid on Zeebrugge and Ostend, Belgian ports held then by Germany.

said, It would be unwise to believe that Britain would retreat from her original position in view of "unrestricted warfare by Germany against the Allies and neutrals."

They pointed out the British blockade was decreed last November, but was not applied to German coal shipments to Italy until last Friday.

The Foreign Office said that although no negotiations were in progress now for a new Anglo-Italian finacial and commercial agreement, the British committee still is in Rome.

"Talks may begin at any time," an official spokesman said. "They have not broken down, but merely have been discontinued."

Foreign Office sources diclaimed knowledge of a British protest to the Italian Government concerning the reception of the Fascist press to the note announcing the coal embargo. A British counter-protest was reported unofficially in Rome.

Colliers To Try Dash

ROTTERDAM, March 4.—(AP)—The Italian collier Orata sailed for Italy today with a cargo of German coal.

Some sources had reported yesterday that Great Britain would permit 16 Italian ships in port here to pass the Allied sea blockade with German coal shipments to Italy.

(The Rome government has protested the blockade to Britain).

Five other Italian vessels were understood to be preparing to leave today. Four sailed last Friday but returned here.

British authorities, it was understood in some sources, agreed to exempt from possible seizure those ships which were loading coal when the blockade order went into effect.

"is manifestly abusive."

Britain is understood to have complained against alleged insinuations that the blockade was an attempt to exert economic pressure on Italy to make her agree to exchange armaments for British coal.

Italy's protest yesterday was accompanied by the newspapers' attack of Robert Farinacci, Fascist Grand Council member. He called the British blockade "reaction of our refusal to sell arms to England" and charged that Britain "hope to oblige our country to buy coal from Welsh mines."

Plenty of Notice

British authorities were said to have pointed out that the coal blockade was announced many weeks before the Rome-London trade negotiations were suspended.

They were said to have been interrupted because of Italy's desire to buy coal with agricultural products instead of with products of her heavy industry.

Italy objected to Britain's blockade of German imports as well as exports.

Control of Germany-bound ships, she contended, require "onerous and excessive documentation not compatible with normal secrecy of commercial dealings, th re-routing of ships in control ports with delay frequently prolonged for days and weeks, causing very serious damage to equipment, to regularity of service, and to carring on of traffic and frequently paralysing the supply of goods to non-belligerent countries with immediate and direct repercussions on industry and labor."

She took exception to the blockade of German exports because it "profoundly disturbs the mechanism of international exchange, suppresses sources of supply and reduces the possibilities of production of non-belligerent states."

Coal the Sore Point.

The note said that the Fascist Government particularly protested against the "illegitimacy and gravity" of Britain's coal blockade.

"The British Government," it said, "knows that the coal in question meets an indispensable need in the life and labor of the Italian people."

Stating that the blockade "is of the kind to disturb and compromise economic and political relations established between Italy and Great Britain by the agreements of April 16, 1938," it added:

"The Fascist Government, while renewing its formal protest, intends to mark from this moment data and factual elements of the situation with regard to responsibility inherent in the future development of same."

Whatever Britain's motives are in blockading German exports, the note said, "they could in nowise make legitimate the diminution of the rights of non-belligerent powers."

The Italian Government referred to the present note as a renewal of a "protest and reserves already made against the principles involved in the British Government's disposition for economic war and for the ways in which these are applied to non-belligerent states."

200 Skiers Out In Slush On Manvers Hills

When a man, or a woman either for that matter, becomes ski crazy there isn't much you can do for him or her except to wait patiently until summer comes around, hoping there will be a brief return to normalcy. But it's usually false hope, because there's always water skiing in the summer.

A form of madness is the only explanation that sober-minded citizens had for the fact that more than 200 skiiers sloshed about the hills of Bethany yesterday with skis on their feet in place of more practical rubber boots.

And every one of the 200 claim that the skiing was good. "Of course," they admit off-handedly, "it was kind of wet if you fell." And then the rain must have been wet too, but they didn't mention that.

Just how mad these people are is revealed in the fact that of the 200 on hand, more than 50 had come by special train from Toronto. And to top it all off, the Peterborough Ski Club paid no attention to weather and ran off the club championship cross country race. They even had downhill and slalom races and everybody stayed till the last whistle of the train.

"How were the roads to Bethany?" a reporter asked Toby Westbye today. "Pretty slippery, eh?"

"Oh, no, they were fine. Maybe a little slippery, but I didn't see anyone stuck," he answered, astonished that anyone could think that a little thing like glare ice on the steep hills about Bethany would stop anyone from going skiing in such good weather. But just ask Ivan Fletcher, bus driver, who took a good many of the skiiers to Bethany yesterday. Ivan is still shaking with nerves from the hazards of that trip. He's calling to mind that old song about "Only Mad Dogs and Englishmen," and trying to think of a word for skiiers that could be substituted for the word Englishmen.

Otonabee Roads Been Kept Open

Farmers of Otonabee may be touching wood these days when they mention the passing of winter to which they apply the tributary term "open."

"Traffic has been good all winter," one of the prominent ratepayers said on Saturday, "and I think all our township roads have been kept open. The season has been exceptionally favorable for our road men, and I hope that March does not bring us a lot of snow. Otonabee has proved by experience that the plowing service should be extended to its ratepayers on the side lines, and that by keeping plows in action it is just about as reasonable an expense as letting roads drift and then having to hire gangs to shovel through them. We haven't had anything like that this season, but I can say that the work that had to be done was done promptly, and you don't mind the ordinary expense when you are getting satisfactory results."

CHIMNEY FIRE.

CAMPBELLFORD. — A chimney fire resulting from overheated pipes threatened to do serious damage at the home of Sam Lambert, Front street, at eleven o'clock on Saturday morning. Following a call to the Fire Station, Chief Clarence Williams and his brigade soon had the blaze under control.

Sea Battle Rumored

Rumors are rife of an impending battle between British naval vessels and a Nazi pocket battleship off the coast of Uruguay as American naval vessels rushed to the rescue of the British freighter Southgate, which radioed that it was being attacked by a Nazi submarine off Puerto Rico. Another German steamer, halted by a British cruiser, was scuttled by its crew at Aruba in the Dutch West Indies.

LONDON — (CP). — Seven men and three women appeared before a Police Court to-day charged with obstructing traffic while selling pacifist newspapers and pamphlets at Marble Arch on Sunday. Three were fined, one was released and the other six obtained a postponement of their hearings in order to seek legal advice.

AMSTERDAM — (AP). — A barrage balloon trailing 3,000 feet of cable and drifting from the direction of Britain was shot down in flames to-day by a Netherlands army plane 12 miles south of Utrecht.

They Know Russia.

MILAN, Italy — (CP-Havas). — Italia, Milan Catholic newspaper, to-day called Russia a land which worships the gods of "lying, hate and violence."

"In Italy," it declared, "we know what to believe about Russia which, after throwing its people into atrocious material and moral misery, has unleashed its Imperialism and hurled itself against other peoples, sending Soviet fliers to announce with incendiary bombs the peaceful beginning of a reign of liberty and justice against the reactionary bourgeoisie."

TOKYO — (AP). — Masayuki Tani, Vice-Foreign-Minister, demanded to-day the return of 12 Germans still held by Britain of the 21 seized from the Japanese liner Asama Maru on January 20. Nine have been returned to Japan under a compromise settlement of Japanese protests over stoppage of the ship. The reply of British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie, to whom Tani made the demand, was not known.

Fur Market Is Reported Strong

Good news for trappers in Peterborough district, is evidence that the fur market this winter promises to be one of the best in a number of years.

In Montreal recently, eighty per cent of the entire offering at a big fur sale, sold at an advance of about 10 per cent in some furs, and as high as 20 per cent in others. With keen competition, United States, Canada, and Europe all took part in auction, and Latin America was said to be represented by New York brokers. The total of eighty per cent of the offering being sold stood twenty per cent above normal and offered encouragement to trappers and fur buyers in this district.

Another favorable sign for trappers is that fashion experts are predicting that the fur jacket will be an outstanding item of apparel for Spring, and in many instances will take the place of the cloth coat and fur trimmed cloth coat. Never has the popularity of a single fur style gained such momentum in sales throughout the country, it is claimed.

Rev. Dr. Endicott Guest Speaker At Mark Street

Near capacity audiences attended both morning and evening services at Mark Street United Church, Sunday, when the 11th anniversary of the new building was observed.

Inspiring messages were given at both services by the Rev. Charles Endicott, D.D., of Toronto who has charge of the Missionary and Maintenance Work of the United Church in all Canada. Mrs. Goldie was guest soloist in the morning and Mr. Ed. Rowe was the guest soloist at the evening service.

A new feature was added to the anniversary observance when a mass meeting of parents and scholars was held at the regular Sunday School period. Dr. Endicott gave an address at this gathering and expressed pleasure at the healthy condition of the Sunday School.

Mr. Ed. Short sang two hymns in the afternoon and his lovely voice did full justice to the melodies. At the evening service both the junior and senior choirs took part.

Brisbin, in charge of the topic, "Is Democracy a Failure?" presented enlightening news and views on the subject. George Turner gave a talk on the life of Lord Tweedsmuir, as author and statesman, and a man who endeared himself in the hearts of all Canadian people.

Five Charged Being Drunk

A quintette of individuals who fell foul of the police over the week-end on liquor charges paraded before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in Police Court this morning, but in only one case was there a decision reached.

One young man, who was defended by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., pleaded guilty to having been drunk on Murray Street on Saturday night and escaped with a fine of $10.00, and 75 cents costs.

A companion for whim Mr. Gordon also appeared, succeeded in securing an adjournment without plea or election for two weeks. It was intimated that he would plead guilty and pay his fine on that date.

A Curve Lake Indian for whom a warrant had been issued when he had failed to appear after an adjournment on a drunk charge, faced the old indictment to-day, and on the strength of his weeping announcement to the court that he had lost a brother through death, secured a week's adjournment.

Another young man also charged with intoxication following an altercation with a member of the Oshawa Tank Regiment on Saturday night, also asked for and obtained an adjournment.

The fifth member of the quintette pleaded not guilty to a charge of having been drunk and he was remanded until Tuesday morning.

Woodsworth Opposes National Government

BEAUSEJOUR, Man., March 4 (CP) — J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader, declared he would not have anything to do with Hon. R. J. Manion's proposed national government "even if I was asked."

"I will not have anything to do with the national government proposed by Dr. Manion," Mr. Woodsworth said in an interview prior to an election campaign address in this town, 38 miles northeast of Winnipeg. He said he spoke also for his party which was opposed to the national administration plan.

"Such a government would be like a ship with three or four pilots at the helm, each of them wanting to go in a different direction."

Water Heater Rates Are Reduced

Reduction in water heater rates passed by the Peterborough Utilities Commission Friday will mean a saving of about 20 cents a month to the average householder.

The rate has been lowered from 46 to 42 cents a hundred watts, effective this billing. The average home heater is of 500 watts and the gross saving will be 40 cents on a two-months bill. For larger heaters the saving will increase proportionately. The reduced rates will mean a loss in revenue to the commission of $3,500 a year.

Claim India Independence Scheme Would Enslave 90 Million Moslems

NEW DELHI, March 4—(CP-Reuters). — Charging the Indian Congress party with a desire to enslave 90,000,000 Moslems, Seth Haji Sir Abdoola Haroon, head of the Foreign Committee of the All-India Moslem Conference, has called on the American people to study all sides of the Indian problem before showing sympathy with the Congress demands for independence.

"America's interest in the cause of Indian freedom is praiseworthy, but before its people express any opinion about our affairs we hope they will acquaint themselves with all aspects of the Indian problem, which is bristling with difficulties that are incapable of being mitigated by the verbosity of the Congress party, which is now trying to woo American public opinion," Sir Abdoola said in an "appeal to the American people" issued here last night.

Though the Moslems have nothing in common with the Hindus, he said, the All-India Congress wants to establish Hindu domination, "as is proved by the experience of tyrannical Congress rule in some provinces."

"The Congress ideal of independence is genuine neither in conception nor in execution," he said. "It aims at the establishment of an unalterable Hindu religious majority under a single federation, possessing all power wherever they are in the majority.

"Therefore the Congress variety of independence means the enslavement of at least 90,000,000 Moslems, who are pledged to resist it to the last ditch."

Police said the young woman told them she was followed down the street by the man and that she tried to evade him by crossing the road. He followed she said and overtook her. He grabbed her and knocked her to the sidewalk. Two Lindsay youths came along in a car at this point and the man took to his heels.

Police picked up Fairfield later in the night.

The Rambling REPORTERS

STUMPED.

Policemen are called upon to perform all kinds of services in the course of their duties, but when the aid of the department was sought the other night in recovering a coin that had become stuck against the roof of a small girl's mouth that was something new. The child had the coin in her mouth and suddenly discovered that it had adhered to the palate. The mother, unable to remove the obstacle, called the police and Constable C. J. McGillen responded. The job was too much for him, too, and the tot was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where Dr. Bob Young recovered the coin.—C.

Highways Free Of Accidents Officers Report

Although driving conditions Sunday afternoon and night were about the worst of the season, neither provincial traffic officer in this district was called out to an accident, Officers McClure and Broughton reported this morning. Portions of the highway were very slippery but drivers were moving cautiously and as a result the accident total was kept down to a minimum despite the rain that turned highways and streets into skating rinks.

A number of traffic accidents, mostly of a minor nature, caused by cars skidding on the icy streets, were reported to the city police department. No one was hurt in these mishaps and most of them were of the bent fender type.

The travelling was very bad. Cars were stalled trying to get up the grade at the Ashburnham bridge and on Argyle Street it was impossible for motor vehicles to climb the hill to Nicholls Hospital.

Wm. A. Logan Is Laid To Rest

Fellow engineers and other friends joined in paying last tribute to the memory of one of Canada's oldest engineers and one of Peterborough's leading citizens on Sunday night when the funeral service for William Allison Logan, 89, was held at his home at 210 McDonnel street.

Pall bearers were Dr. H. R. H. Kenner, H. Hooper, A. L. Killaly, R. S. Dobbin, H. B Cowan, senior, and James Dutton Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Logan was an elder, officiated at the service assisted by Rev. Canon J. D. Paterson of All Saints' Anglican Church.

Also represented at the funeral were members of the Masonic order, Mr. Logan was a charter member of Royal Arthur Lodge, A.F. & A.M., and one of its past masters.

Rev. Dr. Barr, in a tribute to the deceased, spoke on a text from Ecclesiaticus—"Let us now praise famous men . . . The Lord hath wrought great glory by them through His great power from the beginning."

Fame was not always the proud possession of those who make the newspaper headlines, or whose voices are heard on the air, Dr. Barr said. "Men may occupy a humble sphere and yet in their own communities fill a large place and rise to comparative fame on par with those who occupy a bigger stage in this world's life. Famous men also are men of sincerity, humility and meekness. These characteristics were remarkable noted in the life of the late W. A. Logan."

"From the days he roamed as a boy on the banks of the great river St. Lawrence, the life of our departed friend was marked by deep religious devotion. He learned the Psalms so that he could repeat any one without mistake. They became the treasure house of his philosophy of his life, and remained to the very end the anchor of his soul."

The remains were forwarded to Cardinal, Ontario, where interment was made today.

Southern States Are Pro-Ally

The further south you go, the stronger becomes the pro-Allies' feeling in the United States, according to Dick Raine, George street tobacconist, who returned late last week from a winter holiday in the south.

In the northern states people and newspapers alike seem concerned only about keeping out of war, even though they are agreed that Britain is right, he said. But as he motored further south he noticed that both in speech and in print, the feeling was more akin to that in evidence in Canada—a conviction seems to be growing there that Great Britain and France not only are right, but that the United States must come to the active help of the other democracies.

Dick had one experience that made his clerk, Bob Doris—a baseball fanatic—turn green with envy. He was registered at the same hotel as Lefty Gomez, ace pitcher for the world champion New York Yanks, and spent some time talking to the veteran of the mound.

CAMPBELLFORD

Police Watch Driver Crack Off Hydrant

CAMPBELLFORD, March 4. — It is not often that a constable is right on hand at the time of an accident and this is especially true when it happens at 3 o'clock in the morning. Such was the case when Howard Hutcheon of town, cracked off a hydrant at the corner of Tice and Bridge street. Night Constable W. Normington had been standing on the corner when he saw the car approaching from the west with only one head light. He stepped from the curb signalling the driver to stop and the car slid across the sidewalk into the hydrant. Damage was placed at $90.00.

OBITUARY

PETER JOSEPH GRADY.

Member of a family widely known and long established in this district, Peter Joseph Grady died early Monday morning in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Mr. Grady lived in North Monaghan Township at the intersection of Highways 28 and 7 in a home that had been in the possession of his forebears for more than a century. It was one of the oldest farms in the entire district and Mr. Grady spent his entire life there, as a market gardener. He had been in declining health for some time but was seriously ill for only about a week. He was possessed of a quiet disposition and had gained the friendship of a large circle of friends. He was in his 74th year.

Mr. Grady was never married. He is survived by his sister, Miss Mary Ann Grady, at home.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning at 8.45 o'clock from the Duffus Funeral Parlors to St. Peter's Cathedral, of which he was a member, for Requiem Mass at 9 a.m. Interment will be at St. Peter's Cemetery.

MRS. W. A. RICHARDSON.

Mrs. William A. Richardson, wife of the general manager of the Peterborough Canoe Company, died at her home at 299 Frederick Avenue late Sunday night after a long illness.

Although her illness had been extended, Mrs. Richardson's death last night came as an unexpected shock to her family and a wide circle of friends.

Mrs. Richardson's generosity in the service of her community had been long established, although her activity had been curtailed of late by ill health. But closest to her heart were her family and her church, St. Andrew's United. She was known as a truly remarkable wife and mother, one who devoted the best of her ability to that end. In St. Andrew's Church she was a member of the Women's Association and the Missionary Society, and while she never was president of either, she was always one of the most willing and capable workers in both those organizations. She was also a member of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A.

Born in Cobourg, she was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Jamieson, and came to Peterborough from Cobourg 45 years ago. Surviving besides her husband are one son, Jack Frederick Richard, son, and one daughter, Barbara Jane Richardson, both at home; and two sisters, Mrs. E. V. Eldridge, of Peterborough, and Mrs. E. C. Howard of Gananoque, Ontario.

The remains are resting at the family residence, 299 Frederick Avenue, and the funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock from St. Andrew's United Church, Rev. Dr. E. W. Young officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake Cemetery.

$500 Donation Received To Open Drive

Before even the opening gun of the Salvation Army's drive for war and home service funds has begun, a large industrial plant in the city has volunteered to subscribe $500, Adjutant Buckley said today.

He declined to reveal the name of the company but expressed high hopes that its move indicated the success the campaign will have. It was indication, he added, of the regard in which the Army's work is held in Peterborough.

He also related hat the campaign chairman, R. C. Braund, had received a letter from Senator Arthur Meighen, national chairman, in which he expressed hope that the campaign may be entirely successful. "This campaign is really a responsibility of first importance, and must be converted by all workers into a success," Senator Meighen said in his letter. "There is no greater need than that for morale-building service among our Canadian soldiers."

Boarding House Tax Removed

Legislation by the Ontario Government at its recent sessions made retroactive to January 1, 1939, an amendment relieving rooming and boarding houses of the obligation of paying a tax on business assessment, A. L. Elliott, M.P.P., informed the Examiner today.

The business assessment of boarding houses was a provision of a law passed in 1905, but it remained inactive until a short time ago when Toronto assessed rooming and boarding houses in a test case which went to the Court of Appeal where Chief Justice Robertson said it was never intended that persons in ordinary circumstances should be required to pay a business tax.

Peterborough's assessment department decided that there was no reason why the Court's decision should not empower them to assess local boarding and rooming houses for business tax, and as a result Mr. Elliott became interested in the enabling legislation, taking steps that ended with the amendment which now removes these houses from the business tax category. The change applies to assessments made last year on which the tax would be due this year.

Skiing Titles Captured By Quebec Pair

BANFF, Alta., March 4.—(CP)—Viature Cousineau of Esterel, Que., and Conrad Delisle of Quebec captured the open and closed all round men's Dominion ski championships as the 1940 tournament closed here Sunday with the naming of 24 titlists.

Miss Dorothy Michaels of St. Margaret's, Que. and Miss Eleanor Boyle, 14-year-old Lake Louise girl, were crowned queens of the senior and junior ladies' divisions while the other major winner was H. Gourlay of Banff who won three of the four junior men's championships.

Only one of three 1939 champions entered in all divisions successfully defended his titles. Gault Gillespie of Montreal retained his open and closed cross-country crowns by negotiating the fast 11-mile run Thursday in one hour, 41 minutes and 11 seconds. Punch Bott of Montreal, 1939 men's downhill closed champion, and Louis Georgas of Owen Sound, Ont., 1939 open and closed men's slalom winner, were knocked from the top rung. Bott was third in his special and Georgas fourth.

The coveted men's senior jumping title went to Hans Gunnarson of Revelstoke, B.C., in a nip-and-tuck struggle against a team mate, Earl Pletch, with jumps of 176 and 179 feet, but he did not have sufficient points in other competitions to threaten either Cousineau or Delisle in the major four-way combined cross country, jumping, downhill and slalom feature of the meet.

Other top-ranking Canadian skiers named were Ole Johansen of Copper Mountain, B.C., who received only five points more than Cousineau to run off with both the open and closed combined cross country and jumping champoinships. He had 407.4 points.

The Dominion ski champions for 1940 follow:

Salica Called To Take Crown

TORONTO, March 4.—(CP)—According to the prophecy of most Canadian champions past and present now resident here Georgie Pace, Cleveland's world bantamweight champion, will be crownless tonight after going 15 rounds or less, with Lou Salica, challenger from New York.

Promoter Jack Corcoran expects a crowd of more than 10,000 will pay some $20,000 to watch the chocolate soldier defend his title. Majority of them favor Pace, frequent headliner here and the Negro reigns favorite at 6-5.

Ringmen Favor Salica

However, such ringmen as Horace "Lefty" Gwynne, Canadian bantamweight champion, Baby Yack, former bantam champ and Frenchy Belanger, once great flyweight king, are among the fistic elite going out on the limb for Salica, who held the championship in 1935.

"I just watched Salica doing his stuff in the gym," said Gwynne, "and I'll take him any day to pin back the ears of Pace or anyone with his style. Louis is a fast, clever boxer and has a punch. I have seen him in several fights and he has too much of everything plus experience for Pace. We'll have a new world champion when this is over."

Both Are Confident

Comment of the others followed a similar vein.

"I think I can take him," said Pace as he wound up training. "He's supposed to be fast and clever but I've caught up with that kind before. A few solid clouts will bring him around to my speed and I never met a man yet I couldn't hit."

If it was possible for anyone to be more confident than the Clevelander then Salica was.

"Why that guy has never gone 15 rounds yet," Salica chirped. "Then too he's little more than a counter-puncher. A good boxer can always lick that type. There won't be any doubt about who is champion after tonight."

Junior 'Y' Team In Close Race With The Champions

Doing better each time in open competition, the local "Y" Junior Free Style Relay Team swam in fourth place only 2 2-5 seconds behind the Ontario champion Hamilton Aquatic club at the Toronto City Meet at the Central "Y" Saturday night.

The event was the 200 yard Free Style Relay with each of the four swimmers going ten yards farther than the 150 yard race to which the team is more accustomed.

As in last week's relay at the Broadview "Y," Jim Brown, local lead-off man, after getting a slow start, pulled ahead of the field to finish with a body length lead over the other team. Swimmnig second, Don Pinch managed to finish with a slight lead over the Hamilton boys although the Broadview and Central teams were ahead. Then, Ray Routly dived too deep and lost about two body lengths against the fast third men of the other teams and Ralph Rogow, anchor man, swam well to gain a few feet and finish in the time of 1 minute 55 2-5 seconds as compared with Hamilton's time of 1 minute and 53 seconds.

Bruce Campbell, the other member of the team to make the trip swam in the 50 yards Junior Breast Stroke event.

Coach Gord Minty is pleased with the showing made by the lads and is quite confident of a victory over Toronto Central when the two teams meet again in the four "Y" meet at Toronto on Saturday, March 25.

Training Camp Briefs

(By The Associated Press)

CLEARWATER, Fla., Mar. 4 — (AP). — For the first time in the club's history Brooklyn Dodgers started charging admission to intra-squad practice manoeuvres to-day, showing President Leland Stanford Macphail still is figuring the angles. To give the customers a ride for their money the Dodgers will stage a nine-inning game to-day.

ANAHEIM, Calif.—It looks like that $25,000 Connie Mack paid Memphis last fall for Pitcher Herman Besse may pay dividends for Philadelphia Athletics this season. Besse pitched hitless ball for three innings yesterday as the A's trounced Seattle of the Pacific Coast League 6-3 in the first exhibition game of 1940.

LAKELAND, Fla.— Detroit Tigers have that familiar look now. Pete Fox is on the job. "Old Reliable" arrived yesterday to start his eighth season.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. — A seven-inning practice game by teams selected from the ranks of Pittsburg Pirates saw only one extra-base hit — a triple by Rookie Frank Gustine. Pitchers Johnny Gee, Ken Heintzelman, and Oadis Swigart each gave up two hits, but Johnny Lanning and Ray Harrell allowed none.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — While the holdout status of Joe Medwick has received a lot of public attention, there's another heavy slugger St. Louis Cardinals probably are beginning to worry about. He's Catcher Don Padgett, about whom nothing has been mentioned by the management. Medwick will meet with Branch Rickey to-morrow in an attempt at conciliation.

AVALON, Calif. — The hottest battle in Chicago Cubs' camp is for the shortstop berth. The veteran Billy Rogell, obtained from Detroit in a deal for Dick Bartell, is vying with Bobby Mattick, Leonard Merullo, and Bob Sturgeon, all youngsters.

North Toronto Wins

COBOURG, March 4 (Special).—North Toronto defeated Cobourg 26-18 in an O.A.B.A. Intermediate "B" game played here. The return game will be played next Saturday at Toronto. Cobourg entered the playoffs as Eastern Ontario champions. Campbell, one of the star scorers for Cobourg had an off night and was unable to find the basket. Top scorer for Cobourg was John Lucas with 8 points. Levantis scored 10 for North Toronto.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

Out at Omemee tonight, an O.H.A. intermediate "B" return playdown game is listed betwixt Whitby and the Black Hawks. With Whitby taking the first of the points-to-count serial by a 9-6 score, the visiting squad totes a four-goal lead to the Omemee arena this eve. Yet this may not mean too much as most of the goals scored 'gainst the Hawks were tallied in the first period in the dim Whitby rink with Goalie Fisher thinking he was in merry Lunnon during a blackout. Later, the O's got clicking and held their own. It should be quite a brawl and no doubt a number of puck fans from here will motor out to see it.

Comes a card from Fenelon Falls advertising their big annual tourney on March 12, 13 and 14. They call it Ontario's biggest puck tournament, and it's the 27th held there. Two silver cups are up for competition, plus a hundred bucks in prizes to winners and runners-up. The card adds that further info will be mailed later. This is just a tipoff to any local squads which might feel the urge to wind up the ice season with a trip to the Falls and a crack at some real prizes. And we trust the local lads — if any enter — do better than they did a month back in Haliburton! (They kept it a secret for a couple of weeks, though.)

Maybe Here Friday

Secretary Hewitt of the O.H.A. informed the Petes that, if Owen Sound wins its "A" series Tuesday, the Trappers will play the locals here Friday in a round-robin tilt. But if the series is not terminated Tuesday, the Petes will have to journey to either Kitchener or Port Colborne on Friday in their next playoff joust. The Greenshirts go to Port Colborne tomorrow. All the locals are in good shape now, including Art Heal, and anxious for more action. They hope to win the O.H.A. title and tackle either the N.O.H.A. winnah or the Ottawa Valley champs next, if there is ice anywhere to play on—and if the dough holds out.

In Belleville on Saturday after supper, the local girl Orfuns copped a neat cage win over the Quinte basketeers by a 40-12 count. 'Twas the Orfuns' first playdown fray in the L.O.B.A. competition—and we wouldn't be surprised to see 'em go quite a piece this semester. They recently trimmed the Cobourg Grads, 1939 intermediate Ontario winners, in an exhibition joust. Belleville belles will be back here Friday night at nine in the Y.W. to tackle the Orfuns. All the latter gang turned in a fine effort in a rather hard-checking and speedy tilt, with M. Ferguson and A. Livingstone—who is captain—strong on defence, and B. Blade, A. Craig, R. Thompson and R. Ellis prominent in the scoring.

A Five-Point Edge

St. John's junor cagers copped a five-point lead here over Toronto First Avenue boys Saturday night in the Y.W. gym. The local lads won 38-33 in a good showing, having a big margin for three quarters of the lively tussle. But the Saints faded in the last quarter, juggling the players around too much, and the Torontos whittled down the margin a great deal. The St. John's squad plays the return game of this first-round O.C.B.A. series in Toronto on Friday and will have to hustle like all getout to hang onto that five-point lead. But they might do it, at that. Dyer, Stewart and Craig carried off the sniping honors for the winners on Saturday, and neat guard work was shown by Gillespie and Ascott.

Pick Hines, former Petes' coach, is doing right well these days with his Orioles of Baltimore in the U.S. Eastern Amachoor Puck Loop. The Orioles are on top of the six-team setup lately with 33 wins and 18 losses, as Les Patrick's starry N'Yawk Rovers are second with 27 yesses and 20 nopes. Washington, with Roy Covert—you remember Roy here, eh?—aboard, is third. Two Peterborough boys are playing a big part in the Baltimore club's successes, Bill Calladine being among the leading loop scorers, and Ned Vitarelli having a flock of counters and assists to his credit, too. We haven't heard their latest figures. The Orioles are due to play in London shortly and hoped for a tilt here, but chances are against their appearance locally this season.

Yeah, It Looks Like

Quinte columnist admits now: "Looks as though the Petes are as good or maybe better than the usual run of intermediate 'A' clubs in the province. On Friday, Frank Buckland's charges beat Kitchener 5-2 with Honey Tompkins in on three goals. The Petes' real test will come when they meet Owen Sound or Collingwood, however." The Belleville scribe early in the season pooh-pooh'd the idea of a homebrew bunch of Petes doing anything against the wartime Fliers this winter, or going anyhere at all. However, he later confessed the Buckaroos should win their group and travel some distance along the playdown trail. We think so, too.

A couple of important Church Hockey League playoffs are billed for tonight on All Saints' rink—or should we say "in" All Saints' rink? If the rain keeps up, or rather, if the rain comes down—oh, well, the darn' jousts are billed, anyway! It's Park St. vs. Mark St. at seven in a junior final, and All Saints vs. Murray St. at 8.30 in a senior final. Nominations are coming in pretty good for the Ministerial Assoc. trophy but some have not been sent yet. It looks like a tough job for the committee to decide upon, but they'll get around to it in time.

Get First Game Of Series By Five Points

St. John's of this city will carry a 5 point lead into the return game of their first round Ontario junior church basketball series in Toronto next week, after handing First Avenue a 38-33 setback at the Y.W.C.A. Saturday night. The strong local entry completely outplayed the Queen city squad for three quarters of the game, but faded badly in the final minutes of the game, to have their lead reduced to 5 points.

Both teams played top speed basketball for 60 minutes, with St. John's outshooting the opposition most of the way to run up a 15-point lead midway through the last period. The Toronto team rallied strongly in the dying minutes to completely outplay the locals and cut down the deficit. The local used a fast break and a fast passing attack to lead all the way after First Avenue opened the scoring with a free throw early in the game. They turned it on in the dying minutes of the first half to lead 19-9 at that point.

In the opening 10 minutes of the second period, St. John's played their best offensive basketball to run up their lead. First Aven turned it on, and their set sh and clever passing began to pay-off until the winners' margin was reduced to 5 poits.

Dyer, Stewart and Craig dropped in a total of 28 points in a good offensive showing with Ascott and Gillespie starring at guard. Williams, Moores and Andrews stood out for First Avenue as all the team shared in the scoring. The teams:

Toronto First Avenue (33)—Centre, May 4; forwards, Williams 10, Sweezie 4; guards, Wright 2, Moores 8; subs, Bidgood, Andrews 6.

Peterboro St. John's (38)—Centre, Craig 8; forwards, Stewart 8, Dyer 12; guards, Gillespie 3, Ascott 3; subs, Taylor 2, Marshall 2.

Referee—Dr. Worton, Peterborough.

Orfuns Cop Tilt Over Belleville

In the first game of their L.O.B.A. first-round playdowns Saturday night in Belleville, the Peterborough Orfuns took a 40 to 12 victory over the Quinte girl cagers. The return engagement will be in the local Y.W.C.A. at nine o'clock Friday night.

Play was fast the first quarter with the Orfuns racking up a 6-1 edge over Belleville. From then on the visitors gradually pulled away with some fine work, showing more accuracy around the basket and nice checking. They were going away at the finish. The Quinte girls were tall and speedy and played a hard-checking game, but the Orfuns outclassed them in this fray.

All Click Well

Good defensive work was shown M. Ferguson and A. Livingstone, with all the forwards clicking well. A. Craig and B. Blade led the scorers with 10 points each, while R. Thompson had eight and R. Ellis seven. The count was 17-4 at half-time. M. McLean topped the losers with five points. The winners cashed in on six out of nine free tosses, as Belleville got five in ten. The teams:

Orfuns: M. Hawthorne, M. Clarke, B. Blade, A. Livingstone, R. Thompson, A. Craig, M. Ferguson. D. Ackford, R Ellis.

Belleville: M. McLean, M. Miller, M. Cross, H. Richardson, M. Hitchon, P. Rowbotham, J. Muir, I. Corby, J. Sherry, A. Faelick.

Referee, J. Dickens; timer, M. Short; scorer, B. Shorey.

NEW YORK RANGERS TIE TORONTO AND DEFEAT BLACK HAWKS

Seabiscuit Wins Sixth Running Of Santa Anita Handicap

LOS ANGELES, March 4 (AP)—Charles S Howard's mighty Seabiscuit won the sixth running of the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap Saturday before a record crowd of 75,000 to become the greatest money winning horse of all time.

Kayak II, Howard's other entry was second, a length behind his famous stablemate. Whichcee, owned by Major Austin C. Taylor of Vancouver, was third.

Rounding out one of the most amazing chapters in the annals of the American turf, the gallant Seabiscuit rolled down to victory in his third crack at the rich stakes to outgame and outcharge his twelve rivals in a glorious performance that broke the track record.

It was a double triumph for Howard's feared and odds-on favored combination, for his Kayak II, winner of the 1939 Santa Anita Handicap, ran second in a burst of speed that brought him to the front in the closing strides.

Victory for the mighty stake king, which came after a year's layoff and after the horse once was believed through with racing, brought $86,650 nt and sent the Biscuit's all-time earnings soaring beyond the American turf record held by W. S. Kilmer's great Sun Beau. Sea Biscuits victory brought his total to $437,730. Sun Beaus record was $376,744.

Protest Disallowed

Jockey Basil James, aboard Whichcee, pace setter in the 1¼-mile classic, fired a complaint at Seabiscuit, charging Jockey Johnny (Red) Pollard of Edmonton cut in on him at the sixteenth pole. The protest was not allowed, however, and the entry of Seabiscuit and Kayak II paid $3.40, $2.80 and $2.60 across the board. Whichcee paid $3.60 to show.

The roar of the record throng swept behind Seabiscuit and his pal of the saddle as they thundered, one length back of the flying Whichcee, into the first turn and around the fast track.

It was Whichcee three-quarters of a length over the mighty Biscuit, with Wedding Call and Can't Wait, piloted by Johnny Longden of Taber, Alta., pressing close behind as they entered the turn for the stretch.

The lead shifted back and forth a moment under the flying hoofs of Wedding Call, Whichcee and Seabiscuit, but suddenly Seabiscuit moved out in front. Jockey Leon Haas, on the other color bearer, suddenly boomed into the front ranks, and it was Seabiscuit and Kayak II running one two, just as they did one week ago in the San Antonio Handicap.

Wedding Call, owned by W. C. Gaffers and J. H. Sattler, of Los Angeles, ran a surprising fourth, with apprentice Doug Dodson in the saddle.

The betting handle for the handicap was $382,700.

Seabiscuit ran the mile and a quarter in 2:01 1-5. The track record of 2:01 2-5 was set in the big 'cap a year ago by Kayak II.

Kayak's second brought more money to the Howard stable. The San Francisco sportsman won $20,000 for second, Whichcee $10,000 for third, and Wedding Call $5,000 for fourth.

Order of Finish

Finishing back of these in order were War Plumage, fifth; Heelfly, sixth; Viscounty, seventh; Can't Wait, eighth; Specify, ninth; Royal Crusader, tenth; Don Mike, eleventh; Rae II, twelfth, and Kahtan, thirteenth and last.

Hysterical, an overnight entry, was declared out of the race. He is a stablemate of George W. Strattons Heelfly.

Jockey Pollard, like his gallant mount, "a comeback kid," saw a jockey's dream come true as he galloped Seabiscuit to the winner's circle.

"Seabiscuit is a grand old horse and he was in grand condition," he grinned. "When I went to the top at the eighth pole I knew I had it from there on in."

It was Pollard's second try for handicap laurels on the back of the 7-year-old bay. In 1937 he rode the Biscuit against Rosemont. The following year he was grounded by injury.

In 1939, when Seabiscuit broke down while preparing for the big race, Pollard was on crutches with a broken leg.

He and Seabiscuit were on the comeback trail together Saturday and they came back in smashing fashion.

Alberts Blank Norwood 3-0, Win Round 9-8

NORWOOD, March 4.—(ENS). — Fighting gamely to the last ditch, a weakened Norwood High school lineup were eliminated from the C.O.S.S.A. hockey finals by a single goal, after they had extended Belleville's Albert College entry to their utmost in a hard-fought match, Saturday night at the Norwood arena.

The visitors gaining a 3-0 decision over the homesters in this second of the home-and-home series, won the round 9-8 and thereby captured the Rev of Quinte district championship. A two-goal margain gained by Norwood's 6-6 victory in Belleville, and the further advantage of a familiar playing surface were not quite enough to offset the loss of "Mickey" Puffer from their line-up. Puffer, high-scoring defense star and mainstay of the Norwood squad, had his shoulder broken during the first game of the series, in which he tallied four goals before he was injured in the final period.

After a pair of Belleville counters in the last quarter of the initial canto had deadlocked the round at 8-8, the two teams battled on even terms for over a period and a half until the visitors finally clicked for the winning marker at the twelve minute point in the last session.

A short brawl with Bongard, local net-minder, and Molden the chief combatants took place in the middle frame, to further enliven the match. This occasioned a general stampede of about half the assembled spectators on to the ice surface and the game was temporarily suspended while Referees Carson and Ennis ironed matters out. Molden for trespassing on Bongard's territory and encouraging hostilities was waved off with a minor to settle the affair, which would have amounted to nothing if the crowd had held back. There was a tendency to rough it on several occasions during the game, and eleven penalties in all were distributed, four of which went to Norwood.

Partridge, who scored both of the visitors' goals in the first period, and handed Molden the pass for the winning counter in the last period, was particularly outstanding for the Albert College team. Along with his running mates, Lougheed and Molden, this line formed their threatening forward combination. Latimer turned in a smart effort on the Belleville defense and Christian in goal was also good.

To pick an individual star among the Norwood students would be unfair to the other members of the line-up, which to the last man turned in their best effort. Bongard, who performed a nice chore in the homester's cage, was given maximum support by Gardner, Lobb and Lemon on defense, and two close-checking front lines, Buck and Green, centred by Johnson, and Cole and Morris pivoted by Nelson.

The teams:

Albert College.—Goal, Christian; defence, Francis, Latimer; centre, Partridge; wings, Lougheed, Molden; alternates, Woolley, Powell, Crouch, Bailey, Downing.

Norwood—Goal, Bongard; defense, Gardner, W. Lobb; centre, Johnson; wings Buck Green; alternates, Nelson, Cole, Morris, Lemon.

Referees, J. Carson, Belleville; R. Ennis, Norwood.

New York Team Leads Boston By Three Points

By JACK CALDER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Everything points to a terrific impact when New York Rangers and Boston Bruins stage two meetings next week—easily the two most important games of the National Hockey League schedule.

The Rangers pulled up their socks during the week-end, after a series of in-and-out performances, and moved three points ahead of the Bruins in the fight for first place by tying the Maple Leafs 1-1 at Toronto on Saturday and defeating the Black Hawks 2-1 at Chicago on Sunday. Those tidy happenings left the Broadway Blueshirts well within shooting range of the title, despite the fact that they have only three games to play and the Bruins six.

So the N.H.L. championship, which goes to the club finishing on top, will be at stake when the Rangers and the Bruins collide at Boston a week from to-morrow and again at New York two nights later.

The Rangers played snugly against the Leafs before a throng of 13,846 customers, realizing that no team had been able to win games in both Toronto and Chicago on successive nights this season. Pete Langelle, rising rapidly to big-league stardom, punched a Toronto goal in the second period and the Rangers opened up only between that time and the moment Bryan Hextall tied the score in the third.

At Chicago the Rangers caught the Hawks minus Mush March, Art Wiebe, and Les Cunningham, and made sure of victory before a season's record attendance of 18,114. Earl Seibert sent Chicago ahead in the second, but Kilby MacDonald levelled the count late in the same period. Wilf Hiller shot the winning goal midway through the third.

Meanwhile the Red Wings helped the Rangers' cause by defeating Boston 6-3 in a wild affair at Detroit. Woody Dumart gave the Bruins an early lead, but Alex Motter scored twice, Mud Bruneteau made good on a penalty shot, and Cecil Dillon tallied soon after the third period began to give Detroit a 4-1 advantage.

Misconduct penalties to Milt Schmidt and Johnny Shewchuk, for arguing against minor sentences, had knocked some of the starch out of the Bruins in the second period. Roy Conacher scored twice for them in the third, but Joe Fisher and Ken Kilrea kept the Wings well ahead with their fifth and sixth goals.

While the battle for first place remained studded in deep doubt, the struggle for the sixth and last playoff place was considerably clarified. The sixth-place Americans tied the Canadiens 3-3 at Montreal on Saturday and then defeated them 3-0 at New York on Sunday.

That left the Americans seven points up on the last-place Canadiens. Each team has five games to go.

The Habitants fought desperately both times, only to wilt in the face of rallies. At Montreal Pat Egan and Harvey Jackson gave the New Yorkers an early 2-0 lead, but goals by Bill Summerhill, Armand Mondou, and Louis Trudel had the Canadiens in front by the time five minutes of the second had passed.

Then Johnny Gagnon, traded by the Canadiens to the Americans early in the campaign, came back to haunt his teammates with the tying goal. The rest of the weekend was disastrous.

For more than half the game in New York the Canadiens fought against the seemingly inevitable. Murray Armstrong finally put the Americans ahead late in the second period and Tommy Anderson and Hooley Smith completed the humiliation in the third.

Great Horse Sets New Record

Seabiscuit, seven-year-old iron horse, won his big chance in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap in California on Saturday to beat Sun Beau's all-time money-winning record of $376,744 and set a new mark of $437,730. In the saddle ABOVE) is Jockey Johnny (Red) Pollard.

Canadians Are In Spotlight At Santa Anita Seabiscuit Is Ridden By Alberta Jockey

Canadians commanded the spotlight in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap at the picturesque, Arcadia, Cal., racetrack Saturday, where Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit charged to a history-making victory. Riding Seabiscuit was Johnny (Red) Pollard, an Edmonton, Alta., boy, who campaigned extensively on Western Canada tracks for several seasons and who also appeared on Ontario tracks at one time. Handling the brilliant field at the new electric starting gates was George (Red) Palmer, former starter at Dufferin, Long Branch, Devonshire and Kenilworth tracks. Palmer, who hails from Melville, Sask., was installed as starter at Santa Anita this winter, succeeding Eddie Thomas.

Whichcee, third in the big race and second last year, is owned by Major Austen C. Taylor of Vancouver.

Nick Wall, who rode Kantan; George Woolf, aboard Heelfly, and Johnny Longden, aboard Can't Wait, are other Canadian products figuring in Santa Anita's latest turf classic.

Gold yield for Western Australia reached an all-time high of $58,750,000 last year.

Bowie Track Stables Are Swept By Fire

BOWIE, Md., March 4 — (AP). —Five racing thoroughbreds died in their stalls early to-day and 54 others were driven to safety with pitchforks as fire swept the main stables of the Bowie Race Track.

The blaze roared through five large frame stables, the trainers' kitchen, and the track blacksmith shop. One hundred and eighty-four stalls were destroyed.

Preliminary estimates of damage ranged around $50,000.

The five horses burned were Eudes, I. Betsy, and Lau Tautrie, owned by J. J. Martin, and Setemup and an unidentified two-year-old, owned by K. D. Kolseth.

ONE FALSE STEP

BY KATHRN BEMIS

SATURDAY'S ACTION

While undergoing her beauty treatment in preparation for her first screen test, Janis reviews in her mind what has hapened since she arrived in Hollywood and wonders about what Dr. Black and what he thinks of her. When she emerges from the shop she sees Rock in her car but Lucinda, who had been with him, is gone. Rock and Janis go for a drive which culminates in their geting married secretly. Rock insists on the secrecy because of their film possibilities. Arriving at Janis' home Rock leaves her at the door, on the pretense that he must go to his room and study his role. Janis, in her room, suddenly becomes hysterical.

CHAPTER X

THE alarmed Maud, hearing the hysterical outburst, came running upstairs, knocked on Janis' closed door. "Mis' Sheldon, honey—dinnah's waitin'—is you sick?"

The sympathetic voice jarred Janis back to reason. She flung the booklet into a nearby desk, hastily dried her eyes. She answered: I'm —all right, Maud. But I dont care for dinner."

Maud opened the door a crack and peered cautiously at her mistress. The light shining on Maud's black hair greased to slinky straightness, suddenly struck Janis as grotesquely funny. She let out a high-pitched giggle, making the whites of Maud's eyes widen. Had her mistress gone clean daffy?

The girl's evident alarm somewhat sobered Janis now. She managed unsteadily: "I'd like a cup of tea, Maud—but dinner is out."

"I's fixed that corn pone you-all likes," tempted Maud. "An' baked ham and yams."

"I'm sorry—I'm not hungry. Invite in that Pullman porter you're so fond of if you like."

"Yes'um—thank you, ma'm—but I was fixin' to ask if I needs to stay here tonight. There's a party down to my lodge—I'll be home first thing in the mornin'."

Lonely

A look of bewilderment crossed Janis' drawn features. Even Maud wanted to leave her alone—on her wedding night.

She sighed, said dully: "Yes—go if you wish."

She had no fear of being alone in the house now; could take no interest in anything—not even in her own well-being. One of the rigid rules Janis made when hiring Maud was that she must remain in the house nights, even though she returned late on her evenings off. What assistance the excitable Maud would be in the case of emergency in the dark of night Janis had no idea; but her presence in the house lent a certain sense of security. At least, she was another breathing human being within call.

Maud hastily withdrew and went down the stairs muttering to herself. These queer goings-on had made her nearly as upset as her mistress, especially so now when a lot of her good cooking would go to waste.

But the cheese soufle, cinnamon toast and hot tea which Maud presently brought up made the world seem a little brighter to Janis. Nothing was ever as bad as it seemed, she thought, and she had given way to nerves. She had acted silly and she wouldn't do it again. Rock had so much better sence than she. No wonder he had thought her filled with silly sentiment. He knew that both of them must be alert for tomorrow. He was naturally more determined than ever now to make good financially. Didn't he have a wife to support?

After she had satisfied the healthy appetite she had not realized she had, her spirits drooped again. The evening wore on dismally. Oddly enough, it was the first one in weeks that no one dropped in or telephoned; and by nine o'clock she was desperately lonely, so restless she couldn't sit still. She began to pace the sitting room.

Into the Night

By 10 o'clock she had a mad impulse to get out into the fresh night air. Evening walks alone on nearly deserted sidewalks were not too pleasant and, although she would have preferred to walk, she slipped into a warm wool coat, dashed bare-headed out to the garage and backed out her car.

As she swung into the street, she abruptly decided to go to Lucinda, listen to her spicy chatter for an hour. Then she would be in a better frame of mind, return home to sleep —she hoped. Lucinda never went to bed until well after midnight, even if she were alone in her bungalow. She said people wasted too much time sleeping, although whatever constructive thing Lucinda accomplished by sitting up all night, Janis could not figure out.

Janis let the speedometer register forty, and with the windows down, shivered through the icy mountain air all the way to Hollywood. The gnawing pain of Rock's behavior crept insidiously through her consciousness again, and she was unable to shake it off. If she could only tell Lucinda about her marriage, get her advice, her sympathy even. Then abruptly, she wondered why she should need sympathy—she a bride of a few hours, and madly in love with her husband.

She drew up before the row of squatty little homes which ran far back from the street on a court. She pulled the brake, jumping out of her car. She ran with lightning feet to the last bungalow in the rear. There was a light behind the drawn curtains. Lucinda was home!

Surprising Discovery

The doorknob turned provokingly slow in Janis' cold stiff grasp. Noiselessly, she shoved back the door and entered the tiny dark hall. On the threshold of the dimly lighted living room, she halted in quick dismay.

There close beside Lucinda on a love-seat, sat Rock Concver!

"Oh, I didn't expect—to find you here," Janis wabbled thinly.

He stood up, plainly disturbed. His smile was a limpid make-believe as he stood there staring at her. Then he chopped out: "Well, lock who's here! Why in the deuce are you out at this time of night?

He came forward, shoved her into a chair, glared down at her severely.

This assured masterfulness only increased her anger, but she could not find her voice.

Lucinda dubbed out her cigarette and drawled huskily: "Let the poor child alone, Rock. She probably got lonely—started out to look for you."

Janis sat rigidly upright in her chair, the blue eyes in her white face blazing like Klieg lights.

"Indeed I was not looking for him —but this was the last place I expected to see him. He evidently found his appetite after he left me."

She tossed her head toward the remains of dinner for two on a nearby table. Two cups, two plates, two knives, two forks, two spoons, buried themselves in her memory. Oh, why had Rock done this?

His Excuse

"But, darling—I'd no idea you'd care." Lucinda sounded sweetly anxious. "I promised to help Rock with his part in 'Crazy Day'—and heaven knows he needs it! We hadn't started on it yet—but if you'd like to criticize, we'll get busy. Let me have the script, Rock."

Rock reached slowly inside his coat pocket. Janis rose. This abrupt move of Lucinda to camouflage whatever hold she had on Rock made Janis see her own position more clearly. Specially now when Rock's hand came away from his pocket—empty.

"You forgot to bring the script, Rock. How—unfortunate!" Clipped scorn was in Janis' voice.

Before he could frame an excuse, she wheeled swiftly and sailed out the door, her head flung high, her heart frantic with torn dreams.

Automatically, she climbed into her car, started the engine. She was switching on the headlights when Rock appeared. Without speaking, he opened the door, stepped inside and slumped down in the seat beside her.

"Going somewhere?" she flung out furiously.

"Don't be a little goose!" he snapped back. "I'm seeing you safely home and that's that!"

He sighed, settled back in the seat, as if he were charged with the thankless task of curbing an incorrigible child.

Janis shrugged and threw him a scornful glance, gave the car gas and they were off. She riveted her attention now on the pavement, stretching far ahead, like an enticing path to some unknown Utopia.

After they had gone a few blocks he said, impatiently: "You're a jealous creature, aren't you? I had no idea of going to Lucinda's when I left you tonight—but she phoned and one thing led to another—and, well, I needed help with the script, so I went over for dinner. What's wrong with that?"

He's Not Convincing

"It's not very convincing, that's all. We'd just been married—and you go directly to Lucinda."

"But can't you realize—I have to make a success of my part in that picture—now that I've a wife."

Already her anger was melting. His presence, his voice, was obliterating her reason again.

"Oh—perhaps I was hasty and snippy—but——"

His arm on the back of the seat dropped to her shoulder. He laid his cheek against hers. "It's all right, darling," he said, making her nearly believe it. "But you forget we're keeping it a secret. If I don't go round to see Lou as usual, what would she think?"

A stab of protest, resentment, shot through Janis. She thought swiftly: "Is this one of the things that makes secret marriages difficult?"

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T GET TOO PROUD

PLENTY OF the good scores you get depend upon factors which are completely beyond your control. There are contracts which would be beaten beyond peradventure of a doubt except for the luck of a fortuitous lead. Maybe the opening leader is in such a position that any lead he makes will give you your contract, whereas if his partner had the lead it would be impossible for you to succeed. Sometimes it may pay us to recall the old question: "Oh, why should the spirit of Mortal be proud?"

East could have made a worthwhile sacrifice bid of grand slam against this, but expected to take two tricks with his aces. He led the club A, and was chagrined to see it ruffed. North thereupon took a round of trumps and five hearts, discarding one of dummy's diamonds on the last one. At the end he gave up a diamond trick to East's A.

If West had been in the lead, and had seen fit to lead the diamond Q, the contract could have been beaten two tricks by double-dummy defense. If declarer ducked this, West then could have switched to a heart to give his partner a ruff. If North had covered the diamond Q with the K, East after winning could have underled his diamond J to West's 10 and then have obtained his heart ruff.

The hand is just one more illustration of the difficulties encountered by the poor defenders and therefore the advantages enjoyed by the declarer.

Swedes Rally

Stockholm, March 4 (CP-Havas) SEVERAL thousand Swedish workers registered today for non-military service in Finland. They will replace Finns called to the front in certain categories of civilian work, particularly in the building and mechanical trades.

The first group of 1,500 will leave next week and 9,000 are expected to go in all.

Leaves Cancelled

Rome, March 4 (CP-Havas) ARMY authorities announced today that special leaves given to Italian troops during the winter no longer will be granted. This step was ordered, it was stated, because most of the men now under the colors are of the younger classes and their training should not be interrupted.

How He Wins

State College, Pa., March 4 (AP) NORWOOD (Barney) EWELL blames his speed which smashed a couple of world's records on a pair of sore feet. It's as simple as A-B-C the way Penn State's Negro track star puts it: "When those dogs are barking, I just ran as fast as I can get it over with fast. Then my feet don't hurt me as long!"

Potato Price Holds Steady At $1.15 Per Bag

The last of the crop of McIntosh Reds appeared in Norman Moncrief's display of apples on the produce market on Saturday, although there may still be some odds and ends of stock available for the next week or two. In fact, there may be other growers who have a remnant supply, but in both quantity and quality the McIntosh variety passed the peak of its season quite a while ago.

The Moncrief prices were 45 cents a peck for Reds and Northern Spies, 35 cents a peck for Ontarios, Tolmans, and Russets, and 30 cents for Milwaukees and Snows. Nobody ever mentions the tail-enders of seasons gone by, the Ben Davis. It has been improved out of countenance.

Leo Cann of Port Hope quoted $1.50 and $1.75 a bushel for Northern Spies.

Potatoes were unchanged in price. R. Kinsman & Sons of Campbellcroft tagged his Cobblers at $1.10 and White Stars at $1.15. J. Healey of Westwood had Cobblers at $1.10.

The supply of fresh meat was up to the recent average. George Mullen of Smith sold baby beef at 13 and 15 cents and pork at the same price. Harry Gill's prices were: Lamb 20 and 22 cents, pork 13 and 15 cents, beef 12 and 14 cents, and veal 16 and 18 cents. W. Lang of South Monaghan offered pork at 13 and 15 cents. The dealers reported business good.

On the upstairs market eggs were rather plentiful, opening aroupd 25 cents and declining to 22 cents and finally ending up 20 cents.

Butter was 28 to 30 cents and chickens 22 cents, with hens 18 cents.

Vegetable prices quoted by Harold Doig were one dollar a bushel for carrots and parsnips and one dollar a fifty-pound bag for onions.

Men In Every Walk In Life Pay Tribute To Memory Of Al Sharpe

Allan Sharpe died in his country's service as surely as though he had been killed in action during the Great War, Rev. G. S. Easton of Trinity United church declared Saturday afternoon at the funeral service of the popular business man who died unexpectedly on Wednesday night.

Mr. Easton said that medical men had informed him that Mr. Sharpe's death at the age of 42 years was an aftermath of his years in the trenches with Canadian troops in the Great War, and that had it not been for that fact he would probably be alive today.

The number of people present at the service at Trinity United church surprised even those who were Al Sharpe's closest friends, for the huge church was filled to its doors. Every association in which men band themselves in Peterborough had at least two representatives and the business section of the city was present in full force. It was the most widely attended funeral in Peterborough in many years, with no exceptions.

The flag-draped coffin bearing the remains of a Peterborough boy who had gone at the age of 17 years to fight to maintain the right, was borne from the church by six men who represented his community in its last tribute. They were George Gimblett, senior, president of the Canadian Legion, William English, president of the Kiwanis club, Morley Plunkett, Don Carr, Vern Selkirk, and Chris Hughes.

City Well Represented

Among the groups represented at the funeral were the City and County councils, the Board of Education, the Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Legion, the Fish and Game Protective Association, the Peterborough Curling club, the medical, dental and legal professions, the Business Men's Association, the Public School and Collegiate teaching staffs, and many others. Although he was a young man at the time of his death, the faces at his funeral were not all young faces, as would ordinarily be the case, but were of all ages, evidence of the fact that Al Sharpe was held in highest regard by all people in the community.

"Grief more general, sorrow more widespread than usual, is evidenced in this community as we stop to pay homage to a young man taken just at the time in his life when he was reaching toward his highest service to his family and to humanity in general," declared Mr. Easton. Tribute was being paid to him as a citizen of Canada and of the British Empire, who had recognized the call of a high duty when a youth of 17 years. "We pay our tribute of gratitude to one who has given himself and now his life that truth and justice as it is known in the British Empire may prevail," he declared.

Formed Lasting Friendship

He paid tribute to his ability to form lasting friendships, and to his willingness to serve in any worthwhile cause, reviewing his life since his return from France as illustration of that willingness, pointing to his leadership in Kiwanis, in the Business Men's association, in the Fish and Game Protective Association, in the Canadian Legion, in his church.

God's way of measuring life's extent is not our way, said Mr. Easton. Humans set up their own standards of hours, days, years, but God has his own standards. Too often men judge their lives by the number of years they life, while God, he said, measures lives by accomplishment. Al Sharpe's life, he maintained, had been filled with worthwhile accomplishment and was as complete as is that of some men who pass the three score and ten mark. He pointed to Jesus, to Lincoln, as men whose lives had been short yet complete. "God," he said, "is not so concerned about the length of our years as He is by the height of our reach. For death is not the end, but the vestibule through which we pass into the greater life."

Interment was at Little Lake cemetery.

Harwood Has Scare As Team Runs Away

HARWOOD, March 4—(ENS). — A tragedy was narrowly averted at Harwood on Friday afternoon when a team of horses, hitched to a sleigh owned by C. Linton ran away.

The team was left standing in front of the mill when they became startled and ran down the main street at terrific speed. They straddled a tree, breaking the tongue and seperated them from the sleigh. Then they took to the open space on the lake, continuing at their wild gallop until they reached their home about three miles down the lake short. A small child was on the road in the pathway of the runaway until the onlookers shouted and the child scuttled to safety in time.

The owner of the team, not to be outdone, hitched up the horses and returned to the mill.

Scotland Yard Probes Vast British Supply Ministry Deals

Secret Court Trying War Official

Contracting System Is Shaken Up, Ex-Convict Involved

LONDON, Mar. 5 — (CP). — Assembly of the War Office Secret Court was announced to-day as the London newspapers continued to express concern over the Supply Ministry's conduct of its vast purchasing.

The court met to question an unnamed War Office colonel reported to have recommended a discharged convict to the Supply Office as a contractor's agent. There were reports Scotland Yard had completed an investigation of the entire wartime contracting system. Other developments included the dismissal of three Supply Ministry employees.

Reports persisted that Prime Minister Chamberlain planned to make his third wartime Cabinet reorganization in the near future. Anthony Eden, member of the Government but not of the War Cabinet as Dominions Secretary, is rumored as in line for advancement.

Dutch Claim Nazis Practice Gliding For Raids On Britain

LONDON, March 5—(CP).—Dispatches from Rottendam, saying that a plan has been reevaled by which German bombers would make a gliding attack on Great Britain, were published in several London morning papers today.

The plan is that the bombers would climb to a height of 30,000 feet in Germany, cut their motors and glide across the Netherlands to the vicinity of Utrecht where they would again climb to 30,000 feet, again cut their motors, and glide across the North Sea at one of its narrowest points.

Thus they would be able to approach Britain without being detected by sound devices.

The dispatches said that bombers are already rehearsing, as evidenced by mysterious Very lights seen over various parts of Holland recently. It was charged that these lights are sent up by Nazi sympathizers for the benefit of Nazi pilots in training.

Dozen More Vessels Loaded Or Loading At Rottendam Base

LONDON, March 5 (CP)—Five Italian ships were taken to the contraband control base off Deal, southeastern England, today in the dispute between Britain and Italy over Italian imports of German coal.

Following announcement by the minister of economic warfare, Ronald Cross, in the house of comons that two Italian vessels carrying German coal had already been detained, two British destroyers tonight escorted three more Italian vessels to the Downs control base where the other Italian ships were anchored.

Prizes of War

Mr. Cross said that any German coal now exported from Rotterdam to Italy is subject to seizure as a prize of war and added that such exports "now have ceased."

The British action followed closely on publication of Italy's protest against the blockade, which said it endangered the "economic and political relations" of the two countries as established by the Italian-British accord of April 16, 1938.

Seventeen Italian ships have been loading coal at Rotterdam, six sailed for Italy yesterday and the others were ready to get under way. An Amsterdam dispatch said four more of the Italian ships sailed today.)

Italy is dependent on foreign fuel sources. Of the 11,000,000 tons of coal imported by Italy last year 60 per cent came from Germany. Though the two nations have a common frontier, insufficient rolling stock is available for transportation of much greater coal supplies at present.

LONDON, March 5 — (CP). — Stroke and counter-stroke in the struggle over Germany's attempt to break Britain's control of the seas today matched a report of the probable destruction of a German submarine by air attack against the loss of a British merchantman and possible loss of two others.

A Royal Air Force plane scouting Schillig Roads, German naval stronghold off the Elbe River in Heligoland Bight, scored a direct hit on a submarine lying at the surface of shallow water, the Air Ministry announced last night.

"Four bombs were dropped, one of which registered a direct hit between the conning tower and the stern," said the Ministry.

Britain Issuing War Loan Of Over Billion

LONDON, Mar. 5 — (CP). — A new £300,000,000 ($1,335,000,000) war loan was announced in the House of Commons to-day by Sir John Simon Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The loan is to be for a period of 15 to 19 years, to yield three per cent. interest and to be issued at par, Sir John said.

Lists will be opened next Tuesday and closed the following day.

The loan will be redeemable at par October 15, 1959, with the Treasury reserving the right to redeem the issue in whole or in part any time after October 15, 1955.

Ten per cent. of all subscriptions will be payable on application and the balance on April 15, the Chancellor continued. The minimum subscription is £10 and the maximum £1,000.

"The Government's appeal for subscriptions to a large loan had necessarily to be delayed until it was felt the market was ripe for the issue," Sir John said.

"I am taking the somewhat unusual step of announcing the terms of the loan a week in advance of the opening of the lists in order that investors may have ample time to make any arrangements which may be necessary to enable them to sub-

Seaboard Storm Damage Runs In Millions

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—Utility companies and property owners today estimated in the millions the damage left by the worst rain and sleet storm, to visit North Atlantic seaboard states in a quarter of a century. Six deaths were caused by the storm.

Public and private emergency crews worked all night to patch crippled communication and power systems, interrupted fire-alarm circuits, and block traffic.

The most apparent damage was in northern New Jersey, New York city and suburban Westchester county and Long Island areas which were on the fringe of the $500,000,000 storm of 1938, the greatest in the history of the United States.

Riding a northeasterly wind that reached velocities as high as 70 miles an hour, the rain that began Saturday froze as it fell early yesterday, then last night it turned to snow. Strong tides pounded the New Jersey and New England coasts to add to the damage.

Power lines snapped leaving many communities without heat, light or telephone service. Thousands of trees and bushes were crushed.

NoCanadianPost For Devonshire?

LONDON, March 5—(CP Cable). —"Peterborough's" counn in the Daily Telegraph, "London Day by Day," says the Duke of Devonshire, Under-Secretary for the Dominions, has expressed unwillingness to take up the Governor Generalship of Canada, and adds that Lord Granville, Lord Airlie or the Earl of Athlone now are mentioned for appointment to succeed the late Lord Tweedsmuir.

Earl Granville, better known as Admiral William Leveson Gower, succeeded his brother to the Earldom in 1939. He has retired from the sea and has been Governor of the Isle of Man since 1937.

He is 59. Lady Granville is an older sister of Queen Elizabeth, being daughters of the 14th Earl of Strathmore.

The Earl of Airlie, aged 46, is a Lord Chamberlain to the Queen, a wealthy Scottish landowner, and a veteran of the last war.

The Earl of Athlone is the 65-year-old brother of Queen Mary. He was Governor-General of the Union of South Africa from 1923 to 1931.

UK Set For Wave Of Shipping Raid, Dutch Protest 9 Attacks In 2 Days

LONDON, March 5 (CP)—The sea and air power of Great Britain today set itself for the third wave of Germany's attacks on her shipping.

Signs pointed to intensified aerial attacks on the sea lanes and to vigorous British counter-measures, presumably through constant patrolling of the skies, engaging the enemy before it can pounce on shipping.

Winston Churchill's decision to arm all British merchantmen has been put into effect and the merchant marine will be able to give a good account of itself in its own defence.

Germany's air force appeared ready to attempt the job at which the submarine and the mine have fallen short of Nazi hopes. Submarine attacks have dropped appreciably with the destruction of an estimated 50 of the craft and the probable loss of more than 3,000 trained submarine personnel. Similarly, diligent work by sturdy mine-sweepers has lowered the casualties by mines around the British Isles to a comparatively negligible figure in recent weeks.

But the German air force is steadily increasing its activity over the sea . First it experimented for weeks on small British trawlers, raking them pitilessly with bomb and machine gun.

Now the air attack has spread to larger craft, and to neutral shipping.

9 Raids In 2 Days

AMSTERDAM, March 5.—(CP-Havas)—The bombing or machine-gunning of nine Dutch ships in two days brought renewed expressions of indignation against Germany in the Netherlands today.

Two seamen were killed and many were wounded in the series of attacks carried out by Nazi aircraft at various points in the North Sea. The vessels attacked were the Limburg, 345 tons, the Wasa, Amazone, Boekelo, De Ruyeter, the Sint Annaland, 2,248 tons, the Schieland, 2,249 tons, the Rijnstroom, 855 tons, and the Elziena, 197 tons. The Elziena was sunk.

"Such acts," said the Rotterdamsche Courant, "have caused great indignation.

"This manner of conducting the war is a flagrant offense against neutral right, like torpedoing without warning.

"There can be no doubt about the identity of the aggressor, since members of the crew of the Elziena spoke of a German plane.

"We hope our government will protest vigorously at Berlin and it will be supported by the entire Dutch population."

3 Fliers Found Dead In Cabin

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., March 5 (CP) —How three Quebec Province men lost in the Labrador timberland vainly awaited the arrival of a trapper whose coming would have saved their lives was revealed today in a six-word inscription in the cabin that was their tomb.

While hunger and cold gnawed at their strength last fall, one of the three whose bodies were found last Wednesday pencilled on the cabin floor:

Why doesn't McNeill come this fall?"

The man they waited for was James McNeill, the trapper who found the bodies of Pilot Joseph Fecteau and G. H. Davidson, of Montreal and J. C. Cote of Beaumont, Quebec. In the fall of 1938, he had visited his camp near Bleak Little Harbor about Oct. 16 ,and he had written his name and the date in the cabin.

But this year he was late making the rounds of his trapline. The three Quebec men, lost last September while on an airplane flight to Labrador timber holdings, had died long before he mushed up to the cabin.

In a wireless message from Hopedale, Labrador, McNeill today expressed belief the lost men had died of starvation. Seeing the date in his inscription, he thought, they had stayed at the cabin expecting him to turn up before the onset of winter.

Almost Circled Viipuri City Lines Fight On

HELSINKI, March 5 (AP)—The defenders of Viipuri, after battling all day yesterday with Russians attacking across the islands of the Bay of Viipuri, still were fighting in this strategic area today, the Finnish high command announced in its daily communique.

The invading Russians were attempting to encircle the city, long deserted by civilians and considered virtually lost even by the Finns themselves.

In addition to attacking the islands in the bay, the Reds attacked the northwest shore of the bay, from where they presumably could drive overland against Viipuri from the rear.

"On the isthmus enemy attacks against the islands in the Bay of Viipuri and the northwest shore of the bay continued all day March 4," said the communique. "Fighting continues on the capes at the mouth of the bay; at all other points attacks were repulsed."

U.K. Press Splits On Issue Of Aiding Finns

LONDON, March 5—(CP).—The Times said editorially today the "whole sentiment of this country demands that Finland should not be allowed to fall."

But Lord Beaverbrook's newspapers, the Standard and Daily Express, urged the government not to intervene in a military way in the fight between Finland and her invader, Soviet Russia. The Standard suggested a parliamentary debate.

Kermit Roosevelt, son of the late Theodore Roosevelt, in a broadcast last night said his international volunteers are "going to fight for the whole civilized world against Russia —the modern infidel."

Meanwhile the King received in audience Thomas Maitland Snow, former Minister to Finland. Snow was succeeded February 7 by George Gordon Vereker.

Canucks Popular In British Isles As Rich, Poor Vie In Hospitality

ALDERSHOT, Eng., March 5 — (CP).—The outstretched hands of friendship and warm-hearted hospitality are being showered on the new edition of the Canadian overseas army by the people of the British Isles, just as they did to the boys of the C.E.F. during that other war 25 years ago.

On arrival of the first flight of the contingent, December 17, letters began to pour into headquarters of the various units inviting officers and other ranks to Christmas dinner. They met the same gesture at New Year's and again when the troops stepped out of leave.

In the town of Aldershot itself, Woking and other communities near the Canadian encampment, homes of rich and poor alike have been thrown open to the popular Canucks.

More recently an ever-increasing number of invitations has come from wealthy estate owners, offering their palatial residences as convalescent retreats. Actually, there has been more accommodation than cases.

Hundreds of average citizens, living in more modest circumstances throughout the United Kingdom, have shown an eager desire to do something for this new generation of Canadian volunteers, come to fight by the side of the Motherland.

Every day the camp postman brings in a quota of such letters to Lieut.-Col. H. A. Kent, of Kingston, Ont., senior chaplain for the division, and to Major T. H. Stewart, M.C., senior Church of England padre from Saint John.

"Do you happen to know of a soldier who has no one to knit for him, or still worse no one to write an occasional letter?" wrote a woman from the Midlands. "It must be very galling to be the odd man out when the mails arrive, so I would like to help someone in this position. It would make me very happy to knit for him and send him other comforts. I do hope you will find some decent, appreciative fellow who will fill the bill and so make life a little easier for a lonely Tommy."

Another writes from Llandudno, Wales, that the door of her home is always open to any Canadian soldier.

"I feel full particulars should be supplied about our home and surroundings," she remarks, "because I should certainly wish our guest to be happy. If that could be managed I would like him to feel he has a home on this side until the time arrives when he can return to the comforts of his own."

Shenandoah Tiptoes Back To Sinking Homes While Miners Probe Depths Beneath

SHENANDOAH, Pa., March 5.—(AP)—The earth's surface sagged anew today in this undermined anthracite town.

In scattered sections of a 16-block area, widened cracks appeared in walls and pavements. The slow sinking of homes and business houses ceased temporarily late yesterday after some shifted downward as much as 20 inches in the cavein of old mine workings deep underground.

Early today some residents of the cave-in section—most heavily populated part of this community of 21,000—heard faint rumblings much like those that sent 3,000 fleeing threatened buildings early yesterday.

Coal company engineers, state mine inspectors and a local committee went into the honeycomb of diggings to seek the cause of the worst caveins in the history of Pennsylvania's great anthracite fields.

C.C.F. Cleric M.P.P. Held Disloyal For His Rap At National Anthem

REGINA, Mar. 5 — (CP).—J. F. Herman (SC Melville) charged in the Saskatchewan Legislature yesterday that Rev. T. C. Douglas, C.C.F., member for Weyburn in the recently dissolved House of Commons, "did not play the part of a loyal British subject."

Speaking during the budget debate, Mr. Herman said he had evidence that Mr Douglas, addressing a Coronation Day celebration in Outram, Sask., on May 12, 1937, had declared before nearly 400 persons, of whom about 200 were children, that "we have sung God Save the King long enough."

"I repeat, that if the report I have is correct concerning Mr. Douglas' remarks before the Coronation celebration, Mr. Douglas is not a loyal British subject," Mr. Herman said.

C.C.F. members of the Legislature protested the remarks and Mr. Herman replied, "Oh, you don't need to get concerned, I am going to file affidavits to prove what I say."

Mr. Herman then proceeded to read one affidavit, sworn by Arthur Gergum of Torquay, Sask., to the effect that he had been at the Outram meeting and had heard Mr. Douglas say "that we had sung God Save the King long enough, particularly in front of all the children." Mr. Herman then filed with the Clerk two other sworn statements which he said were to the same effect.

One of these was an affidavit taken by Arthur St. Onge of Torquay which stated that he had heard Mr. Douglas make the statement "that we had sung God Save the King long enough, and that we didn't need a king and queen. We should be separated from the British crown or words meaning that, and that is what turned me against Mr. Douglas, it just made my blood boil."

Mr. Herman led up to the incident by saying he was going to discuss Mr. Douglas' attitude to war.

"I say to you, that when a member swears allegiance to the crown, he should be loyal," Mr. Herman said. "When he does that which is not loyal, he should be condemned. That applies to T. C. Douglas."

G. H. Williams, leader of the C.C.F. opposition, questioned the member's right to "impute disloyalty to a member of the House of Commons."

Mr. Herman said he had heard a Communist in Regina after the visit of the King and Queen, say that having seen the Queen, he could not continue to be a Communist, yet an elected member of Parliament said before a group of children at a public meeting that "We have sung God Save the King long enough."

Ontario Lists See 207 Hats In Ring

Total Nominations Expected To Be Short Of 310 In '35

TORONTO, March 5 (CP).—Less than a week from official nomination day, 207 Ontario candidates have entered the Federal election campaign for the province's 82 seats in the House of Commons.

This number may be added to before nominations close next Monday but the total will probably be far short of the 310 who fought it out in Ontario in the 1935 Dominion elections.

In the last election 78 Reconstruction candidates made a bid in Ontario. None was elected. There is no longer a Reconstruction party.

Of the 207 names now in nomination, National Government adherents under Conservative Leader Manion lead with a representative in each of the 82 constituencies. The Liberal party has named 79 candidates. Next comes the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation with 25. Other groups are: Independent Liberal, five; Independent, five; New Democracy, three; Communist, two; and one each for the hyphenated labels of Labor-Farmer, Conservative-Labor, U.F.O.-Labor, National-Liberal-Progressive, Farmer-Labor, and Liberal-Progressive.

44 in Last House.

Of the Liberal Party's 79 candidates, 44 were members of the last House; 22 Conservatives, running as National Government candidates, are seeking re-election.

Miss Agnes Macphail, the only woman nominee so far, is again contesting the Grey-Bruce constituency as United Farmer-Labor candidate. She is opposed by Liberal and National Government candidates.

H. A. MacKenzie, member of the last House, is seeking re-election as Liberal-Progressive in Lambton-Kent, against C. S. Stonehouse, National Government.

To date all constituencies, except Simcoe East where only a National Government candidate has been nominated, have two or more contestants. There are 33 three-cornered fights in prospect, four four-cornered affairs, and one five-cornered scramble.

Timiskaming constituency in Northern Ontario offers the five-cornered struggle, where Farmer-Labor, C.C.F., Liberal, National Government, and Independent Liberal candidates have been nominated. The four-cornered fights are in Essex East, Ottawa East, Welland and Wellington North.

Two nationally known athletes are in the field—Syl Apps, Toronto Maple Leafs' hockey star, in Brant as a National Government candidate, and Fred Hoblitzell, veteran Toronto golfer, in Toronto-Eglinton for the Liberals.

believed added to about 50 submarines which, according to unofficial estimate have been sent to the bottom by Allied action in the half year of war. France has sunk 10 or more, and the Royal Navy and Air Force the rest.

Two Torpedoed

Against this stroke Britain had to weigh the announcement early to-day that the 6,717-ton motorship Pacific Reliance had been sunk off the west coast by enemy action, and SOS message indicating that the 5,841-ton steamship El Siervo and the 10,516-ton tanker Charles F. Meyer had run afoul of undersea raiders.

"We are sinking," concluded the message from the Charles F. Meyer after the tanker reported being torpedoed 50 miles southeast of Hastings in the English Channel.

"We are being chased by a submarine," said an S.O.S. attributed by Mackay radio, in New York, to El Ciervo from a position about 900 miles east of the Virgin Islands. The call indicated that the ship sighted a submarine at 3.07 p.m. EST yesterday.

The crew of 53 from the Pacific Reliance landed on the Cornish coast during the night. Although badly holed, the motorship remained afloat for some time, enabling all her men to escape in six lifeboats.

Four of the boats weer guided to the shore by an R.A.F. plane which shuttled back and forth over them while the occupants of the other two were picked up by another vessel.

The Admiralty said losses to British shipping in the week ending March 3 were 1,886 tons. Against this, the Admiralty reported that to avert capture the crews of four German vessels, totalling 18,490 tons, scuttled their ships.

A woman in Ayrshire asked for the name of anyone who might be homesick and would welcome a friendly letter from time to time.

A 19-year-old girl born in Oshawa, Ont., but now residing in Southampton, asked for the name of a soldier from her hometown who "felt the English climate a bit depressing." She added that a chum of hers also would like a Canadian pen friend and offered to pass any letters on to her.

There were also three young Scottish typists who wrote under Aberdeen date, to say they weren't "hard to look at" and would welcome the addresses of three lonely Canadians.

"Of course we aren't looking for husbands," the writer explained. "We only want to cheer up someone who may feel downhearted when their comrades are opening mail from home and none comes for them."

Warned the subsidence might continue sporadically for weeks and possibly months while their homes slowly sink into the earth, the folk who know the toil of mining and the peril of cavein took steps to recover damages tentatively estimated at $1,000,000.

There were many who joked about an experience not uncommon in the hard coal fields, but never before so significant in scope. But others found it difficult to jest. They were grim and concerned for the welfare of loved ones as they awaited a town meeting tonight.

Governor Arthur James pushed an inquiry into the disturbance that took no lives, but played havoc with homes and business buildings, ruptured gas mains, buckled streets and impaired water service.

James directed state officials and mine company experts to tour the honeycomb of mine tunnels beneath Shenandoah, which is situated on a mountain slope.

The governor was unable to say what property owners could reasonably expect in the way of reparations. "The state has jurisdiction," he said, "only over mine matters that affect the safety of miners.

Hepburn Taboos News Film Canada At War

TORONTO, March 5.—(CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced Monday that the showing of the news film "Canada at War," has been banned in Ontario until after the Dominion general election March 26. He said it was not definite if the film, prepared by the "March of Time," would be shown even then.

Mr. Hepburn, who made the announcement as chairman of the Appeal Board of the Ontario Government Motion Picture Board of Censors, claimed the review was "nothing but pure political propaganda for the Mackenzie King Government."

He described the film as "far fetched and misleading," and said it was prepared with the assistance of the Canadian government and was "purely and deliberately political propaganda."

"No party, the one in power or any other," he said, "is going to get away with that sort of thing."

Mr. Hepburn added:

"If they want to show the extent of Canada's war effort, let them show the hundreds of thousands of unemployed who are walking the streets looking for a chance to enlist or find work in industry at a time when the very security of the country is a stake.

"We are not going to allow movies to be used for political purposes. I would not allow a picture like this to be shown, whether it was a National, a Conservative or a Liberal government in power."

Manitoba Rink Leads Bonspiel

WINNIPEG, March 5 — (CP). — Manitoba was the only unbeaten rink in the Macdonald's Brier Canadian curling championships when the third round was completed today.

Skipped by Howard Wood, Winnipeg's Brier champion of 1930, Manitoba scored a four on the last end to defeat Nick Thibodeau's New Brunswick rink from Bathurst 13-10. The only other previously undefeated rink, Northern Ontario, lost a thrilling duel 11-9 to the defending hampions, the Bert Hall four from Kitchener, Ont.

Prince Edward Island was the only province without a victory after the morning draw at the Amphitheatre rink where the crowd of less than 200 was far below the 1,500 who watched the opening rounds yesterday.

The islanders, skipped by Rankine McLaine, piled up a good lead against 70-year-old Col. Archie Bell of Quebec, only to see that veteran count a four on the 11th to tie the score and add a single on the last end for a 12-11 win, Quebec's first in the bonspiel.

Saskatchewan created a mild surprise by trouncing the British Columbia four skipped by the redoubtable Billy Finlay of Vancouver, 14-5. It was the second win for Bill Dunbar of Kinley, Sask., and the second defeat for Finlay.

Cliff Manahan, who won the Brier for Alberta in 1933-37, made his second victory a 15-6 triumph over Nova Scotia, now beaten twice.

The battle of the two Ontario rinks saw the knock-out game at its best. They reached the 11th end tied at 7-7, but there the Northern four from Kirkland Lake, skipped by Jim Davis, faltered and a pair of costly misses gave Hall a four. Davis fought gamely in the 12th but the best he could do was a pair of shot rocks.

German Losses.

LONDON, Mar. 5 — (CP). — An authoritative British naval source said that in the first six months of war Germany lost about 271,000 tons of merchant shipping out of a total of 4,492,708.

The losses, he said, included 22 ships captured, totalling 94,500 tons, 25 scuttled totalling 154,000 tons, and an undisclosed number of sinkings by Allied action and from marine causes.

British losses to date as a result of enemy action, he said, approximate 620,000 tons, of which two-thirds has been replaced by new construction and captures. This was compared with a loss of more than 2,000000 tons in the first six months of 1917, when Germany's war on shipping reached its Great War peak.

The Standard asked that former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha, an advocate of intervention in Finland, explain "on what grounds he believes Britain's resources and manpower are such that she can send a new force to the Arctic, maintain large numbers in the Near East and at the same time fulfill the call which our French ally makes upon us for aid in protection of her frontier."

The Times editorial observed:

"Finland is demanding with insistence that her sacrifice should not be made in vain and she is beginning to display anxiety lest the true nature of her situation should be misunderstood.

"It is becoming clearer every day that this war is no side issue. Finland is defending more than the cause of liberty and more than her own soil.

Whole North in Danger.

"The whole north is in peril of the aggression directed against her and not perhaps her alone. Our own cause is being buttressed by her resistance to the evil of tyranny. Finnish resistance has already weakened Russia, the colossus though she be, appreciably and has eaten up great stores of oil which might otherwise have reached Germany for use against us.

"For that, if for no other reason, Finland is entitled to expect gratitude and recompense. But there is now no time to waste in debate. As we look back upon the annals of old wars we are constantly struck by the opportunities which have been missed through a policy of false economy, of failure to appreciate the comparative unimportance of secondary risks.

The Gallipoli Example

"The Gallipoli campaign in the last war is an outstanding instance. Let us not prepare for ourselves once more the melancholy task of discussing lost chances—to find, perhaps as we have many times found in the past, that the will and means to seize them were really there all the while and that only some misunderstanding prevented us from doing so.

"Our interest is clear and there is a moral issue involved as well as a material."

"We have enough to do," the Daily Express said. "We cannot police the world. We already have difficulties in policing the waters which we hold and the lands for which we are responsible. People who urge us to declare war against Russia are not sound advisers.

"If we are to fight for Finland why not for China? Why not declare war on Japan and send an expeditionary force against Tokyo?"

missed his ship on its return trip.

He said he found the artillery in the basement of a Brooklyn house, and thought it would be a good idea to take it back to Hitler's army.

Then, he added, perhaps he would be forgiven for missing his ship.

The police turned him over to the Children's Society.

makes an Allied victory certain."

The Prince, 27, was greeted by his younger brother, the Archduke Felix, who has been lecturing in the United States, and the largest crowd of feminine admirers ever to attend the arrival of a transatlantic Clipper here.

"I came to the United States to study the Constitution and the laws of the biggest Federal democracy in the world because I feel that it will be necessary to make a Federal State of Central Europe after the war and apply your principles of democracy to it," Otto declared.

With his aide, Count Franz von Trautmansdorff, the Archduke went to a hotel for a brief rest before continuing to New York. He said he planned to remain in the United States three or four weeks and hoped to fly to the Pacific coast. It is his first visit here.

Without explaining, the Archduke said he must return home soon because "it is possible that there will be some development requiring my presence in Europe. The European situation is such that I should be back in a few weeks."

"I would be very glad to see President Roosevelt, but I have no appointment," he added.

Opposition Aces Turn Big Guns On King Record

(By the Canadian Press.)

Renewed charges of deception, political patronage and profiteering in the war effort swirled around the political arena to-day after leading speakers of Opposition parties opened a fresh drive against the government last night which matched the number of cabinet spokesmen for the first time since the campaign opened.

But competing with the campaign as a topic of public interest was the statement of Premier Hepburn of Ontario that the March of Time news film "Canada at War" has been banned from Ontario until at least after the March 26 election. In Ottawa it caused more private comment on Parliament Hill than any strictly election development.

Port Hope Death Is Laid To Train

PORT HOPE, March 5.— B. B. Miller, Trenton, died Feb. 25 of a fractured skull received when struck by a baggage truck which an incoming train hit at the C.N.R. depot here Feb. 20, a coroner's jury decided last night.

V. E. Morton, engineer, said Mr. Miller placed his hand truck too close to the incoming train. From the train it appeared "there was a possibility it might clear," he said. "The attendants in charge of the trucks are experienced handlers and operators. I thought he knew his truck was clear."

Mr. Morton said Mr. Miller "was facing the truck and perhaps his chest was close to it" The train, he said, did not hit the victim, but struck the rear of the truck.

Relations With Neutrals

Under questioning in the House, Mr. Cross also discussed economic relations with other neutrals.

In reply to a question whether he know of an impending deal to put petrolul Romanesc, Rumanian oil company, under German control, he said the company was not important and still was under Rumanian control.

Another asked whether the government had taken steps to prevent fish caught by neutral boats from reaching Germany.

"If I answered the question I would be revealing the terms of arcountries," Mr. Cross said, apparently referring to Norway. The rangements made with the neutral Netherlands and Belgium.

Foreign Minister, admitted the possibility Viipuri might be lost, but added that it is "an outpost which has never been surrendered without a fight."

"The Russian forces on the Isthmus have advanced to the outskirts of Viipuri," said an editorial in the newspaper.

"It is their (the Russians') only significant achievement after more than three months of warfare. That this would happen sooner or later was clear to everybody, even from the beginning of the war.

"The surprise to ourselves as well as to the enemy is only in the fact that the invader has not got there earlier."

Even if Viipuri is lost, however, the paper added, "our fate is not sealed. We have defended our land even when all of Karelia was in Moscow's grip."

Reds List Other Towns Taken.

MOSCOW, Mar. 5 — (AP).—The Red army has furthered its encircling move about Viipuri, the Soviet command reported to-day, by seizing towns on the western mainland and islands south of that ruined, but stubbornly-defended, Finnish city.

(These positions would permit attacks from four directions, but failure of the Russians to announce complete encirclement indicated gaps may remain in their lines. The Russians previously announced occupation of some Viipuri suburbs with drives converging from the north, east and south.)

A communique to-day reported capture of the fortress of Trongsund and the town of Uuraas on an island six miles south of Viipuri, occupation of Tejarinsaari, an island and the towns of Hejnlahti, Muualthai, and Viiajoki, on the Bay of Viipuri, about 15 miles west of Viipuri.

"In the Trongsund fortress, Soviet troops captured three batteries of naval long-range guns and a great number of machine guns, rifles, munitions and cartridges," the communique said.

"On the other sectors of the front there was nothing of importance."

(Seizure of the towns west of Viipuri raised the possibility that the Russians might attempt a westward thrust in the southern coastal region of Finland without seeking immediate capitulation.

(Viipuri proved so unyielding in the wars of the middle ages that its gates were dubbed "the death of the Muscovites." Peter the Great subdued it only after a three-month siege in 1709.

(A Finnish communique last night said that despite increasing pressure the Russians were repulsed, indicated that Viipuri's defenders were standing firm. The Finns reported they had regained territory in the Arctic which the Russians took last week, and repelled attacks north of Lake Ladoga.)

We Noticed

....Just a tone or so deeper than the exquisite purply-blue of the Hyacinth blossom was the frock worn by one onlooker—a small hat fashioned entirely of flowers in the same lovely shade completed the costume.

....A simple version of the silk shirtmaker frock, a print with a tiny pattern in a soft pinky-beige tone, and one of the tiny brimmed brown felt hats with an effect of sauciness in its crown, was the smart and practical ensemble worn by a third member of the enthusiastic audience.

....A breath of Spring was brought to the I.O.D.E. Fashion tea yesterday not only by handsomely gowned models, but by a number of the spectators, who refused to allow such an insignificant thing as unpleasant weather prevent them from donning a new Spring hat.

Do You Know?

By changing the position of furniture in the room you cause the rugs to wear more evenly.

Don't economize on sash cord. Cheap cord will soon wear out, and it is a difficult job to replace it. If there are weatherstrips on the windows, these must be removed and are likely to be damaged during the operation.

Remember when adding syrup that it mixes much easier with other ingredients if slightly warmed first.

Peter Robinson Chapter Stages Fashion Parade

(By FLORA)

Grey weather and a drizzly rain had no effect on Peterborough women Monday afternoon — they turned out almost 400 strong at the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. Spring fashion tea in the Y.W.C.A. to witness one of the smartest style shows this reporter has yet seen. Miss Mabel Patterson, Chapter regent, and Mrs. E. V. Morphet, vice-regent received the guests, who sat at flag-decked tables in the Green Room, Library and Recreation Room and over their tea cups watched a panorama of 1940 styles and colors displayed by charming girls who had the air of professional models.

Without a doubt, clothes are more purposeful, flattering, feminine and wearable than they have been for several seasons. There were military accents, such as shoulder epaulets, tunic effects, double rows of buttons sometimes of brass, and pockets of all descriptions, including money-bag and saddle. Jackets were short, long, bolero and in "mess" effects inspired by army, navy and air force. One outstanding coat model in navy with military buttons boasted a full-length lining of scarlet silk, the same shade flashing bright in a scarf at the neck.

Colors were gay and refreshing, with navy the primary favorite, highlighted by staccato red, yellow in gold or butter shades, white and green. Gray, a close second was stunning and very cool, teamed with yellow, the new sand-biege, red or artillery tan. Patterns for simply tailored little frocks, blouses, coats and suits were plaids, stripes and checks, with polka dots also favored. There was a veritable spring harmany of pastels—bith in hats, frocks and accessories — lime fruit with brown; mist blue, haze blue, moss leaf, tide blue shell turquoise, vivid reds, citron, pink mist.

A wasp-waisted suit that was called green but resembled more closely the mustard shade of a season ago, had plaid lapels and was worn with a matching straw sailor and accessories of a lighter-than-navy tone; scarlet plaid in wide panels down the front of a jaunty little navy frock almost called for a Highland Fling on the part of its model, who wore a dashing hat pointed up with a scarlet feather. Several printed silk frocks found favor with the audience, one had green predominating in an interesting pattern and was belted in purple suede, which gave the clue for matching accessories; wooden buttons with amusing painted faces fastened the bodice of another unusual dress. Sport outfits included the ever-popular plaid jacket and contrasting plain skirt.

Formal gowns were of yards and yards of material deftly molded and draped—one was of cyclamen pink sheer, another of mist blue. Black net over taffeta fashioned a third, trimmed with colored sequins that were again used in a Juliet cap.

Hats, and how glad we are to say it are actually pretty this season—not daft! In general, though, they are tiny mites—merely accessories —but very charming ones. The new coiffures as shown yesterday featured deep soft waves with loose curls at the back, a perfect setting for the vivacious little sailors, the wide-halo-brims, the peak-crowned "baskets" stacked with bright flowers, the new low crowns, all with flowers, birds and feathers for trimming. Tiny nose veils dropped below some of the small sailors, while long, floating wings of veiling hung in airy streamers from other types. One especially chic sailor, worn with a tailored black suit, its coat pin-striped in white boasted three gardenias climbing upright from a shallow crown; another was a mere cluster of garden flowers anchored with ribbon bands, and a third had two blue feathers sprouting from a giddy bouquet.

Accessories featured much patent leather, fabric, and braided leathers —one bag had a red patent frame. Gloves are a trifle shorter; patent again figures high in the shoe world; necklaces were a decorative note to many pretty frocks.

Luxurious furs topped many of the ensembles, red fox, silver fox, martin furs, a cape deftly fashioned of sable.

Mrs. R. W. Frank and Mrs. H. L. Shimer were in charge of the fashion show, and soft piano music was played throughout by Mrs. Wm. J. Gordon. Modeling were Miss Mary Cavalier, Miss Mabel Nixon, Mrs. Pat Hall, Miss Anne Heideman Miss Violet Davidson, Mrs. M. E. Holt, Miss Lenore Lyle, Miss Geraldine Collins, Miss "Bunts" Frizzelle, Miss Betty Wolfe, Mrs. Homer Borland. Frocks, coats, suits, accessories and furs were shown through the courtesy of the following shops: Lyda Telford Specialty Shoppe; Barries Ltd.; Phyllis Hall McCullough and Olga Haskill hat shops; Smart Set Shop; the Elsie Bennett Gift Shop; the Muriel Shop. Coiffure's were by Moore's Beauty Salon; the Kawartha Salon; Colin Althouse Hairdressing Salon, and Myla Bogue.

Miss Hazel Buller was tea convener and assistants included Mrs. B. V. Moore Miss Doris Burgess, Mrs. F. E. Hooper, Mrs. J. Graham, Mrs. D. V. Canning, Mrs. E. Girven, Mrs. Gordon Hill, Mrs. C. E. Braund, Mrs. F. L. Buckland, Miss Audrey Milburn, Mrs. C. R. Nixon, Mrs. E. L. Sackville and Mrs. Alex Sollitt were refreshment conveners.

Shamrocks and green candles were used to deck the home-cooking table, convened by Mrs. C. L. Upper assisted by Mrs. H. Steggles and Mrs. C. McIntyre. Treasurers were Mrs. Clara Hinds and Mrs. W. Regan.

The smart matron chooses a jacket and bolero ensemble for her all-occasion spring outfit. Although the bodice and skirt are attached, you can make them of contrasting fabrics to give the effect of a two-piece dress. The handy bolero is brief enough to be fashionable, yet long enough to be practical. If your figure is inclined to be on the larger side, you'll welcome the slenderizing uplift waist and graceful skirt. This is an ensemble to wear now under your coat, later by itself. It's just the thing for days in town when you must dress smartly but without too much formality.

Style No. 3151 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 39-inch material for skirt and bolero; 1¾ yards 39-inch contrasting for bodice; dress of one material requires 3¾ yards 39-inch material.

Don't Sacrifice All Your Earnings on the Family. Girls Who Work Should Keep Part of Pay. Today's Letter Box.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a spinster 56 years old and look and feel and act the part. When I was eighteen I graduated from high school and the next day got a job and went to work, and am still hard at it. I was a pretty girl and could have married, but I had a father without ambition or energy and an impractical mother. They had six children younger than myself whom they wished on me to support. So I had to put all thoughts of the normal life of a woman out of my mind. I couldn't dump my family on any man and it took all I could make, and more, to feed and clothe and keep them in school. Of course, in time they grew up and married and started out for themselves, but it has never occurred to one of them to help ease my burden, or pay me back any of the money I spent on them. They not only always needed what they made for themselves and their families, but in every emergency they have expected me to help them. Now I am a capable business woman and for many years I have earned a fine salary, but I have never been able to save any of it. The demands of my family upon me have been never ceasing. Now, as I said, I am 56. Old. Very tired. With not a penny laid up. And I am wondering about what is to become of me in my old age.

I am not foolish enough to think that any of the brothers and sisters or nieces and nephews for whom I have sacrificed my life feel any gratitude or appreciation for anything that I have done for them or that any one of them would want me to come and live with them. I would be an unwelcome guest when I had no longer gifts to give, and while they might be driven to take me in from a sense of duty or fear of what people would say, it would be bitter bread I would have to eat at their tables. And it makes suicide look like about the easiest way out when I can no longer be self-supporting. Have you any thoughts along this line? ANGELA.

ANSWER:

There is no tragedy more pitiful nor any commoner than that of the woman who sacrifices herself for her family and who gets for all the costly offerings she makes for them not even love and appreciation.

All of us know a thousand cases like this of the old maid who writes this letter. We all know so many Angelas whose parents enslave them to themselves and their younger children. We know so many shiftless men who knocked off work as soon as Angela brought in her first pay envelope and dumped the burden of the family support on her thin young shoulders. We have known so many mothers who thought that Angela should do without a new dress so that a younger sister might have a party frock and that Angela should take on extra night work to put John through college.

And we have seen Angela losing her good looks, growing old and tired, her shoulders becoming bent with the burdens she bore. For there was always mother with her insatiable demands for the other children. And John, who was always having to be paid out of scrapes. And Tom, whose wife's extravagance kept the bill collector hammering on their door. And there were little Betty's eyes that had to be straightened. And little Billy's tonsils that had to come out. Always the endless demand for money, money, money that poor Angela was expected to supply.

We have all seen what happened to poor Angela when she came to the end of her rope. The whole family blamed her and wondered what on earth she had done with her money. Why, she had got such a good salary all of these years she should have laid up something for her old age and not be dependent upon them.

Goodness knows, they would like to help her if they could, but one sister's house is too small; the other sister's husband didn't like Angela's ways; the children of a third just simply couldn't stand having an old maid with old-fashioned views interferring in their pleasures; John was buying an automobile and Tom was paying on a house, and really none of them could make room for her.

That is what happens to Angela ninety-nine times out of a hundred when she gives up all thought of love and marriage, home and children of her own to take care of her family. Sometimes when we look at Angela we think she is a saint, and sometimes we think she is the biggest fool on earth, for she gives all and gets nothing in return. In her old age she is left desolate.

But one thing that we want most of all to say to every girl who sees herself being offered up as a sacrifice on the family altar, and that is to use some part of her earnings in buying a membership in some old woman's home. For the day will come when she will need it.

Home and School Association News

QUEEN ALEXANDRA SCHOOL

Speaking briefly on Religious Education Monday evening at the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association meeting, Mr. Frost pointed out the duty of the parent in teaching religion in the home, and the duty of the teachers in teaching it in the school. He urged that an example be set by showing a respect for religion and by teaching children the highest regard for truth, love of country, and all the virtues. He believes that children are naturally religious to begin with. In the Kindergarten, he explained, teachers read them Bible stories and they sing children's hymns.

Robert Craw, pupil of Miss H. Staples, told a story of Christmas as taught in Grade I; Helen Watson, pupil of Miss Walker in Grade 5, recited the 121st Psalm and five pupils of Grade recited the 1st Psalm in unison. Questions from the Bible, asked by Mr. Frost, were answered by the children in a way that demonstrated considerable knowledge. Jack Gaskill of Grade 8 told the same Christmas story as told by Bobby Craw of Grade 1, showing the progress made through the Grades.

Rev. R. T. F. Brain of St. John's Anglican Church, guest speaker, expressed both delight and surprise in the religious knowledge of the pupils. The object of Christian education is to produce men and women who would work together to build up a "frown-free" life. People are not free enough, he declared. If they have the information, they sometimes show a lack of judgment. The aim of education is to cultivate a wisdom and acquire the ability to choose the good and precious from the common things; to have respect for liberty and human dignity, and a recent regard for the rights of others. The cradle of religion is in the home, church and school, he said.

Mrs. V. R. Henry, president, was in the chair for the meeting, which had Religious Education as its theme. Announcement was made of the newly - organized study groups, which meet twice a month at members' homes, where a chapter of a book on Child Psychology is studied. Mrs. Henry was appointed delegate to the Home and School Convention in Toronto during Easter week.

Two musical numbers, a piano solo by Werden Anglin, and a vocal solo by Clare Connel, "The Stranger of Galilee," were enjoyed.

QUEEN MARY

Mr. R. H. Roberts of the Peterborough Normal School, as guest speaker at the Queen Mary Home and School Association meeting Monday evening, chose as his subject "Nutrition and Mental Health." Since the League of Nations introduced a Committee for Nutrition after the Great War, this particular phase of knowledge has been stressed in the education of the child, and Mr. Roberts believes that this, together with Mental Health, are the most important factors in health training. "The school," he said, "because of the limited time spent there, could have no idea of taking full responsibility for the child's well-being, but such association as the home and school working in co-operation are of an unlimited value in bringing about desired conditions.

Experiments have been made in asking the child to keep a diary for two weeks in September and in June for exclusive perusal by the teacher, in which he writes down what he eats; how he plays, and what he does in his hours away from school. With this knowledge of the child's life outside of his class room, the teacher is often able to help and advise the correction of deficiencies.

Mr. Roberts expressed regret that in spite of our excellent dairy farms and the effort being made to supply the finest of dairy products, Canadian milk consumption per capita is lower than among other nations. "This food," he explained," is absolutely necessary for the building of teeth and bone and the general fortification of the body against disease. Plenty of rest, fresh air and sunshine are also essential."

In regard to Mental Health, he urged encouraging the child's association with other children. If he is a bragging youngster, he said, endeavor to find out what is behind this protective coating which he is maintaining to cover up some feeling of deficiency. Extreme neatness might also be significant of a similar condition. Parents should not feed in him a desire to excel at all times—constant success is abnormal and the child who leads his class in school is not always able to hold his own afterwards. To learn to take failure graciously is also an accomplishment. Competitions are not to be encouraged, as they are found to be as upsetting to some children as they are to adults. Give him a little of his own way, the speaker advised, and for robust, mental health he must make his own decision and profit by his mistakes.

Mrs. L. H. Ingram, president of the Association, welcomed the parents and teachers, who, in spite of the inclemency of the weather, had made an effort to be present. She then led in a special prayer for peace, and for wisdom in those who "hold our destinies in their hands."

Mr. H. C. Renaud, Director of Music at George Street Church, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Renaud, rendered two engaging song numbers, "Tommie Lad" and "Two Little Magpies." Miss Mary Lillow gave a very able and much enjoyed piano rendering of selections from Beethoven and Chopin.

Mrs. T. J. Carley, speaking of current events, bid her listeners "Beware, the ides of March", for Hitler, like the Caesar whom he would emulate, this month had seemed to be a fateful one, as most of his decisive movements in past years were made in March. What history is to be made in the third month of 1940 remains to be known.

The Junior Attendance Banner was won by Miss Madill's Class, and the classes of Miss I. Deyell, Miss J. A. MacNaughton and Mr. J. M. Telford tied for the Senior Banner. For the Home and School Association, Mrs. J. Fanning presented Mr. O. M. Steer, principal, with a new and attractive Junior Banner to replace the lost one.

Mrs. W. E. Fanning voiced the thanks of the Association to all those contributing so kindly to the interest and pleasure of the evening.

Nomination slips for the new slate of officers were given out to paid-up members to be returned before the April meeting.

Italy's Position

Italy and the Allies are plainly at loose ends. Italy has been securing her supplies of coal from Germany but the blockade now extends to German imports, and it applies to coal shipped from Germany to Italy. The Allies offer to supply Italy with coal, but at the moment Italy will have none of it because Italy wants German coal to offset the amount which Germany now owes to Italy.

There has never been any certainty regarding the stand which Italy would take in the war. There was surprise six months ago when Italy was not included in the nations at war. The feeling then was that Germany felt she was not needed—yet. There would be developments later on where Italy would be able to serve the Rome-Berlin axis.

Meanwhile Italy has been doing business; she has been selling great quantities of material to the Allies. One reliable report says Italy has purchased large quantities of second-hand stamping presses, lathes, drills and pumps in United States, has rebuilt them and sent them on to British war shops. There is also the report that Italy has been receiving great quantities of raw material but has hedged about paying for them with promised machinery. There are a good many deals back of the present discussion about coal which may not have been fully revealed.

The First Consideration

William R. Johnson, described by the district attorney as a top man in Chicago's gambling syndicate, is reported as being in trouble. He has been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury. And that looks bad for Mr. Johnson. He will learn that the attorney-general and the government and the Federal Grand Jury combined or separated have small patience with gamblers.

But wait a minute. This Mr. Johnson we find is not being pursued on account of gambling or heading up a gambling syndicate. Not a bit of it. He has not paid his income tax and has been holding back a couple of million from 1936 and 1938.

They may make it bad enough for this Mr. Johnson because there is a fine of $10,000 and five years in prison. He's not being dealt with because he's head of a gambling ring but because he hasn't paid his taxes. The government wants its cut of the money he makes by breaking the law!

Tackling Soap Box Row

Ten men and women have been arrested in London's famous Hyde Park soap box row while selling official publications of British Communist, Fascist and Pacifist organizations. This business was the subject of inquiry in the House of Commons several days ago, and Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary, explained that while the Peace Union's movements were under close observation there was a desire to protect the liberties of citizens as much as possible. So the trial of those now under arrest should do something to draw a line showing where the liberty of the individual ends and the protection of the state begins.

The so-called soap box row has for years been the greatest centre of free speech in the world. We have listened to speakers there making statements which we are certain would have meant their arrest if made in our own country. One can take his own little box on which to stand, or for a few pence he can rent one right on the spot.

Britain found it best to let people talk. If some one desired to argue that the cost of keeping the Royal family was too great and the country could get along without a king, then such a speech could be made. If the speaker went a trifle too far with his points he could be certain he was going to get in trouble with the crowd because the Royal family is popular in London.

British folk will fight to the last ditch, but even when they are doing it they like to feel they can say what they please. That feeling is deep rooted and it explains why there has been such pointed criticism to censorship of all kinds. And that is why they have always looked upon Hyde Park as something like a safety valve for the blowing off of surplus steam.

Another Rich Grave

Prof. Montet, working for Strasbourg University, headed a party of explorers which grubbed away in drifting Egyptian sands for ten years, and then found what he had been searching for—the tomb of Psou Sennes, second king of the 21st dynasty, and quite possibly one of the many fathers-in-law of King Solomon, as that marriage is recorded in the Bible.

The site is believed to be that of the Egyptian city from which Moses led the exodus of the children of Israel. Inside the tomb there is sufficient gold in one form or another to amount to a king's ransom; at least that is the estimate placed in despatches.

The burial chamber 22 feet long and nine feet wide, is reported to have the walls covered with inscriptions which add much to the historical knowledge of that period of Egyptian history. All the trappings, rings, bands for the arms, crowns, sceptres, and so on are of gold, and possibly with little alloy.

It does look as though when these old kings of Egypt prepared such magnificent quarters for their places of burial, and had locked with them such treasure, they must have taken it for granted their remains were going to be left alone. The reason for having a gold table in the room with 20 gold vessels upon it gives fair enough idea of the wealth buried there. Whether that is where we got our present policy for dealing with gold is not certain, but it is much the same. We mine it, weigh it and sell it and then never see it again, because it is buried in vaults.

These penetrations into the old tombs of Egypt may be glorified by the name of scientific effort, and the quest for knowledge may be considered sufficient reason to justify them. But stripped of all such explanation, it is grave plundering. There are no immediate relatives present to raise objections or to apply for injunctions, so the tombs of Egypt are made to lay bare their secrets and their wealth at the urging of the science of today. If the system of burial had not been so elaborate, and if there was no reason to suspect that treasure was buried there, we dare say the old burying places of Egypt would still remain untouched.

A Great Old Racket

It came on a wire as an Associated Press despatch from Ogden, Utah, and it probably went to papers all over the continent. Gloria Dickson, movie actress, was not lost. Gloria herself said so. She had just been riding home to Hollywood on a train and had made a stop over at some place where a comedian from the movies was making a personal appearance.

But Gloria's husband was worried and he reported her as lost. Gloria said that was such a silly thing for him to do. And so Gloria Dickson, who is actually Mrs. Perc Westmore, got a nice little five-inch story in all the papers on the A.P. circuit where desk men were not sensible enough to throw the thing in the waste basket where it belonged.

Press agents draw their salaries to see that this sort of baloney keeps on circulating, and newspapers keep on printing it. Gloria gets her name in front of the dear general public by the mere announcement that she was not lost. It's hard to figure out because newspapers charge other people when they want to advertise and keep themselves before the public.

Can We Think Nationally?

A reader of the Examiner believes the people of our country should long ago have learned to think nationally. In a note to this office he says:

"We are beginning to find out that we need the broader outlook in time of war and it needs to be so broad that it reaches out to include the entire Empire. I am a resident of Peterborough but I am also a resident of the Empire and for that matter of the world."

Admittedly that is a nice big thought. But we might as well look at the claim honestly and fairly. The world is broken up into nations; nations into other subdivisions. In Canada we have nine provinces; provinces in turn are divided into counties and then again into townships. Then we have villages, towns and cities. In an electoral way we have the Dominion split into 245 ridings. So if one is going to think in the broader sense it is necessary to get over a good many hurdles which we have set up.

When our House of Commons is in session it is possible to follow debates by reading Hansard, and it is not at all difficult to find that there is not much national thinking or national debate. To illustrate: When the fisheries problems of the Maritimes comes up in debate those taking part are all from the Maritimes, and the reason is the rest of the members do not understand the situation. In the Ontario Legislature when the forestry question of New Ontario is under discussion we doubt if there are many members from the older sections of the province who have first-hand knowledge of the situation.

When a member is elected to Ottawa he is sent from a certain well-defined area, and the people in that well-defined area have put him where he is. What is he supposed to do when he reaches Ottawa? He is there as the representative of that certain section of the Dominion. He is not asked to look after the whole Dominion because all the other sections or ridings have men there for that purpose. It is quite true to say that in that way we have brought together an assembly of people representative of all Canada, and it is equally true to say we have brought together an assembly of people each of whom is representing one section in which he is particularly interested and to which he must return if he is going to be elected again.

If an Ontario member were to become interested in a matter which was primarily important to some section in British Columbia he would be working in the larger field, but he knows that the manner in which he looks after his own particular riding is going to have much—or all—to do with the chance of again being returned to office by the voters of that riding.

We believe the plain truth is that we are all more or less parochial or cramped in our outlook and that smaller vision is something which is daily forced upon us. We live in one community; we have a home there; we have access to some gainful occupation there; our children are born and brought up there. That is, all our day-to-day interests are centred in one place—not all over the Dominion, not all over the Empire, and certainly not all over the world. So we might as well be honest and admit that a national or an Empire or a world outlook is something extremely difficult to cultivate or attain.

There was a fire in the new Supreme Court Building at Ottawa and damage was $15,000. The fire was put out in half an hour, and our love for statistics reaches the conclusion that it took two minutes to do $1,000 worth of damage.

Mrs. Augusta Crissman of Los Angeles when a girl of six was found to be tubercular and given one year more to live. Apparently she is one of those stubborn folk who disregard warnings as yesterday she marked birthday number 100.

It will be noticed there is a difference of opinion in Canada today about how we should carry on the war, but we hope Germany sees that no one has yet suggested that our efforts be on a modified scale.

Britain took 21 Germans from a Japanese vessel, and after sorting them over returned nine to the Japs, so Japan will feel she was at least 9-21sts successful in her claims that all should be returned.

Josiah Wedgwood, member of the British House of Commons, won a £5 bet that no bombs would fall on London in six months from the date of the first day of war. He has another bet that there will be no offensive on either side before the first of May. Possibly Josiah could tell us when and how the war is going to end.

Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in United States told a gathering of church folk in Toronto that the "Christian church of today is pussyfooting, indifferent and callous to the extension of the Kingdom of God." The beauty of that form of statement is that it is so plain that no one would have to go afterward and ask the speaker what he meant.

WEE ANGUS

¶ Wee Angus' language is absurd, he always picks the latest word, he says it with a grin; some lad with whom he had a row, he then explained to me just how, he'd "put the bee" on him.

¶ And something that he thinks is good, he don't explain it like he should, he thinks it quite a joke; for he with promptness soon replies, and there are twinkles in his eyes, he says it's "oke doke."

¶ And there were questions he got wrong, his reasoning was none too strong, no logic in his head; his reason why he went so flat, was couched in words that told me that, "all haywire" so he said.

¶ He speaks of "oomph" Wee Angus does, he speaks of girls as "bits of fuzz," each day there's something new; he's rather far from being sedate, I think it only fair to state, I know not what to do.

¶ He does not speak of excellent, when giving praise to some event, for shorter words he'll ache; when something pleases him a lot, I know the words come fast and hot: "Gee whizz, I think that's jake."

¶ They do not teach such words at school, I know that it's against the rule, he adds to them each week; I often wonder when he's through, and has no schooling left to do—what language he will speak.

Land Forces See Little War In Six Months

ON THE western front there has been a draw. Neither Germany nor the Allies have dared this winter to risk an attack. The Maginot Line is the strongest series of fortifications the world has ever seen and the French and British do not propose to repeat the mistakes of the last war, when thousands of men were sacrificed in hurling battalion after battalion against powerfully defended lines. However, there is this difference. In the last war the Germans at this time were deep in France. Paris is still menaced. This time not a German soldier has invaded French soil. There is continual talk of Germany invading France as in the last war, via the way of Holland and Belgium. But this is unlikely. In the first place, Belgium is much more capably armed, trained and led than 25 years ago, while the British have dug in along the Belgium frontier and are ready to go to the immediate aid of either Holland or Belgium. No qualms of conscience as to the rights of neutrals would worry Germany, but it is a question whether from a military standpoint it would be wise.

When war opened up, in view of what had taken place in Poland, and the boasts of Hitler and his lieutenants, both the British and the French expected that there would be mass attacks upon London and Paris and the great industrial cities. Women, children and civilians by the tens of thousands were evacuated from the cities, recalls London Free Press. Elaborate preparations were prepared for defence. Balloon barriers were erected, anti-aircraft guns were set up around the cities and patrols of airmen established an elaborate reconnaissance system up and down the British coasts. Day by day the British waited for the much advertised attacks, but so far they have never come. Why? There are probably several reasons:

In the first place while the Germans do not understand the psychology of the democracies, yet they realize that attacks on Paris and London would do more than anything else to antagonize the neutrals and particularly the United States. They regard these two cities as the cultural centres of Western civilization. Thousands of tourists have visited these cities and have learned to love them. What would be the reaction in the United States if the American public awoke one morning to read that Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral and the Parliament Buildings had been bombed into dust or Notre Dame, the Louvre and the Pantheon had been destroyed. It might be the Lusitania over again.

Second, the Germans know that once they start bombing British and French cities there will be immediate retaliation. Then the war would be brought home to the German people. They have been taught to believe that Germany is supreme in the air and if Berlin, Munich or Cologne were attacked the realities of war might awaken the German people.

Thirdly and most vital, it is a question whether Germany has sufficient reserves of oil to risk continual mass attacks upon either Britain or France. A thousand planes use an enormous amount of oil. If there is any one thing which Germany needs it is oil. This accounts for her pressure upon Rumania.

BUT while the mass attacks upon Britain and France have not yet taken place there has been continual warfare in the air. The German airplanes have attacked the Firth of Forth and have swept along the coast. The British have attacked Heligoland and other German naval bases with considerable success; submarines have been sunk and the British airmen have driven off every invasion of the British coast. So far the British have shown supremacy in the air. British airplanes have had the advantage over the best of German planes. The delay has all been to the advantage of the Allies. At the outbreak of the war the Germans undoubtedly had superiority in the air. In the past six months British and French factories have so increased their production that it is a question if today the Allies have not actually more planes than the Nazis. What is more, shipments are now starting to move from the United States, while an elaborate air training scheme is being set up in Canada. The plans of Britain are so colossal that it fairly staggers one. Time is all on the side of the Allies.

But it is on sea that Britain has shown her chief supremacy as in the past and definitely has the upper hand. In the last war Germany possessed a navy which was not far below the British. There was always a question whether, when it came to actual conflict, the British fleet could hold its dominance. During the unrestricted warfare of the German submarine in 1917 Britain was all but starved out. This war Germany inaugurated from the first unrestricted warfare upon British and neutral shipping. The losses have been heavy, but only one-third of the losses in 1917. There have been naval disasters—the loss of the Royal Oak and Courageous. But these have been more than balanced by the striking battle which resulted in the destruction of the Graf Spee and the brilliant capture of the Altmark. No less than 50 German submarines have been destroyed and the German submarine menace has been largely overcome. Germany has made a desperate effort to break the strangling British blockade. Submarine, magnetic mines and attacks on shipping by airplane have all been tried and have been met. The navy in the past has been the main defence of Britain; it is still her chief bulwark. The old Drake and Nelson spirit of the navy still prevails.

The chief fighting has been in the side war between Russian and Finland. Following the German example in Poland, Russia on the most flimsy pretext invaded that sturdy little republic. But Finland was not Poland and Russia was not Germany. A resistance which will go down in history has been made by Finland. The losses of Russia have been enormous. Unless aid and aid on a large scale soon reaches Finland there is no doubt to the end; the odds are too overwhelming. However, Finland has broken the prestige of Russia; the Russian myth has been dissipated.

• On the Day After We Vote

MR. MACKENZIE KING said in his speech at Prince Albert he hoped to be able to say at the close of the present campaign that he had not used a word about any person or party which might make it impossible for him to secure the co-operation of every man and women in their common purposes.

Dr. Manion, we have no doubt, remarks the Ottawa Journal, is just as anxious as the Liberal leader that the campaign be conducted without bitterness.

As a matter of fact there has been little acrimony so far in the contest, even though personalities are the issue to an unusual degree. Mr. King is a kindly, amiable gentleman who would not consign the Opposition Leader to a concentration camp even if he had the power. Dr. Manion is just as kindly, just as amiable, a fighter who smiles—shows anger, as the Winnipeg Tribune pointed out the other day, but not bitterness and rancor.

They are our own people. Mr. King has lived in Ottawa for something like 40 years, and we know him as a citizen, a taxpayer, a dignified, cultured gentleman who lives in a rambling old house on Laurier avenue and goes walking with his dog. This city does not know Dr. Manion so well, perhaps, but even those who will vote against him recognize his quality. They could not conceive of danger to the state in this modest, good-humored, doctor-soldier-statesman who lives quietly in his modest house on an unpretentious street, who stops to chat with friends as he walks to his office, who is democratic without being demagogic.

Sometimes in the office or around the fireside an argument will start and hot words will fly. "That man King with his pompous pontifical airs" and "This fellow Manion with his glad hand and perpetual smile" will be denounced as though they were pickpockets, tempers will warm, the discussion will get out of hand, and a Nazi spy listening at the keyhole would get material for something the German wireless could cite as proof of grave disaffection in Canada. But it doesn't mean anything. The arguers will probably soon be laughing at their own heat and separate good friends. Exaggeration is not unknown even in parliamentary debate—even the newspapers sometimes state an argument more forcibly than the facts may warrant.

The chap who pronounces definitely that the country is going straight to perdition if King wins, or if Manion wins, will eat his breakfast as usual on March 27, go about his affairs as usual, no matter who wins, without the least expectation of misfortune to come, and will be amazed if any one suggests he should be packing up for Australia or the South Seas.

The fact is that in this unusual campaign all the parties are in agreement on the basic factor—the prosecution of the war. Some would go farther and faster than others. Some think A and B are the best men to run our contribution to the war, others prefer C and D, and that is what the campaign is about. Those famous "historic principles" of "the old parties" are not much discussed, nor do they much matter. What Macdonald said and what Laurier said is left undisturbed in the records.

The only thing of consequence today is pulling our full weight in the war, which we entered by common consent, and the choice is of men and policies best calculated to make our will effective.

• "This Stupid War" Nazis Call It

"AS civilized persons," a Rome dispatch quotes "a German spokesman" as saying, "we are greatly in favor of any move that will end this stupid war that Great Britain declared on us last September."

This gracious and condescending comment was made in connection with Sumner Welles' peace mission to Europe. There are millions of gaunt, suffering, hopeless men, women and children, torn from their homes in Poland to make "lebensraum" for Germans, who will appreciate that phrase, "as civilized persons." There are thousands of tortured human beings in German concentration camps who might find even more exquisite irony in the description. There are countless grim, silently defiant Czechs who are waiting for the day when they may have a hand in rewriting the Nazi definition of "civilized."

Even more subtle irony, perhaps, can be found in the term, "this stupid war." How "stupid" indeed it was of Great Britain and France to declare war on Germany when the latter invaded Poland! True, Britain and France were bound by a solemn pledge to declare war. If they had failed to declare ware, they would have invited what Britons and Frenchmen regard as national dishonor. But Britons and Frenchmen have hopelessly old-fashioned conceptions of national honor and dishonor. They don't comprehend the new international morality of which Hitler and Stalin are the great evangels—a morality which makes it not only permissible, but positively noble to sign a treaty one day and tear it up the next. The British and French are incorrigibly stupid. Or, as a candid Prussian of the old school once put it to a British friend: "You fellows always will be fools — and gentlemen."

The "German spokesman's" resentment of "this stupid war" is quite understandable. If the "blitzkrieg" had worked, if France and Great Britain could have been laid waste as Poland has been laid waste, "civilized persons" in high Nazi circles would not have regarded the war as stupid at all. few million dead Britons and Frenchmen a few hundred thousand women and children blown to pieces by Germany bombs would have made it seem to Hitler and his pious brethren an intelligent and commendable proceeding. But a war in which Hitler's soldiers have not turned out to be ever-conquering heroes a war in which Hitler's sailors have distinguished themselves principally as skilled scuttlers of their own ships—that is a stupid war, indeed. If the French army and the British navy are to be so mean, stubborn and unco-operative, the only sensible thing to do is to call off the whole stupid war, thereby enabling Hitler's heroes to give their undivided attention to torturing Poles, Czechs and Jews. —Buffalo Courier-Express.

INTERNED ALIEN WEDS

WHEN A GIRL, who had made a journey from her home in Germany to South Africa to be married, found her sweetheart in an internment camp she was broken-hearted, but she was made happy when orders from Capetown permitted the wedding. The bridegroom is M. Weber, a young German missionary, who was entered at a college before it was turned into a camp. Weber had arranged before the war for his fiancee to travel to the Gold Coast for their marriage. The ceremony over, the bride was allowed to return to Germany, happy in the knowledge that after the war she may rejoin her husband. According to law, if she stayed she, too, would have been interned.—Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph.

AIM TO STARVE POLAND

THE German government not only is starving the people of Poland, but is preventing any measure of relief from reaching them from the outside world. The Commission for Polish Relief, in New York City, in a statement given out, points out that the request for co-operation in relief of the Polish people has not been answered by the German ambassador to the United States. Quite obviously, the German authorities do not want any neutrals to see what is going on in Poland where it is said on credible authority that since the occupation fifty thousand men and women and even children have been murdered. Is it any wonder that there is nowhere in the world, outside of Germany, any friendship for a nation which would bring about what has happened in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and now in Poland? —Niagara Falls Review.

No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?—Matt. vi, 24, 25.

RUSSIA PAYS DEARLY

Losing 4,000 men killed daily, the Russians are paying dearly for their advance into Finland. It has been estimated that the Communists have lost 100,000 men already.

Compared to Russia's population of 170,000,000 the 100,000 men lost are just a drop in the bucket. But news of the casualties filters back home and the people don't like it. They begin to ask if Papa Stalin's jaunt into Finland is all it was cracked up to be.—W. L. Clark, in Windsor Star.

A Bit of Nonsense

The Early Bird

Among the soldiers billeted in the country one decided to rise early.

As he walked along the road he heard the village clock strike five.

"Well, I've always heard a lot about the early rising of country folk," he thought to himself, "but there's no one about yet."

Presently he saw a farm laborer.

"Grand morning!" he called out.

"It is now, sonny," replied the laborer, "but it was very cold first thing."

Easy

A visitor went to a small Cotswold village and asked to see the A.R.P. warden.

He came.

"Now," said the warden finally, "is there anyone else you'd like to see?"

"Yes," came the reply, "the fire chief!"

"I'll not keep you one moment!" replied the warden. "Just wait till I change my hat!"

Friendly

Half-a-dozen times the keen-eyed and enthusiastic look-out of a warship had reported the appearance of aircraft during his watch. Each time the answer he received from the bridge was: "The aircraft you reported was friendly."

He became irritated.

Towards the end of his watch he saw a torpedo speed past the bows of the ship.

"Torpedo passing the bows of the ship, sir—a friendly one," he reported.

Council Returns Petition On Half-Holiday

CAMPBELLFORD, March 5. — (ENS)—A petition signed by local merchants requesting council to pass a bylaw declaring a half holiday every Wednesday except during the month of December was referred back to the petitioners at the suggestion of Town Solicitor N. Alex MacColl when asked his advice on the matter at the council meeting Monday. He commented on the fact that there was no date on the petition and intimated that the preamble was not sufficiently formal. "It merely sets out the desire on the part of these merchants for a holiday but doesn't request council to pass a by-law. Perhaps if some of those who signed realized that a bylaw was necessary they wouldn't have signed. We've had so many petitions of this type in the past with the people asking for something at one meeting and about half of the same names appearing on a petition asking for something entirely different at the next. I think the petition should be referred back to the petitioners and brought back in better form so that the council would be justified in taking some action," Mr. MacColl said.

The solicitor also gave his opinion relevant to a proposal to divide public halls into different categories for the purpose of licensing. The report came as a result of a notice of motion filed at a special meeting held last week when council expressed the desire to levy a smaller fee on the Masonic Temple and Parish Hall, both of which were used as public halls. "There's no reason why the halls cannot be divided into such categories as the council saw fit to put them in", stated the solicitor.

Councillors were of the opinion that from the comparative amount of use made of the three buildings a ten dollar fee was not out of line for the Temple and Parish Hall whereas the regular fee was quite in order for the dance hall which was used several nights a week during the summer and late fall. On motion the legal committee was authorized to go into the matter and bring in a report at the next meeting.

Tax Sale In July

A number of properties including several houses are slated to form a part of the tax sale to be held here early in July. The Mayor was handed a lengthy list of properties in arrears of taxes for more than three years and when he asked for a motion authorizing him to sign a warrant to hold the sale it was made by Reeve Calver and Councillor Battisby. There was not a tax sale in 1939 and council was of the opinion that the pending sale might serve to induce some citizens to clean up at least part of their arrears. L. C. Garrison, local drover asked for permission to use a building situated on town property, convenient to the railroad and stock yards. He claimed the building which he was entitled to use had been kept padlocked and that he was thereby being unfairly discriminated against as a citizen and taxpaper.

"The building should either be taken off town property or the padlock removed," declared Councillor Locke. It was revealed by Mr. Garrison that the building had been constructed five years ago by Canada Packers and was used primarily for grading hogs. Recently another local drover had been using the building and had refused to allow Mr. Garrison access to it. The matter was left with council for further investigation.

Tuesday night was named as the time for a joint meeting with the Water and Light Commission to discuss the grant which the council is to receive from the Utilities this year. Referring to the $3,000 which had been promised for 1940 in place of the $10,000 that the council had hoped for, Mayor Long said, "We will have to point out to them that any deficiency in the grant will have to be made up for by increased taxes."

"I think they are pretty extravagant up there if you'd ask me", put in Councillor MacMillan. "The auditor's report shows there are six telephones being paid for out of that business for one thing and the manager and superintendant are certainly getting large enough salaries to pay for their own. Our policemen pay their telephone bills and they're not getting the salary these men are getting". Reeve Calver presented the auditor's report commending them for its comprehensiveness and making a motion that the auditors salaries be added to the pay sheet and that the financial statement contained in the report be printed.

W. A. Kingston one of the auditors addressed the council, explaining that office equipment had been written down from $2,500 to $1,500 since most of the equipment, such as adding machines and typewriters belonged to the town clerk.

Children's Coughs Quickly Relieved

It is hard to keep the children from taking cold; they will run out of doors not properly clad; have on too much clothing and get overheated and cool off too suddenly; they get their feet wet; kick off the bed clothes at night. The mother cannot watch them all the time, so what is she going to do?

Mothers should never neglect the child's cough or cold, but on its inception should procure a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It is so pleasant to the taste the youngsters take it without any fuss.

Harold Spencer addressed the council asking permission to make certain alterations to his building facing Bridge street and a motion was passed granting it, provided he meet with specifications laid down by the property committee.

Reporting for the committee, which investigated the need for a new heating system in the public schools, Councillor Macmillan made the recommendation that nothing be done to the furnaces this year. "I don't know whether it would be a good idea to put an elaborate heating system into those buildings or not. Repair work should be done there such as pointing up the walls and repairing the stairs," he said.

Popularity Has Its Dangers Ministers Told

The dangers to a minister of too great personal popularity were described yesterday to members of the Peterborough Ministerial Association by Rev. D. Black of Campbellford, speaking at the Y.M.C.A. Rev. F. W. Craik, president, was in the chair, with Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, secretary, directing the business.

The secretary read a letter from Mr. Don Charlton secretary of the Church Hockey League, thanking the association for the beautiful trophy which they had offered for good sportsmanship and Christian character. The president will now present the cup to the boy chosen by a committee composed of boys from the league, and members of the association.

A letter was read from the secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance asking for a field day in the city. It was decided to offer Mr. Webber April 21st or April 28. The work of the Alliance will be presented in six of the city churches on some one of these dates.

The Peterborough Presbytery of the United Church sent a letter recommending Summer Vacation Bible schools, and Religious Education in public schools.

It was decided that the offering at the good Friday services, to be held in George Street and Park Street churches, will be given to the work of the local Vacation School.

Dr. E. W. Young was appointed convener of a committee to prepare plans for Religious Education by the ministers in the public schools of the city and adjoining rural area. The following is the committee: E. W. Young, Canon J. D. Paterson, C. C. Boyter, F. W. Craik, Dr. A. T. Barr, and R. D. Wright.

Revs. R. M. Patterson of Omemee and Rev. Edgar Russell were welcomed to the meeting.

On the motion of Dr. A. T. Barr, the Salvation Army appeal was recommended to the public.

The speaker, Rev. Denny Black of Campbellford, had as his subject, "The Minister—a Mixer or a Meditator." One of the elements that make for popularity in a minister's work is the ability to mix freely with other people. Some men, however, pay too high a price for this popularity. The true minister must never lose sight of the spiritual purpose of his work which is to mediate God to men. St. Paul always made people feel the sincerity of his aspostleship. Jesus moved freely amongst fishermen, Pharisees, and even notorious people. He was no recluse; He was a lover of men; but He never failed to reveal God His father.

What, after all, is the object of pastoral work? Is it not to glorify God, and bring people into the household of faith. The minister may gain a reputation as a humorist, and his funny talk may undermine the confidence of the people. When the dark day comes these folk are not ready to turn to him as their helper. Dr. Alexander Whyte of Edinburgh restricted himself solely to the church's work, and there was about him a certain remoteness, and at times austerity. If the minister is just a handy man about the church he ceases to be a scholar and a teacher.

Some congregations consider the minister just a hired man, whose work it is to organize and raise funds for the church. He should be an ambassador for Christ, a mediator of God. Mixing has its dangers, some men are such good mixers that they become afraid to raise their voices against the social evils that degrade and destroy the souls of men.

The minister of Christ should never be afraid of the people, too close contact with men often chills the soul and makes one pessimistic about the loftier spiritual aims. Fellowship with God is the minister's real dynamic.

Revs. T. H. Floyd, E. W. Rowland and J. H. Sutcliffe thanked the speaker for his stimulating and helpful address.

Present at the meeting were Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, Rev. Edgar Russell, Rev. R. D. Wright, Rev. C. C. Boyter, Rev. R. M. Paterson, Rev. E. W. Rowland, Rev. F. W. Craik, Rev. R. T. F Brain, Rev Dr. E. W. Young, Rev. T. H. Floyd, and Rev Dr. A. T. Barr.

Statesmen's Snapshots

Hon. C. H. Cahan.

Every Leader the Conservative Party has known since Confederation has been intimately known by Hon. Charles Hazlett Cahan, B.A., LL.B., LL.D., K.C., the versatile and effective member of the House of Commons for Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George riding, a riding he has represented since 1925 when he defeated Sir Herbert Marler.

A staunch Conservative, he has never-the-less plowed a lone furrow in Canada's political life. While reiterating time and again his staunch adhesion to his party, he has at times been its severest critic.

Born in Yarmouth, N.S., in 1861, he has crowded his years with an extraordinary diversity of activity. Rarely can the word versatility be so aptly applied, nor can such a wide range of experience be recounted in one life.

He has learned a great deal about people. Not only as Canada's Secretary of State but by living in Halifax, Port of Spain, Montreal, Mexico, London, Berlin, Paris, New York, Geneva and Ottawa. He has done business in all of them.

Like so many Canadian politicians he studied law. Upon graduating from Dalhousie University, where he was a brilliant student, he became a reporter and shortly afterwards editor of The Halifax Herald. At 29 he was elected to the Legislature and almost at once was paper Leader of the Opposition. He was also Conservative organizer for Nova Scotia.

He graduated to Federal politics, and although defeated more than once, finally won one of the Montreal seats in 1925.

In 1928, when the Conservative Party gathered in Winnipeg to select a new Leader, one of the most frequently mentioned prospects was Charles H. Cahan. While he did not win the prize, he made such a patriotic, unselfish speech that it will long be remembered. In 1930 he accepted the portfolio of Secretary of State in the Bennett Government.

Now, at 79 years of age, he is again contesting a seat in the House of Commons.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, March 6.

A rather peculiar setup of the planetary scheme may be responsible for some surprising and perplexing developments on this day. This may mainly affect the domestic, social, or emotional interests, with probably an unforeseen and uprooting denouement. While the disturbances may be unpredictable, as well as breath-taking, the mental adjustment and poise are so soundly based that doubts and difficulties may be composed by good, common sense.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of singular, intriguing and unique experiences, which seem to be mysterious, dangerous and revolutionary. Doubts and disturbances, with perplexities and thrills are indicated, with their roots in subtle, inexplicable and bewildering sources.

A child born on this day, although sensitive, impressionable, subtle and imaginative, fond of mystery and the unique, may have sound judgment and good common sense.

is far worse than unwise. It is criminal. But apparently taking a husband away from a wife who wishes to get rid of him doesn't fall under the head of robbery. It isn't even petty larceny. It is an accommodation. So that does put a different face on the matter.

Certainly I should advise you to go and have a heart-to-heart talk with the wife. Get her views on the matter and be guided accordingly. If she still loves him and wants to keep him, you should recognize her prior right and leave her to enjoy her property in peace. On the other hand, she might give you such a description of the faults and foibles of her spouse that you might consider him a poor risk and call the affair off.

I have always thought that the woman who was marrying a divorced man could get a lot of valuable information from the ex-wife if they could only talk him over together.

The Use of Words

Dear Miss Dix — What do you think about people who use words that their listeners cannot understand? Does it show ignorance or intelligence? S. A.

ANSWER:

It shows intellectual snobbishness. The individual who uses either in writing or speaking words that send the reader or listener scurrying to the dictionary is simply trying to show off. The strongest words are the simplest.

MONTEVIDEO, March 5 (CP)—Courtesy salvoes fired by British warships in greeting to Argentine warships on manoeuvre may have prompted reports of a new Anglo-German naval battle in South American waters, Rear-Admiral Sir Henry Harwood indicated yesterday when he arrived here aboard the 9,800-ton British cruiser Hawkins.

Flatly denying the reports, Sir Henry told interviewers that the only shots fired by ships under his command recently were friendly ones while Argentine ships were holding battle practice off Punta Del Este.

Large crowds lined the docks when the Hawkins arrived. The cruiser planned to take on supplies and leave within twenty-four hours.

Sir Henry was in command of the British squadron which defeated the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee off Montevideo last December.

VAL D'OR, Que., March 5 (CP)—Bad weather conditions delayed the departure for Ottawa yesterday of James H. Cromwell, United States minister to Canada, and Mrs. Cromwell, who came here to see the finish of the International Goldfield Dog Derby. They now plan to return to Ottawa by plane today.

Another Man Who Knows

Shows How Military Specialists Work While Political Carpers Talk

"They're wonderful. They're simply wonderful. I saw the 110th Squadron leave for overseas a short time ago. They were a magnificent lot. Every one of them."

The man who gives this considered judgment on Canada's air fighters is:

Air Marshal William Avery Bishop,

V.C., D.S.O., M.C., D.F.C., Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, Croix de Guerre with Palm.

Again and again, THE MEN WHO KNOW—the responsible leaders of Canada's forces—have underlined the vital need in the conduct of to-day's war, which is not at all like any other war.

The word they have underscored is THOROUGHNESS, not Haste or Emotionalism.

Billy Bishop is now Director of Recruiting for the Royal Canadian Air Force in connection with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. His words parallel those of Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton in London: "What is wanted from us is thorough PREPARATION, military forces and supply clearly developing at an increasing rate and gathering momentum; these it is clear the people of Canada are determined to provide."

When Canada's fliers go into battle they will have had 200 hours' flying experience and will be superior in equipment and training to the foe. In the last war the pilot's average air training was 25 hours. At the END of the war "Billy" Bishop and others similarly placed had only 400 hours' flying time to their credit.

Thorough PREPARATION has made it possible for Air Marshal Bishop to say of the 110th Squadron now overseas ready to meet the Nazi foe: "I have never seen a finer lot of officers and men, splendidly equipped as they are, both in fitness and intelligence. . . . The young men who are entering the service to-day are receiving splendid training, a training that will also fit them for pratically any type of commercial flying, an education which will make them valuable in many lines of peace-time activity."

Behind Preparation—What?

The answer is simple:

The foresight of the King Administration, guided by economic principle, aiming to achieve maximum values with minimum waste. Or, in other words:

The foresight of an Administration which tolerated no political tags in the field of war effort — and set free the "best brains" of experienced specialism to deal with the tasks of specialism.

Peterborough West voters put their trust in a war effort shaped by informed specialists who are named and known—not in a "collection of brains" which does not exist and never will exist save in the imaginings of "Nationalist" myth-makers. A vote for a Record and not for a Promise is a vote for—

Government Of Action Is Required To Do Wartime Job R. L. Maitland Declares At Rally

"If a Labor member were to make a serious charge against Neville Chamberlain and he ran away from it by dissolving Parliament, you would think the war was lost; am I not right?" R. L. Maitland, Leader of the Conservative Opposition in British Columbia, demanded of his audience in the Canadian Legion Hall on Monday night and the chorus of "Right" that came from his hearers indicated that the speaker's point had gone home.

Mr. Maitland, making his first speech of six to be delivered in Ontario, was addressing a largely attended mass meeting in the interest of Gordon K. Fraser, National Government candidate in West Peterborough, and his question climaxed an arraignment of Premier Mackenzie King for his action in "scuttling" Parliament.

"For the first time in history," he declared, "Parliament has held a hit-and-run session. Only in this case we happen to know who the driver was. Then four hours after Parliament met they hid the books."

Charging that King's action in this instance was on the same principle as the shutting off of the Beauharnois transaction and the hushing up of the customs scandals Mr. Maitland said that the existing conditions could not go on. "If you do not clear up that sort of thing by your ballots in this election," he said, "you will put a curse on public life in Canada for the next generation. I have four children and I want something left for them; I don't want them governed by the pork barrel system that is now in vogue."

Mr. Maitland was the chief speaker at the meeting which was presided over by Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, and which opened at the request of the Canadian Legion with a moment's silence as a tribute to the men who gave up their lives in the Great War and those who are now serving. Another unusual feature was the singing of "Rule Britannia" in honor of the heroes of the River Plate and of the rescue of the prisoners on the Altmark.

Other Speakers Heard.

Gordon K. Fraser, who was given a warm reception by the meeting, Jamieson Bone, candidate in Northumberland, Mrs. J. H. Cridland, member of the West Peterborough Women's Conservative Association, and John R. Corkery, completed the list of speakers. Ed. Shortt contributed an amusing monologue that was much appreciated, and a splendid program of music was provided by the Northrop Trio.

"This is one of the most amazing, most confusing elections in the history of Canadian politics," Mr. Maitland said in commencing his address. In earlier great emergencies the two parties had been big enough to get together for the common good, but now in the face of the greatest crisis that had confronted Canada, Mr. King was not big enough to sink party advantage for the welfare of the whole country. With him patriotism seemed to be a case of voting Liberal.

A Government of Action

Mr. Maitland's chief theme was the necessity of a government of action for a war time job, and he asked his audience to recall the record of the two parties in the last ten years in order that they might intelligently decide which of the two had shown itself to be an active and fighting force. First he dealt with the Bennett government's record from 1930 to 1935. It had taken office after King's failure to recognize there was any such thing as a depression and the first thing it did was to send $20,000,000 to the aid of the stricken provinces. Then came Mr. Bennett's fighting policy of building up tariffs so that Canadian industry might be protected and his intimation to the United States that if that country did not buy from us we would not buy from them. Followed the Ottawa trade agreements, which the speaker characterized as among the finest and greatest achievements in the history of Canadian politics. There was unity between provinces and the Federal government, for the provinces were all assisted by the Bennett government. Finally, the speaker said Mr. Bennett introduced his social legislation providing for the eight-hour day, the minimum wage and the unemployment insurance, putting them on the statute books.

The King Record

In 1935 because the people were still depression-conscious and failed to realize that Canada had made greater strides toward normal conditions than any other country in the world there was a change of government, and Mackenzie King came back to power.

During the election campaign he had much to say about Canadian unity. "You remember the maps that were shown with red used to denote Liberal provinces," said the speaker. "By the way the whole country has nearly gone Red by this time. Do you think you can have unity when the Liberal Premier of Ontario cannot get along with the Liberal Premier at Ottawa? I don't know a great deal about your Ontario politics, but there is one thing I don't expect to see and that is Premier Hepburn kissing Mackenzie King on March 27."

Mr. Maitland dealt with the record of the King Government from 1935 to 1940. "The Liberal administration has been virtually working on commission," he declared referring to the Purvis commission and the Rowell commission. The former had made many valuable suggestions, but the report went into the archives with nothing done. Dr. Manion is going to dig it out and put it to work," he said. As for the Rowell commission it had never been allowed to report. Then Mr. King had gone over to England with one idea clear in his mind of diluting the Ottawa trade agreements; he did not like those agreements; he wanted to see them broken so that he could enter into an agreement with the United States.

As for the Labor legislation of Mr. Bennett, Premier King had raised a constitutional issue and scrapped it all, although it had been part of the Liberal platform when in opposition.

The War Phase

Mr. Maitland finally dealt with the war phase of the situation. He told how Dr. Manion who had been travelling all over Canada and meeting with a wonderful reception everywhere and had reason to feel confident that at the next election he would be prime minister of Canada, immediately abandoned all his political activity as soon as war was declared and offered his complete co-operation to Mr. King.

King's attitude to that gesture had been "we're in power and when we're in power Canada belongs to the Liberal party. We have the patronage and you can't lick us."

"That is the same attitude we get in provincial matters as well as in the federal field and it is time it was ended,' said Mr. Maitland in conclusion.

Candidate Introduced

Introducing the candidate Lieut.-Col. Ackerman said that Mr. Fraser had been working unceasingly and would continue to work until election day. "After that he will keep on working just as hard as your member at Ottawa," said the chairman.

Mr. Fraser began by a declaration that there would be no bitterness in the campaign so far as he was concerned. There had been some in other fights and it was time it was stopped because "you cannot have unity in that way."

"I have been told," he said, "that it has been said that Fraser was going to buy votes. "If I have to buy votes to be elected then I don't want to be elected. If I were dishonest before the election I would continue to be dishonest afterward."

He added that he had already been approached by a venerable citizen who said he controlled 16 votes and wanted a cash consideration to turn them over.

"As for conscription," said Mr. Fraser. "I am opposed to it and so is Dr. Manion. There is nothing to be gained by splitting the country in half on that issue."

He was in favor, however, he said of a better system of enlistment that would do away with men who wanted to serve having to travel all over the country looking for a chance to enlist. Some of them had to walk back after some of these journeys, he said, and go without food when they failed to be taken on. "That is not the way o try to enlist men," he said.

The candidate said that he had been told that shortly before the election there would be a war order for a local factory. "I don't believe you people are going to swing your votes just because the government gives you a pat on the back at the last moment," he remarked.

The Oustanding Issue

In his opening address Lieut.-Col. Ackerman said that the outstanding issue of the campaign was to get on with the war and so co-operate with our allies as to carry through to victory. "It must be abundantly clear," he said, "that the only effective way to deal with a mad dog is to go out and lick it." Stressing the great burden that was being carried by the British people Lieut.-Col. Ackerman said that it was the duty of Canada to put forth not a half-hearted effort but to exert every effort of the whole Dominion. This was no time, he said, to go to the polls and vote for some one just because he happened to be a good citizen; it was the responsibility of the voters to use their ballots for the best interest not only of the mother country but of Canada. "Dr. Manion is a characteristic Canadian, a man of great courage, an excellent soldier and armed with the conviction that unless we go into this war with all parties united it is impossible to do justice to this young country."

Mrs. J. H. Cridland, called on to address the meeting, contented herself with inviting the women in the audience to attend a meeting in the Fraser headquarters next week.

Voting Conservative

"After accompanying Mr. Fraser to a number of places in the last two weeks," declared John R. Corkery. "I feel sure that numbers of people who have never voted a Conservative vote before are going to vote that way on this occasion."

Mr. Corkery denounced the action of Premier King in dissolving parliament without giving an account of his stewardship. "He may say that he was forced to this action by the criticism voiced in the Ontario Legislature," said Mr. Corkery, "but the real reason is that he was afraid to meet parliament and those questions that the opposition had prepared for him."

Jamieson Bone

Jamieson Bone, National government candidate in Northumberland, remarking that J. J. Duffus had gone to the Senate and Charles Cameron, former member for South Hastings had been made a judge remarked "Billy Fraser seems to have done pretty well by himself, too, according to the Financial Post."

The former mayor of Belleville declared that Mr. King's conduct of the war had been reprehensible and he condemned some of the contracts that had been let. "You have many fine industries here," he said, "and are well equipped to do war work. Yet the King government let the contract for an order of practice bombs to three Ottawa insurance men, at a cent a bomb cheaper than the Canadian General Electric Company."

MORE ABOUT—
Opposition

Conservative Leader Manion opened his Quebec campaign by speaking in French from Ottawa over a French network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, re-stating his "absolute opposition" to conscription and charging that Liberal leaders are deceiving the people of Quebec province.

He said he was opposed to conscription because it was a failure in the last war, because it is not necessary in this war and because it is the duty of a public man to hold Canada together as a nation.

At Fort William, Hon. H. H. Stevens, a leading supporter of Dr. Manion, said the National Government planned by the Conservative party will discard political patronage in all appointments or war contracts and inaugurate effective measures to prevent profiteering or exploitation. "Under the present government profiteering in certain war contracts is notorious and scandalous," he said.

It is Dr. Manion's intention, if called on to form a government after the March 26 federal election, to call to his aid a body of representative men of high calibre and known experience and reputation, he said. Such a government will give real leadership for voluntary recruiting which "under the present government has been definitely discouraged, and furthermore will gratefully accept the offers of service from the veterans of the last war, whose offers have been spurned by the present government."

Mr. Stevens spoke on unemployment and agriculture. The Mackenzie King Government has done nothing to better the unemployment situation or assist agriculture on which one half of the Dominion population depends for a living he said.

An Army of Spies?

Under existing defence of Canada regulations, the Dominion may soon have "an army of spies with people arrested and taken away in the middle of the night and held without trial," J. S. Woodsworth, national president of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, said at Fort William.

Certain extraordinary powers were necessary for a government in war time but the provisions of the Defence of Canada Regulations menaced civil liberties to an extent that was not needed in the Dominion, he said. They could be changed overnight by action of the government.

Mr. Woodsworth said he had noticed over a period of years that the present government had sought to give business to the Canadian Pacific Railway which might more efficiently and cheaply be handled by the Government-owned National Railways.

The policy of the Liberal government towards the Canadian Pacific might lead to that system becoming the responsibility of the administration, he said. "Then we would have a cry for amalgamation that would be irresistible," he added.

In reiterating his stand against conscription, he said, that the government already was exercising a form of "moral conscription" by giving young men the alternative of being struck off relief rolls or joining the service.

In Ottawa to-day the government is "of the people, by the party machine, for the profiteer."

Administration in Canada had drifted a long way from Abraham Lincoln's conception of government "of the people, by the people, for the people." In Ottawa the hotels were crowded by men there seeking jobs and contracts from the government, he said.

Just Like Hitler

When Prime Minister Mackenzie King dissolved Parliament four hours after it assembled, "he behaved precisely as Hitler has behaved on several occasions, in his treatment of the Reichstag," Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, National Government candidate in the Federal riding of Toronto Parkdale, said in a one-half hour broadcast address over a Toronto station.

"On but one occasion did the Fuehrer go farther," said the former Ontario Lieutenant-Governor, "That was when he burned down his parliament buildings. Mr. King merely bolted the door."

Dr. Bruce charged that parliament was dissolved to forestall discussion of Canada's war effort by the elected representatives of the people.

"The most rational explanation is perhaps that Mr. King acted 'n panic; he feared the obligation of giving an account of his stewardship before a body vested with power to demand production of documentary records. The full story of his mad drive to Rideau Hall during the dinner recess to secure a dissolution will probably now never be told.

"Before the ink was dry upon the paper he acted. He ordered the lights to be put out in the chamber of the House of Commons, so that when members returned at eight o'clock they found the highest court in the land in darkness. They were informed by page boys that officially they had no longer a legal existence."

A War Cabinet.

Canada's war effort is directed ably by a "war cabinet" of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Justice Minister Lapointe, Finance Minister Ralston and Defence Minister Rogers, supplemented by other committees to deal with individual phases, Postmaster-General Power said at Ottawa.

The change from peacetime to war footing was made smoothly, he said, because the machinery already had been set in action following proper preparation. The chief civil servants of the government had been getting ready for 18 months in case war should become an actuality. Chiefs of the various departments knew what roles they would have to play should hostilities break out.

"The Pensions Department, which I headed until lately, knew, for instance, of the part it would play in air raid precautions for our coastal cities. It also had drafted pensions legislation for the new army. The Transport Department made ready to take over shipping control; the Post Office Department to censor the mails, and the Defence Department to censor cables and long distance telephone calls."

An Example.

Lieut.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, charged at a Toronto meeting that the Dominion Government's Bren machine-gun contract embraces "every objectionable feature of profiteering in weapons of war which can be imagined."

He claimed that Hon. C. D. Howe "know perfectly well it was a deliberate lie" when the Minister of Transport, in a recent speech in Toronto, said that allegations Col. Drew made regarding the contract had been disposed of by a public enquiry.

"That lie assumes importance in view of the fact that Mr. Howe is the man whom Prime Minister Mackenzie King has made responsible for the contracts. My allegations were proved to the last detail."

Charges by Conservative leader Manion against the Dominion government war effort have been "inaccurate, reckless and mischievous" and were "apparently designed to create widespread suspicion and distrust," defence minister Rogers said at St. John. Dr. Manion had been unable to provide evidence of a single instance of patronage or profiteering.

Mr. Rogers said:—

"It is being said that prime minister Mackenzie King is a man of peace and has not his heart in this war. I would like to say, with all the conviction in my power, that no greater falsehood has been uttered in the course of this campaign. Mackenzie King was a man of peace, just as you and I, so long as peace could be maintained with honor."

The most recent of Dr. Manion's "irresponsible" charges was termed by Mr. Rogers "absolutely untrue." A newspaper report had quoted Dr. Manion as saying in Northern Ontario Feb. 26 that the first Canadian division went overseas "with some old Lewis machine guns, relics of the last war, and rifles of the type which could not hit the ceiling, and with no artillery."

Guns Overhauled

The Lewis gun equipment was overhauled and placed in first class condition before issue for overseas service, said Mr. Rogers. Many of the barrels were practically new and had fired only a few rounds. The division also had a complete establishment of Vickers machine guns. The new Bren machine guns would follow.

"All rifles issued to the division were thoroughly overhauled, resighted and given a firing test before issue for overseas service. The rifle issued to the Canadian troops is identical with the rifle issued to the British army."

Hon. C. D Howe, minister of transport, said at Midland that the Liberal party believes in using the best brains in the country for the war effort as much as does Conservative leader Manion in his plans for a National government. More than 200 of the top-notch business men of Canada serve on the war supply board to do work "for which they have proved themselves amply fitted in private life."

Ministers who had been under attack included Leslie Burgin, Supply Minister, Sir Kingsley Wood, Air Secretary, Sir Reginald Dorman-Smith, Agriculture Minister, Lord Hankey, minister without portfolio, and several others. All these, except Sir Kingsley Wood, are outside the War Cabinet.

Mr. Chamberlain's first Cabinet reorganization of the war came on the day it broke out. He brought Winston Churchill into the Government as First Lord of the Admiralty and reduced the Cabinet from 20 members to nine. Now there is some agitation for an even smaller Cabinet.

The next reorganization came Jan. 5 when Leslie Hore-Belisha was displaced as War Secretary and changes were made at the Information and Board of Trade posts.

Tomorrow, the former convict, 38-year-old Charles Kingsley Scott, is expected to tell the secret about allegations that the Colonel introduced him as a responsible agent for contractors seeking war orders.

Legislation, based on the reported Scotland Yard investigation, is expected to be forthcoming to eliminate a "rake-off." Heavy penalties, it is said, will be imposed on promoters who demand commissions on the claim that they exercise a special influence over ministry officials.

The News Chronicle commented today that "the cabinet shares the general disquiet concerning supply contracts. Highly placed officials at the War Office have been called in to give evidence."

Nazis Up to Old Tactics

The bombing of the British liner Domala by German warplanes last weekend with a loss of more than 100 lives was "not really worse than many other Nazi actions at sea" the News Chronicle said today.

"Nothing they do now would cause us surprise, however infamous it is," the newspaper said. "But let us beware of getting so used to these murderous actions that we almost condone them in our minds as being common form.

Only the Nazis behave like this at sea. Only the Nazis have this brutal and lawless attitude to life which comes out in their methods of warfare, in their concentration camps and in their treatment of conquered people."

Many Of Crew Trapped

Captain Brawn of the Domala told a dramatic story of the terrible scenes aboard the liner after it was bombed and set on fire. Many of the crew were trapped below deck, the captain said, and suffered serious injuries before they were able to make their way up the escape funnel.

"Among them was Junior Engineer J. Dunn, of Kelty, Fife," Captain Brawn said. "He had a broken leg and terrible burns on his face but he crawled the length of the ship and clambered up 40 feet of perpendicular iron ladder on the poop. His bravery and stamina was amazing.

"A warship came near but the seas were too heavy for a boat to get near so we did the only thing we could. We gave him a lifebelt and threw a lifebuoy to him after lowering him into the water. He was eventually picked up but did not survive. He was about 20 years of age. He was the bravest man on the ship."

The captain said that after rescue work was believed completed a British warship conducted a further search with the aid of a plane, which finally spotted a raft.

Find Only One Survivor

"When the warship reached the raft it found only one survivor left of seven, Cadet Duval, 17," he said. "Six other Europeans had been overcome by the cold and had been washed off the raft. Duval was frozen stiff and had not strength to move. The sailors of the warship formed a living chain over the side of the ship and when the man at the end of the chain reached Duval he had to wrench his frozen hands away from the raft. That was only one of the many great things done that day by the British Navy.

"The last to leave the ship were a butcher, an elderly man named Davy and myself. I lashed him to the same rope as myself and together we jumped for it. We were in the water for five or 10 minutes before being pulled aboard the warship by a rope."

The Daily Mail said editorially: "The loss of the liner Domala holds a lesson and a warning. The circumstances of this raid will doubtless be carefully studied by our air tracticians. It may be the opening of the intensified attack on British and neutral shipping with which we have been threatened.

"We must be prepared for a wide extension in the range of bombing attacks by more powerful bombers. Germany may use machines in squadrons, and attack not only single vessels but convoys."

Liner Bombed In English Channel

One hundred and six persons were estimated to have been killed when a German bomber swooped down on the 8,441-ton liner Domala and scored hits with three bombs and then machine-gunned the decks. This was the first time since the outbreak of war that a German warplane has launched an attack west of the Straits of Dover. An R.A.F. plane is pictured flying above the Domala as it blazes fiercely off the English coast following the German attack. This picture was radioed to New York and then transmitted by phonephoto.

Daylight Saving Will Commence In City April 27

The summer period of Daylight Saving in Peterborough will begin at midnight Saturday, April 27, and end on September 28, about two weeks longer than last year.

A resolution by Alderman Dutton last night, seconded by Alderman Roy, extended to five months the span of time during which an extra hour of daylight will be transferred from the dewy mornings to the cool evenings. It was incorporated in a bylaw introduced by Alderman Cotton at the meeting of the City Council.

All the members voted for the bylaw except Aldermen Gordon and McIntyre. Alderman Gordon told the Examiner afterward that he was supporting the bylaw, and Alderman McIntyre said he was in favor of daylight saving, but the period seemed to him a little too long. It was stated that Peterborough's summer time will now coincide with that of Toronto. Last year it was from May 6 until September 23.

In introducing the bylaw Alderman Cotton said that the railways had been trying for years to get uniformity in the period of Daylight Saving. "We have been gradually moving back to conformity with the majority of the cities and towns."

"We began one week later than the larger cities last year," Alderman Dutton stated, "and we carried on to the end of their time. I didn't hear any adverse comments. The only way we can help to bring about uniformity is by adopting a resolution so that others will see the force of it and do likewise."

Alderman Roy said he was in favor of synchronizing Daylight Saving with the period adopted by Toronto, and Alderman Cotton pointed out that the advantage to home gardeners came during the evenings in May.

Grants Authorized.

Another bylaw authorized the payment of the following grants as recommended recently by the finance committee: Canadian Institute for the Blind, $50; Peterborough Humane Society, $150; Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Legion, $800; Peterborough Exhibition, $2,000; Poultry Association, $75; Peterborough Health Association, $1,000; Salvation Army for social work, $300; Toronto Hospital for Sick Children, $100; Saint Vincent's Orphanage, $200; Chamber of Commerce, $300; Rugby Club, $250; Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association, $200; Children's Aid Society, $500 (for an additional trained worker); St. John Ambulance Brigade, $50; and four Christmas fund contributions: Children's Aid Society and St. Vincent's Orphanage each $25, Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion $50, and Peterborough Unemployed Workers' Association $25.

Lions' Club Hears Rev. G. S. Easton

"The Game of Life" was the subject of an address by Rev. G. S. Easton of Trinity United Church when he spoke at the bi-weekly meeting of the Lions' Club at the Kawartha Club last night. He outlined fundamental character-building principles to be followed.

President Errol Clarke announced a sale of tickets for complimentary seats at the Toronto Skating Carnival on March 15 and said that winners will be announced at the Regent Theatre on Tuesday next. The Lions were entertained by selections on the electric guitar, played by Helen Ludbrook Galvin and Jimmy Sands.

APPOINTMENT CONFIRMED.

With the completion of a year of experience in the assessment department, the appointment of Bert C. Graham as an assistant assessor, was confirmed by the council last night.

CHANGES HIS PLEA

Changing his plea to guilty this morning, a young man who pleaded not guilty Monday morning to being drunk, was fined $10 and costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning. He took the alternative jail sentence.

PAINT THE TABLES.

A visitor from Toronto to this city on Saturday remarked that the tables in the market hall should be painted. The woman making her first visit to the market was impressed by the displays but contended the tables would look much better if they were painted white or a silvery grey.

RUGS AT STATION

Police removed this morning three rugs from a car that had been left parked near Jackson Park all Monday night and were preparing to have the machine towed to a garage, only to find that it disappeared. The owner can have his rugs by applying at the police station.

HAVE NO QUARTERS

Sale of the Legion Hall may be very well, but the members of the Peterborough Brass Band don't think so. They have been in the custom of holding their weekly practices there and are getting whipped into shape and well on the way to becoming Peterborough's outstanding band. Now they are faced with the necessity of looking for other practicing quarters, no easy task.

COLLIDE ON DUBLIN STREET

A car owned and driven by J. Carter, 270 Dublin street and a truck owned by a Toronto yeast firm and driven by J. C. Jordan, 796 George street were damaged Monday when they met in collision in front of the Walker Bread Company on Dublin street. Carter was driving east down the hill when the truck coming from the east made a left turn into the bread company's premises and the two vehicles came together.

RETURNS 1937 TAX ROLL.

The return of the 1937 tax roll to City Treasurer M. E. Shaver was ordered by the council last night on Alderman Cotton's proposal seconded by Alderman Bradburn. It has been in the hands of S. A. Couper, Tax Collector, for the ordinary receipt of taxes for that year. When the roll goes to the city treasurer's office "it gives us a chance to go to work right away," Alderman Cotton said. Presumably he meant that gentle reminders will be sent out to those who are in arrears, and that gradually the pressure has to be increased.

Railways Seek To Abandon Dranoel Line

LINDSAY, Ont., March 5—(CP).—Lindsay City Council was informed by the railways last night that application is being made to the Board of Transport Commissioners at Ottawa by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways for leave to abandon the Canadian Pacific line between Dranoel and Lindsay, and between Orillia and Medonte.

The communication from the railways said it is intended that the C.P.R. line between Lindsay and Bobcaygeon shall be taken over and operated by the Canadian National.

The Dranoel-Lindsay line was built in 1911 as part of the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway and opened for traffic in 1912.

Father Is Guilty Assaulting Son

Pleading guilty to assaulting his thirteen-year-old son occasioning actual bodily harm, a local married man was allowed to go on suspended sentence by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning after his counsel Ralph Standish had pleaded that the offence was not a flagrant one and that it was the first time his client had been charged.

"I suppose it was a case of too much liquor," said Magistrate Langley.

"I am afraid that is about it," said Mr. Standish.

Crown Attorney McElderry said that he would not oppose the request for suspended sentence but he thought a condition should be that the accused should refrain from the use of liquor.

"The immoderate use of liquor," suggested Magistrate Langley. "I don't think the courts should be turned into temperance societies."

"There will have to be some condition about liquor or I will not accept the bond," declared the Crown Attorney.

Mr. Standish said his client was quite satisfied to agree to leave liquor alone.

"If he is satisfied that is all right," said Magistrate Langley.

The accused was allowed to go on suspended sentence for two years on condition that he refrain from the use of "whisky and wine" for that period.

A second charge of causing a disturbance was dismissed when the crown offered no evidence in the case.

Entrance Exams Start June 27

One of the last two surviving departmental systems of examinations, the entrance class schedule will be commenced this year on June 27. It will continue for two days. As was the custom adopted in 1939, writing has been discontinued as a separate special subject but marks for writing are determined by studying other paper written.

According to copies of the examination program received here English literature and mathematics will be written on June 27 with English composition and spelling on the following day. Grammar is included with composition.

For several years, ever since the provincial department of education began abolishing examinations in various grades of the secondary schools there has been a movement towards the abolition of the entrance class examinations. With the announcement of the examination schedule for this year officials know that the department has not yet decided to eliminate these tests.

However, the number of examinations has been decreased from nine to four papers.

Seek To Co-operate In Beautifying City

The desire of the Peterborough Horticultural Society to co-operate in the beautification of the city was expressed to the council Monday night by Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, president, and John A. Smith, past president.

Alderman Stocker, chairman of the parks committee, suggested that the Society might be asked to assume some floral work on the lot at the southeast corner of Monaghan Road and Sherbrooke Street.

"That's not an entrance to the city," Mayor Hamilton said. Rev. Mr. Zufelt had mentioned the possibility of beautifying one of the main entrances to the city.

"Give them Armour Hill and let them bang away up there," said Ald Stocker.

A motion by Alderman Gordon, seconded by Alderman Cotton, instructed the clerk to write the Society that any of its suggestions from time to time would be welcomed, and that some members of the committee be appointed to the Horticultural Society.

Soap factories of India may have to shut down because of a shortage of raw materials.

Reginald (LEFT) and Hector (RIGHT) Williams, sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Williams, 263 Engleburn Avenue. The two boys enlisted at Kingston at the outbreak of the war with the Canadian Signallers' Corps and went across with the first division. Their father was a member of the 8th C.M.R. during the Great War.

Health Certificates Required For Those Handling Food In City

Purveyors of food, carrying on business by municipal license, will be required hereafter to submit to Sanitary Inspector MacPherson certificates of the health of their employees before their applications are made to the City Council.

This resolution by Alderman Gordon Monday night, seconded by Alderman McIntyre, reflected official irritation resulting from a series of evasions of the Inspector's proscriptions. At various times he had recommended that licenses be not granted until certain conditions were complied with, but in the meantime business went on as usual in those places.

Alderman Bradburn returned to this question last night, pointing out the inconsistency of receiving an adverse report from the Sanitary Inspector and at the same time closing no doors. In this instance licenses were not granted to a restaurant and a bakery because they had neglected to supply health certificates for all the members of their staffs.

"They don't get a license but they carry on business just the same," Alderman Bradburn remarked. "On the other hand if they provided certificates tomorrow they would have to remain closed for a month if a rigid rule were applied."

"It should be that they get their licenses when they have complied with the law," Alderman Cotton said, and Alderman Gordon proposed the resolution which will now require restaurant owners, bakers and others to obtain health certificates for their employees before they apply for renewal of their licenses.

War Bulletins

PARIS.—(AP)—French and German air forces surveyed each other's territory today, and on land there were patrol skirmishes along the western front.

The army high command communique said merely: "Nothing to report."

BERLIN.— (AP)— Artillery fire and aerial reconnaissance enlivened the western front yesterday, according to the German communique today. It said:

"Between the Moselle River and the Palatinate Forest livelier artillery fire and scouting activity by both sides.

"The air force, despite unfavorable weather conditions March 4 continued reconnaissance flights over Eastern France."

LONDON.— (CP)— Czech volunteers who have completed their training in military camps along the Eastern British coast are now preparing to join the reconstituted Czecho-Slovak army in France, it was disclosed today.

Going Via Paris

PARIS.— (AP)— Three "pocket" gunboats" on their way from England to the Black Sea with the Rumanian navy arrived at Paris today, taking the usual course of France's inland canal system to get to the Mediterranean.

The three little boats, built in England, are of 35 tons each. They are 75 feet long, are capable of a speed of 45 knots and are equipped with torpedo tubes, anti-aircraft guns, machine-guns and anti-submarine bomb devices. Each carries a crew of 15.

With the French.

PARIS.—(CP-Havas).— The first soldier of Czech nationality to die on the French front was Jaroslav Basl, the War Ministry to-day informed the Czecho-Slovak National committee. Basl, a member of the French Foreign Legion, was killed in action Jan. 9.

SYDNEY, Australia—(CP).—The Australian Woolgrowers' Council today made public a resolution asking the British Government to reduce the price of wool and urging that supplies to neutrals be maintained so as to preserve such markets for the future.

MELBOURNE — (CP-Reuters). — A military funeral was held here today for Lieut.-General Ernest Squires, acting chief of the Australian general staff, who died Sunday.

Soccer Suspended.

LONDON — (CP). — The usual soccer matches between the British and French armies had been suspended for the duration of the war. Following the announcement in the House of Commons today by War Secretary Oliver Stanley, Will Thorne, Labor, drew laughter by asking if a substitute match could be arranged between the two Cabinets.

LONDON—(CP)—Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden announced that upward of 1,300 Newfoundland volunteers would be trained for the Royal Artillery.

Asked by William Gallacher, only Communist member of the House of Commons, whether Britain intended to restore democracy in Newfoundland before bringing her men to fight, Mr. Eden replied that the economic position of Newfoundland is improving steadily "and we shall do our best to foster that."

MOSCOW.—(AP).—A new Russian economic mission will leave for Berlin at the earliest possible moment to place orders in accordance with the Soviet-German trade agreement.

Alarmed by declining production in the Galician oil fields, Moscow was reported by Izvestia, government newspaper, to be alloting 65,000,000 rubles (about $13,000,000) for expansion there. Tonnage for 1936 was 30,000 compared with 1,400,000 in 1913.

Hope To Unite Ontario Hunters And Anglers United Effort Result In Greater Endeavors

Recent discussion of a plan to amalgamate or arrange some closer form of cooperation between the Ontario Federation of Anglers and the Ontario Hunters Association has taken place at the convention of both organizations held in Toronto. The opinions indicated that such a move was quite practical and most definite. Local sportsmen urged that this move be made and discussed the question at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association.

In the monthly bulletin issued by the Department of Game and Fisheries the editor has this to say on the subject: "It was pointed out that according to information published lately there are 188 protective associations registered with the Department, of which 33 were angling, 24 hunting, and 131 angling and hunting. Almost 7 0per cent of the local sportsmens' associations therefore covered the activities of both hunters and anglers.

Under the present set-up the Provincial bodies are divided into hunters and anglers and local clubs desiring to affiliate with both groups must split their interests, pay two separate memberships and be content with divided representation. This divided interest has resulted in impaired effort, because as was pointed out at the convention, the local clubs cannot afford to pay two fees, and simply carry on in very many cases without the help of the parent bodies.

From the practical point of view it was demonstrated that united effort would result in an enlarged field through larger and more representative backing and that a consolidation of the available revenue from fees and other sources would provide the means to carry out a more extended program of conservation activities."

Beverage Room In Ashburnham Is Not Wanted

Protests by the congregation of Mark Street United Church and two of its associations against the granting of a beverage license in Ashburnham were received by the City Council last night, and on Alderman McIntyre's motion, seconded by Alderman Stocker, copies of them will be forwarded to the Ontario Liquor Control Board.

The resolution also directed that the letters be acknowledged. Discussion of them was brief. Mayor Hamilton said he did not think any application was being made for a beverage license in the premises at the southeast corner of Hunter and Burnham Streets, the old home of the late David Conroy. It was understood that the property had been acquired by one of the gasoline companies as the site of a service station.

The letter from the congregation was signed by Rev. E. W. Rowland, pastor, and Wm. Tinker, clerk. It asserted that there had been no request for a beverage room across the river, "it would have a detrimental effect on the neighborhood," and they wished to oppose it with all the power at their command. A brief but similar letter from the Women's Association of the church was signed by Mrs. Mary A. Northrop, and the third from the Women's Christian Temperance Union was signed by Mrs. George H. Rowe.

A request from the Little Lake Cemetery Company for the construction of a curb on each side of Haggart Street was referred to the Board of Works. It was prompted by reports that the council was considering the laying of a protective curb on Crescent Street from Lock Street to the main gate of the cemetery.

A letter from M. H. Gainey expressed his appreciation of the council's action in reappointing him as the city's representative in the Suburban Area Commission.

City Engineer Parsons reported six miscellaneous building permits issued during February for a total value of $7,750.

February Relief.

Peterborough's relief cost last month was $10,658, as reported by City Clerk Armstrong. Three major items were: Provisions, $5,044.75; fuel, $2,184.29, and rent, $1,813.57.

The fire loss for February was $189.70. Chief Gimblett reported fifty-nine alarms of which fifty-eight were by telephone.

Pool Table Licenses.

Reduction of the pool table license from $15 a table to $7.50 was sought by a deputation composed of Louis Yeotes, A. E. Thompson, Leo Girard and W. McIlmoyle. They stated that the fee for bowling alleys was $5 an alley. The petition was referred to the finance committee.

Alderman Cotton later presented a favorable report on the granting, including renewals, of licenses for pool tables as follows: Louis Yeotes, 407 George Street, twelve tables, and on Charlotte Street, eight tables; A. E. Thompson, 56 Hunter Street East, two tables; W. McIlmoyle, 202 Charlotte Street, five tables; Leo Girard, 180 Simcoe Street, one table. These comprise all the licenses at present granted for pool tables.

City Purchases Gasoline Supply

The tender of the Shell Oil Company to supply gasoline and oil for city trucks and cars was accepted by the council Monday night on the recommendation of a special committee of which Alderman Wilson was chairman. The price is 15 cents a gallon with an allowance of 1½ cents a gallon discount on the purchase of 4,000 or more gallons in any month.

"It is understood that as gasoline prices rise generally in Ontario there may be increases in the set prices," the report stated.

Motor oil is to be bought in quart bottles at 70 cents a gallon, the city maintaining the right to buy in drum lots at any time.

Alderman Wilson said he had consulted R. L. Dobbin, manager of the Utilities Commission, who promised to "bring this matter before the Commission at its next meeting."

Feared Lost

Amsterdam, March 5 (AP)

FEAR that The Netherlands steamship Rijnstroom, 695 tons, had gone down with her crew of 12 was expressed today by her owners, the Holland Steamship Company, which said the vessel had been unreported since leaving The Downs, British contraband control port, yesterday.

Two Netherlands ships, the Bandaris and Amstelstroom, reported sighting floating wreckage and an empty lifeboat from the missing vessel. The owners said there was still faint hope the crew might be found in a second lifeboat.

Returns To City After 19 Years

Peterborough has changed a lot in 19 years, according to Pte. Earl Hartley of the 48th Highlanders who spent a few hours in the city yesterday visiting his sister, Mrs. J. Morden, of the Charlbond Apartments.

"Whatever became of that old fellow who was a cripple and had a tobacco and candy stand in the lane near the Regent Theatre?" was one of Hartley's enquiries. The old fellow was Tom Parrott, and he has been dead several years.

Hartley said the biggest changes had taken place on the main street, particularly at the corners, C.D.S., Zeller's and Brooks Grill were new, taking the place of Moore's Monument Works, Turnbulls and Kent's Drug Store.

Hartley is the son of Dave Hartley, who was killed along with Herb Landry about 1921, when the two were painting Central School. The scaffold upset and both fell some distance to their deaths. The elder Hartley was quite a walker in his day and was rated the third best in Canada. He took part in walking races from Peterborough to Port Hope and Peterborough to Toronto.

One boyhood incident remained with the soldier and he went over to the police station to find Jack Deannard, who left the force some time ago. According to Hartley, he and a few pals pushed a big pile of four-foot slabwood into Jackson Park creek and Constable Deannard caught them. "I can still see the policeman standing in the guard room with the cat-o'-nine tails and every once in a while he would strike the table. He didn't hit any of us but I can tell you we were certainly frightened."

Hartley left the city last evening.

Lindsay Woman Is 97 Years Old

LINDSAY, March 5—(ENS). — Mrs. James Nellis, believed to be Lindsay's oldest lady, celebrated her 97th birthday Monday by spending several hours knitting intricate pieces of lace, a hobby she has enjoyed for a great many years. Her eyesight, described by her daughter as "excellent," is sufficiently keen to enable her to do the finest of lace knitting so well that some of her work is exceptionally beautiful.

Born Mary Winn, of the township of Emily, Mrs. Nellis lived the greatest part of her life on a farm two miles from her birthplace. Her husband, who has been dead many years, had a farm in Ops township, not far from the Emily township farm on which she was born.

She has been enjoying good health and is still able to go for drives in a car. It is only a year or so since when she was a regular attendant at St. Mary's Catholic Church here.

She received many telegrams, cards and telephone calls of congratulation today. One daughter, Mrs. Michael Clancy of Toronto, visited with her for the occasion.

Port Hope Officer Goes To Whitby

PORT HOPE, Ont., March 5—(CP)—Effective March 15, the Port Hope office of the Provincial Police force which opened Aug. 1, 1939, will be closed and Provincial Constable James Sutherland transferred to Whitby. Pressure of duties in that area is reported to be the cause for the move.

Provincial Constable A. L. Mennie, who is stationed at Cobourg and formerly covered the territory now in charge of Constable Sutherland, will again take over this district.

St. Andrew's Men Review Church Affairs

A meeting of the Men's Association of St. Andrew's church was held on Monday night. Supper was served by a group of the Women's Association, with Mrs. Arthur Bellegham in charge, assisted by Mrs. Paige Rowell, Mrs. O. V. Ketcheson, Mrs. R. D. Brown, Mrs. G. A. Gillespie and other helpers. There was a large attendance of men.

E. F. Reir presided, with Herb. Hawley as secretary The chairman expressed their sinecere sympathy with W A. Richardson on account of the death of Mrs. Richardson, who had been an active worker in the church. Mr. Richardson was to have given the address at the meeting. R. B. Harle led in community singing of well known hymns.

The chairman announced that the 107th church anniversary had been fixed for Sunday, May 12th and that Rev. W. J. Johnston of Eglinton church, Toronto, would be the guest preacher. The session were negotiating with the Metropolitan Silver Band of Toronto to provide special music over the week-end. This proposal was unanimously approved by the meeting.

The chairman spoke of the special expenditure which the board of managers had had last year, and urged the men to use the envelope system in order to avoid special appeals at the end of the year.

G. A. Gillespie, chairman of the finance committee, spoke of the traditions of St. Andrew's church. The manse had been erected in 1880, the present church in 1885.

They had spent $5,400 recently on the manse and it was now a finer house than at any time in its history. The sum of $2,700 had been spent last year by the ladies on church decoration and $670 extra by the board in connection with the lights, and the radiators of the church. All pledges for the manse fund had been paid and only one other year's promises remained for collection.

The total debt at present was $8,200. Paige Rowell, the new chairman of the board of managers, was introduced to the meeting and appealed for the co-operation of the men of the church.

Dr. E. W. Young spoke on some ways in which the men might help the work of the congregation.

To supply flashlight batteries to Britain a new factory has been started in Belgium.

FOUR BOSTON BRUINS ON SCORING SPLURGE IN THE N.H.L. RACE

Schmidt Leader In Sniping With 45 Points

MONTREAL, March 5.—(CP)—Four of the Boston Bruins' ace marksmen were the hottest things in the National Hockey League this week. The official scoring statistics issued last night by President Frank Calder showed that Roy Conacher, Woody Dumart, Bill Cowley and Bobby Bauer gathered 22 points.

Conacher led the parade for the week with eight points on five goals and three assists. His 28 points moved him much closer to the leaders, still topped by Milt Schmidt of Boston, who added one point during the week to raise his total to 45.

Cowley collected six points to move into a fourth place tie with Neil Colville of the New York Rangers. Each has 36 points and they trail Bryan Hextall of the Rangers and Dumart, who have 39 points each, six behind Schmidt.

Dumart drew even with Hextall on the strength of two goals and three assists. Phil Watson of the Rangers and Bauer of Boston have 35 points each, one behind Cowley and Colville. Bauer picked up three points during the week.

Captain Red Horner of the Toronto Maple Leafs leads the penalty parade with 83 minutes. Art Coulter of Rangers is next with 66.

League Schedule Of 161 Games

NEW YORK, March 5 (AP)—The 161-game schedule that the International Baseball League will undertake this year to fill out a lengthened season was released today by president Frank Shaughnessy.

The campaign was extended a week to conform with the American Association and as a result the league increased its program from 154 games.

On opening day, April 18, Montreal will play at Jersey City, Buffalo at Baltimore, Toronto at Newark and Rochester at Syracuse.

The season will close Sept. 15.

Remember When—

After 15 years of trying, the United States Military Academy of West Point scored its first victory over the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont., one year ago today, in the 16th annual hockey game between the two schools. The Pointers had previously tied only one game to spoil the Canadians' otherwise complete run of victories.

Quaker Aces Win In Port Hope By 38-19 Score

The Quaker Aces ladies basketball team journeyed to Port Hope last evening for an exhibition game with the Port Hope Grads and finished on top by a 38-19 score.

Right from the start the Aces took full command and on successive tallies by Dot Weese, Peggy Lawless and "Spud" Alexander had a 6-0 lead before the homesters scored a single on a foul shot. The Quaker girls kept right on plugging with a wide-open attack and an airtight defence and led 25-7 at halftime.

The Grads came out with a tight five-man defence in the second half and led by speedy thrusts by L. Hosking and J. Jamieson soon brought their score to 15 points. Their speed and defensive work kept the visitors off the scoring sheet for most of the third quarter but Peggy Lawless broke the spell with a sparkling tally and from then on the Aces had the upper hand.

The Grads had more speed but the Quakers looked decidedly better with their passing and neat work around the basket and clearly deserved to double their opponents' score.

Quaker Aces, 38—D. Weese (11), E. Alexander (8), J. Fowler (4), M. Duncan (2), A. Grady (1), P. Lawless (12), E. Kirn, M. Hooton, V. Wood.

Port Hope Grads, 19—L. Hosking (6), J. Jamieson (7), N. Robertson, H. Watson (1), H. Ferguson (3), D. Brooks, M. Douglas, W. Halford (2).

Referee—Ken Gillespie.

PRO PUCK PERSONALITIES

JACK CHURCH
Toronto Maple Leafs

(By Central Press Canadian)

Were the regulations governing the awarding of the Calder prize-rookie award not so strict — they demand that a player must not have played an N.H.L. game prior to the season in which he is selected, Jack Church, defenceman with Toronto Maple Leafs, would be strongly in the running for this season's award. Jack played a few games in emergencies with the Leafs last season, but this winter is his first full major league campaign and he's made good, something he has had to do without having a regular defence partner, this year's Toronto system juggling six players into four defence posts each game. He's no Little Lord Fauntleroy on the ice, but three minor league seasons with Syracuse, when the Stars of that city were the Toronto farm team, toned him down to the extent of his concentrating more on the puck than in taking opposing players apart. Church turned pro with Syracuse at the start of the 1936-37 season, after a season with the Toronto Dukes—and another in a Toronto commercial league. Despite his many Toronto connections he's a western Canada hockey product. Born at Kamsack, Sask., he played at Regina and had a trial at one of Lester Patrick's Winnipeg "hockey schools," but didn't stick. It was after that that he journey east to remain. Last winter he was chosen for the Int.-Am. league's all-star team. Born on Victoria day 25 years ago.

SPORTS—DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC PERDUE

A soldiers' entertainment is listed for the local Armouries on Thursday evening, through the courtesy of Lt.-Col. R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, officer in command. It's the return visit of the 45th Battery of Lindsay in a sports program, including boxing and wrestling, etc. Some time ago, local chaps competed with the Battery bunch in Lindsay, with the co-operation of the "Y" here, and the Lindsay bunch are repaying the gesture. The entertainment, we understand, is open to members of the Prince of Wales Rangers and their friends.

Vic McKenty, Kitchener sports writer, has some comments on the Greenshirts' loss to the puck-chasing Petes here Friday. He writes: "Kitchener Greenshirts absorbed an unexpected reverse in playoffs when they found the opposition at Peterborough a bit too potent, dropping the opening round-robin game by a 5-2 score. The reverse in Peterborough makes the row of the Greenshirts just that much harder to hoe. Apparently playing against opposition of a lower classification all season didn't do very much to put the Shirts on edge for the games that count."

* * * * * *

"Really Start Flying"

But he takes an optimistic view and adds: "However, one loss isn't enough to eliminate the Shirts and now that they know the strength of at least one of their three opponents, they are likely to really start flying and take no chances from here in. While it has not been officially announced, it is quite likely that when the round-robin games have all been played there will be a playoff between the leading teams. So, if Greenshirts can't come home in front, they at least have a chance to figure in a series for the O.H.A. championship. Indications are that Peterborough will play the return visit here next Friday, though at present that, too, is indefinite."

* * * * * *

A leading light all winter on the Petes' second forward line is Don Coughlin. For no particular reason, except that he is a valuable player and a good guy, we mention the fact—in case some fans overlook Coughlin's work. He was second in scoring for the whole squad during the locals' O.H.A. schedule with 14 goals and six assists for 20 points, and is right in there battling every game. A consistent sniper and a guy who doesn't back up from any hard-hitting defence, Don is also quite a kidder and popular with his buddies. No doubt he inherited much of his hockey ability from his father, Jerry Coughlin—former pro star.

Lacrosse Coming Up

Annual meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club will be held Saturday aft at two bells in Duffus' for the election of officers, general business discussion, and to appoint delegates to the annual O.L.A. convention Good Friday. Considerable work has been done already regarding lacrosse here, in a quiet way, and the club is definitely planning on a championship squad this year. All officers, players and others interested are invited to attend this conclave. At this early date—while we're thinking seriously of a hockey championship—it looks like a big lacrosse season locally in 1940.

Fading in the final frame in Omemee last e'en, the Black Hawks bowed out of the O.H.A. intermediate "B" playdown picture as Whitby copped an 8-6 victory to win the round 17-11. The Whitby series' lead of four goals was chopped down to one early in the second heat, but the O's couldn't quite keep up the pace on heavy ice and the visitors earned the decision. Hawks looked best in the opening chukker, the second was pretty even but 'twas all Whitby in the windup chapter. Tripp and Dart again led the attack for the losers, with the rest of the crew pulling hard on the oars, also. Brown, Heard, Dafoe and Piper all clicked well for the winners. Thus endeth another district puck representative.

They Pack 'Em In

Just the other day we mentioned the good work of Pick Hines and his Baltimore Orioles, with Bill Calladine and Ned Vitarelli aboard, in recent weeks. Last night in N'Yawk, the Orioles won their 14th straight fray over the Rovers, 4 to 3. Drake Jopling of the Petes used to play for the Rovers, although that's got nothing to do with last night's tilt. Jack Dyte—who played for Barrie 'gainst our juniors, and for the Falls against the grown-up locals — had his wrist busted on the Baltimore defence. The fact that the Rovers, supposedly an amachoor club—though the boys knock down about $50 a week—can pack in 13,000 and 14,000 for a Sunday afternoon double-header shows how hockey is growing in the States. The U.S. eastern loop may embrace 12 clubs next year, 'tis said.

Quaker Aces won an exhibition gals' cage game in Port Hope last p.m. o'er the Grads 38 to 19. Dunno what local lasses' contests are listed for this Friday here, but an L.O.B.A. tussle is on tap at nine Friday e'en in the Y.W. when Belleville girls and the Orfuns meet in a return playoff. St. Paul's men hoopsters have an O.C.B.A. fixture tonight in Toronto, return being here toward the end of the week. Men's melees Saturday eve in the Y.M.C.A. have Bees meeting Dominions at 7.15 and Zephyrs against C.G.E. at 8.15 in important final scheduled games. St. John's junior church gang plays in Toronto this week-end.

Up and Down Sports' Rialto: Kitchener is at Port Colborne tonight as Collingwood plays in Owen Sound....Red Creighton of the Trappers is going like a house afire this season and has been in on most of the Sound goals in their group playoff series....Oshawa Bees took a 3-2 nod over Kingston's "B" juniors on the latter's ice last night in the first of a two-in-three series....And the good Cobourg "C" lads rubbed out Trenton 11-8 in first-round playdowns....Annual meeting of the O.B.A. will be in Welland on April 6th; nominations should be sent Sec. Snyder by March 23rd....Ottawa Senators will be back in the Can.-Am. pro ball loop, using Ogdensburg for half their home games....No word yet of the Industrial Puck Loop League semi-final playoffs....Aside from maybe Oshawa and Peterborough, there doesn't seem a very good chance of any senior ball clubs operating this side of Toronto, or in Toronto, this year ....Ice is holding up well at the Brock and the Petes may be playing here yet this Friday, quien sabe?....Nope, we won't say another word; see our lawyer!

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., March 5 (AP)—The hammer and sickle set into stone above the entrance of Pipkin high school is no more. Superintendent Harry Study got so tired of explaining that the design was an ancient symbol of industry and agriculture long before Communism that he hired a stone cutter to remove it.

Boxing Moguls Are Having Real Battle In England

LONDON, March 5 (CP) — The season found Britain's boxing moguls going at it hammer and tongs in a battle which hasn't ended yet but which so far has resulted in the British Boxing "Board of Control" losing control of the three biggest names in the local business.

They are Sydney Hulls, first promoter in Great Britain; Jack Solomons, manager of Eric Boon, frisky lightweight champion and Lonsdale Belt holder; and Harry Levene, manager of Larry Gains, Jock McAvoy and Dave Crowley. Jack Doyle's manager Dan Sullivan has promised the rebels his support.

When the trio pitched their licences at the BBBC they announced plans for establishing a control board composed of newspapermen and "business as usual in the New Year." The BBBC retaliated by announcing it would stage its own tournaments for charitable purposes.

The dissidents haven't yet found their panel of newspapermen, but they've staged several unlicensed tournaments and no action has been taken against the participants. Meanwhile the BBBC hasn't yet put on a charity show, chiefly because most of the headliners are under the control of Hulls and company.

So They Quit

The trio had been summoned before the board to answer various charges. Hulls had refused to allow a BBBC steward into a dressing room and he didn't give Col. R. E. Myddleton, chairman of the board, time to recite the case against him. Instead he told him he had lost £1,000 ($4,450) on the Boon-Crowley December fight as a result of a charity promotion countenanced by the board which injured both Boon and Crowley and caused postponement of Hull's advertised show. Furthermore he told the board it could try to collect its assessment on his failure.

Next came Solomons, who runs the Devonshire Club where Britain's best junior fighters cavort. He was asked to explain his loud conduct at the ringside after the Boon-Crowley fight, when the BBBC failed to produce the Lonsdale Belt to drape on its gladiator. It was lost. He asked that newspapermen who were present at the argument should be invited to listen to his reply. The board refused so he threw his licence down beside Hulls.

Lavene resented an inquiry into Crowley's ankle injury and resigned too.

One important promotion group remains under the wing of the BBBC—the National Sporting Club—but even it has to depend on talent from the rebel camps for its regular Monday night shows at Empress Hall, Earl's Court.

Fred Dartnell, at the end of a survey of the situation in his News Chronicle sports column wrote: "...and the boxing public, conscious that the interests of the noble art are being badly served, may say with Mercutio, "A plague on both your houses."

CURLING

By HERB MARTIN

It was as flat as the well-known pancake all day yesterday down at this ice palace and indications this morning are that today will be equally as flat.

The mild dip that came over the week-end may be OK for some things but it is certainly no good for curling.

Looking over the list of activities we have a lot to do yet before we can nail up the windows.

There's the Leads and Seconds series to finish; the final games in the group for the club championship; all of the vice-skips bonspiel (and that's a week's play); the finish of the Sturgeon trophy, besides the inter-town games with Lindsay, Lakefield and Bobcaygeon. Is it any wonder we are hoping for a little more cold weather?

One rink from the ladies' section leaves today for Kingston to play in a bonspiel sponsored by the ladies of the Kingston Curling Club. The rink is composed of Mrs. V. Selkirk, Mrs. D. Lawrie, Mrs. G. Wood and Miss H. Panning, skip.

And tomorrow two men's rinks, skipped by T. McArthur and R. Downey, are motoring over to Oshawa to play in a 1-day bonspiel. Wouldn't it be great if one of the rinks brought back the Sykes trophy and the other one the McLaughlin Cup? If that should happen we would like to be in on the celebration.

Ross Hails Kraut Kids As Better Line Than Cook Brothers An Frankie Boucher

BOSTON, March 5—(CP)—Something in the way Art Ross said it commanded attention, even allowing for the natural inclination of a hockey manager to glorify the performances of his own men.

"Those Kraut kids of mine make up the best forward line I have ever seen," said the dour battler, letting a soft smile play over his usually-grim features. "They're better than the Cook brothers and Frankie Boucher were in their hey-day with the Rangers."

That's what Ross declared the other day of Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart and Bobby Bauer—his Kraut kids—as he watched them go through their paces at a practice. He said it so quietly and yet with such obvious enthusiasm that it was easy to see he really is convinced of it.

"I don't say that they'll score more points while they're in the National Hockey League than the Cooks and Boucher did," Ross added. "I don't know just how many those fellows had when they finished but it must have been an awful lot. But the Krauts are still a better combination, both as individual players and as a line.

"I think they're faster, better puck carriers and better scorers. They might not run in as many goals as the Cooks and Boucher did because when the Cooks and Boucher played they got on the ice for a lot longer stretches. They had more playing time than the individual lines do now."

The Krauts will have a chance to gain ground tonight when they tangle on Boston ice with Detroit Red Wings in the only scheduled game of the night. A victory would place the Bruins only one point behind the leading Rangers and also avenge a 6-3 defeat suffered the other night at the hands of the Wings.

Alberta Skip Takes Game From Bert Hall

By CHARLES EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

WINNIPEG, March 5.—(CP).—Meeting of the unbeaten Northern Ontario rink skipped by Jim Danis of Kirkland Lake and Ontario's national curling champions, the Bert Hall four from Kitchener, promised to be a feature of the third round in the Macdonald's Brner competition to-day.

Highlight of yesterday's opening program was the second-round defeat handed Ontario by Cliff Manahan and his Albertans from Edmonton. After the rinks ended the sixth end tied at 5-5, Manahan, Brier champion in 1933 and '37, curled brilliantly with fine support from his rink to score a 12-7 win. The Alberta four includes Cliff's two sons, Ross and Wes.

In the first round yesterday afternoon Northern Ontario beat Prince Edward Island 11-7, Manitoba beat Saskatchewan 8-6, Nova Scotia downed Quebec 11-7, Ontario defeated British Columbia 12-11 and New Brunswick scored a surprise win over Alberta, 13-11.

Two Wins Each.

Northern Ontario and Manitoba were the only rinks to pass through the second round unscathed. The Kirkland Lake quartet beat New Brunswick, skipped by Nick Thibodeau of Bathurst, 13-7. Manitoba, led by the 1930 Brier champion, Howard Wood of Winnipeg, trounced Rankie McLaine's Islanders from Charlottetown 19-4.

Billy Finlay's Vancouver rink routed Nova Scotia 16-4 with the Bridgwater quartet skipped by S. S. Rafuse no match for Finlay's 30 years' experience in major bonspiels. Col. Archie Bell and his Quebec team lost 16-7 to Bill Dunbar of Kinley, Sask. They and Prince Edward Island, were the only two rinks without a victory.

In addition to the all-Ontario battle this morning, Quebec and the Charlottetown four meet to break their winless tie. British Columbia-Saskatchewan, New Brunswick-Manitoba and Nova Scotia-Alberta are the other third-round games.

Pairings for this afternoon are: Saskatchewan-Northern Ontario; New Brunswick-British Columbia; Manitoba-Nova Scotia; Alberta-Prince Edward Island; Quebec-Ontario.

OMEMEE BLACK HAWKS ELIMINATED IN O. H. A. "B" PLAYDOWNS

Whitby Defeats Hawks By 8 to 6 To Win Round, 17 to 11 In Intermediate Playdown Series

Omemee Black Hawks were blacked out of the O.H.A. intermediate "B" playdowns on Omemee ice last night when Whitby copped an 8-6 victory to win their round by a 17-11 score. Some 500 fans saw a lively game on heavy ice, with the visitors finishing up stronger to earn the victory.

The Hawks had an edge in the first frame to rack up a 2-0 lead in the game and cut the round score down to a two-goal margin for Whitby. But in the wide-open middle chukker, the Whitby gang held their own in a 4-4 joust, and the visiting squad racked up a 4-0 margin in the third with some nice hockey.

It was a fair game for the soft ice conditions, rugged in spots and featured by a fist fight in the third between Dart and Hooper, both drawing major penalties. Omemee looked better the first frame, were about even in the second, but were outplayed through the third. Tripp and Dart stood out on the attack for the losers, with the rest working hard and turning in a good performance. Brown was the pick of the winners, with Dafoe, Heard, Hooper and Clark also going well, and the rest not far behind.

Started Right

Tripp scored halfway through the clean first period, with Brooks making it 2-0 on Owens' pass later. Dart scored early in the second but Brown got it back shortly. Dart and Tripp combined for two as P. Parsons aided on one, but Whitby rapped in three then, Dafoe, Brown and Hooper scoring, as Mayne and Kearney got an assist each. Tripp ended the chapter with a nice tally. T. Parsons drew two penalties and Williamson one, the penalties hurting the Hawks' cause. Whitby counted four times in the third without a comeback, Brown getting two and Piper and Dafoe one each, with Heard assisting twice and Piper once. T. Parsons and Piper drew minor penalties, as Dart and Hooper were given majors for fighting.

The teams:

Whitby: Goal, Clark; defence, Phillip and Watson; centre, Heard; wings, Piper and Brown; alternates, Kearney, Vipond, Dafoe, Hooper, Mayne and Hunter.

Omemee: Goal, Fisher; defence, T. Parsons and F. Parsons; centre, Tripp; wings, Jamieson and Dart; alternates, Owens, R. Ellis, H. Ellis, Brooks, Brohm and Williamson.

SPORT SPICE

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP)—Bob Pastor vs Red Burman in Detroit is as dead a pigeon as you ever saw and it isn't Burman's fault, either. Joe DiMaggio, who said he'd sit tight in San Francisco until the Yanks said "uncle," has wired St. Pete for hotel reservations. The Atlanta Crackers will put a price tag of $1,000 for every homer he hits on Les Burge, their young fourply socker.

One-Minute Interview:

Ernie Lombardi: "I guess I'm in for some heckling on the first trip around the circuit, but it won't bother me half as much as a fly will on the bridge of my nose when I have my glove and mask on."

Sonja Henie and her mama sail soon for Honolulu. Buddy Knox, the Dayton heavyweight, figures wood chopping will develop power in his punches and is advertising in the home town papers offering to chop down trees for nothing. Mike Jacobs probably will postpone his third fight in 10 days within the next 48 hours.

Things are looking up for the Marshfield Parkins bowling team of Marshfield, Wis., which has just won two games after losing 63 in a row.

Larry Macphail got himself in dutch with Clearwater, Fla., fans by slapping a 40-cent tab on Dodger practice games.

Fritz To Compete In Casey 600 Run

NEW YORK, March 5.—(CP)—Bill Fritz, Queen's University track star, will compete in the 21st running of the Casey 600 in the Knights of Columbus meet at Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

Fritz accepted an invitation yesterday to run in the race for the Cardinal Hayes trophy. He was invited last year, but was grounded in a plane by a snow storm at the last minute.

Fritz won two of the cup specials last year—the Hollis 600 in Boston and the Buermeyer 500 in New York. So far this season he has been runner-up in the two fastest 600s of 1940. He finished second to the New York negro star, Jim Herbert in the Millrose 600 and second to Charley Belcher in the United States Amateur Athletic Union 600 run-off two weeks ago. He was placed third in the Prout 600.

Fritz will again compete against Belcher, the national champion and Herbert, among others in the Casey 600. Thus the Canadian star will get a return match with the two who have beaten him this season.

Tony Has a Gun

Two-ton Tony Galento's got a gun these days, but it isn't a shootin' gun, nor a flit gun—it's a grease-gun. For Tony has gone into business in a filling-station in West Orange, N.J., and he is shown here ready to service the customers with lubrication by a thrust of that mighty arm that once knocked Joe Louis flat.

Westwood Wins E.P.L. Laurels From Albions

HAVELOCK, Mar. 5 (ENS). — For the third successive year the East Peterborough Rural League championship has passed into the possession of the Westwood puckists. Last night they encountered the Havelock Albions in a sudden-death tilt at Norwood Arena, and emerged at 2-1 victors over their opponents in a close and hard-fought contest.

Although this officially concludes the E.P.R.L. season, the four teams in this group have entered the annual Tedford Cup tournament and will see a little more action before they store away their equipment. First of the sudden-death fixtures in the Tedford elimination series are scheduled for this Thursday night, when Westwood meets Trent River, and Havelock comes up against Elgin in a double-header bill. The two victors will meet later to decide the winner of this coveted rural trophy, now held by the Havelock squad.

Battling on even terms throughout the initial period, neither side managed to hit the scoring column.

Putting up a stout defensive and waiting for the breaks, the Westwood crew finally got their chance after seven minutes had passed in the second. Shearer tallied their opening counter with Mortlock assisting. Four minutes later Gill camped near the Havelock goalmouth, slammed home a relayed pass from Buck and Green for their second and final marker.

Continued efforts on the part of the Albions proved fruitless for the remainder of the second and until less than four minutes to go in the final canto. The lone Havelock goal was credited to Pollock who guided Hagerman's shot past Richardson, as the homesters pressed in close. There was a heated protest this period when Gill scored for Westwood, only to have it disallowed on the goal judge's decision.

Westwood was unitedly strong, with two well-balanced forward combination and a fairly effective defence. Gill, Green, Buck, Sargent, Shearer, and Mortlock turned in meritorious efforts. For the losers Whitney, Hoffman, Peters, Brunton, Pollock, and Hagerman were most effective.

The teams:

Westwood—Goal, Richardson; defence, W. Graham, Holmes; centre, Gill; wings, Green, Buck; alternates Sargent, Shearer, Mortlock, J. Graham, B. Graham, Chaplin.

Havelock — Goal, Peters; defence, Lade and Whitney; centre, Pollock; wings, Brunton, Hunter; alternates, Hoffman, E. Ellis, F. Ellis, McMullen, Hagerman, Hamilton, E. Gordon, H. Gordon.

Referees—G. Rothwell, Norwood; P. Voyer, Havelock.

Salica Fights To Draw With Champion

By JACK CALDER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, March 5 (CP)—Clever Lou Salica, who has been to the boxing wars, can still hold his own with the best in the bantam-weight division.

The New York veteran fought to a draw with world champion Georgie Pace of Cleveland before 8,500 fans last night and was coming along like a youngster in the 15th and last round. At the finish a good part of the crowd thought that Salica, who held the title back in 1935, had established a slight margin.

But to ringsiders Pace's whipping right fist and his ability to ward off the best of Salica's looping lefts and rights seemed a match for the former champion's almost continuous assault. Georgie never let himself get pushed around until that furious last round, when he tired badly in his first attempt at a 15-round encounter.

Pace, a 9 to 5 favorite, got about $3,500 from the gate of slightly better than $10,000, Salica's share was about $2,200.

Return Engagement

It all seemed to add up to a return engagement, though promoter Jack Corcoran made no immediate approach to either fighter's manager.

The same was indicated by the result of the furious semi-final, in which Len Wadsworth of Hamilton, Ont., staged a successful defence of his Canadian middleweight championship by drawing with Frankie Genovese of Toronto in 10 rounds. In the case of each of the feature bouts, referee Billie Burke voted for a draw and the judges differed in their opinions.

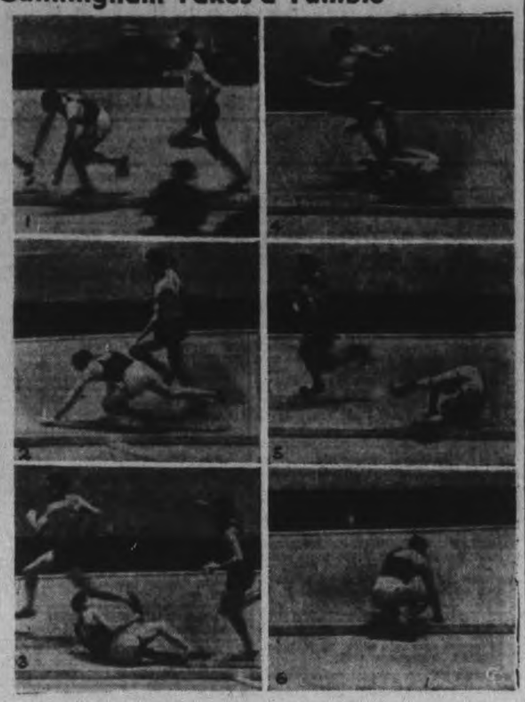
For seven rounds Pace poked that persistent right into Salica's face and mid-section, until the New Yorker's left side was painted a deep crimson. Then the Cleveland negro's left, which had bothered him in his preparations for the fight, developed a soreness that made him wary.

From away back, Salica threw lefts and rights that pulled him closer on points rapidly. Only in the 10th, however, could he score with his one-two's repeatedly and Pace came back in the 12th with counter-punches that brought heated exchanges.

Most observers close to the action called the pair about even on rounds but figured Pace had a wider edge in those rounds which he won than Salica had in the rounds he took. In the 15th, though, the Italian flailed away at Pace's face to take that heat by a wider margin than Georgie had established anywhere along the way.

Hymie Caplin, Salica's manager, declared afterward that he would ask the National Boxing Association to split the championship between the two fighters. He said Pace hadn't obeyed an N.B.A order to fight Salica within two months after he was awarded the title, defaulted by Sixto Escobar last year.

Cunningham Takes a Tumble



Glenn Cunningham, former king of the milers, battling Chuck Fenske, the new monarch, for the lead in the tenth lap of the National A.A.U. mile run in New York, trips and falls. Gene Venske and Louis Zamperini almost trip over him as they flash by while Cunningham executes a backward somersault. The Kansan courageously got up and came in fourth behind Fenske, Venzke and Zamperini in that order.

Training Camp Briefs

TAMPA, Fla., March 5.—(AP)—Manager Bill McKechnie of Cincinnati Reds hardly knows what to do with himself since one of his "problem children" has left the club and the other has reformed. Lee Grisson is a problem for Joe McCarthy of the Yankees now and Red Barrett, one of Bill's main worries for the last two years, "has really settled down to business."

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — Roy Joiner, 31-year-old hurler who once toiled for Chicago Cubs and who had a great season at Jersey City last year doesn't think his age will keep him from sticking with New York Giants.

Manager Bill Terry agrees. He's counting on Joiner as a possible starter or at least his relief mainstay.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Buddy Rosar, whose job with New York Yankees is merely to try to oust Bill Dickey from the regular catching spot, will be ready to step in if his turn comes. He has been doing some terrific belting in practice, is strong, agile and down to his playing weight.

CLEARWATER, Fla. — Just to prove they're still the Dodgers, one squad of Brooklyn ball players has managed to equal a modern major league record in a training camp practice game. The "Dressens" sent 19 men to the plate in one inning against young Sam Nahem, scored 14 runs and won the game 18-4. Only once since 1900 has a major league club had 19 men at bat in a championship game. Chicago Cubs did that in 1922.

LAKELAND, Fla.—Detroit Tigers' squad, completed with the arrival yesterday of Outfielders Earl Averill and Bruce Campbell and Second Baseman Charley Gehringer, is scheduled for an intra-squad game today. Gehringer almost hit the ball out of the park in his first appearance at the plate.

Oshawa Bees Trim Kingston

KINGSTON, March 5 (Special)—Oshawa Bees rallied to defeat Kingston Indians 3 to 2 in overtime here last night in the first game of the O.H.A. Junior "B" playoffs. The Motor City team tied the score in the third period, and McMullen broke away in the overtime to sink the winning goal. The second game will be played in Oshawa Wednesday, and if a third game is necessary Friday in Belleville.

Oshawa—Goal, Phillips; defense, Morris, Fraser; centre, Peters; wings, Reid, Hewson; subs, Jackson, McBrien, McMullen, Parke, Hinton.

Kingston — Goal, Udall; defense, Nicholson, Sampson; centre, Carleton; wings, Smith, Jarrell; subs, Bearance, Gray Jesse, Lay, Sheats, Jackson.

ONE FALSE STEP

BY KATHRN BEMIS

CHAPTER XI

"BUT you refused to have dinner with me, Rock. That—that hurt," Janis told him.

She felt his hot lips on her hair. "I know it looked that way, darling—but I've explained—it was purely unintentional. You know I wanted to be with you, sweetheart."

Oh, if she only could wholly renew her faith in him! But his light kiss on her cheek now stirred her deeply. Her imagination nearly made him all that she wanted him to be. Tears of thankfulness dimmed her eyes and made driving the car a troublesome task.

This time, upon arriving at her house, it was he who unlocked the door. He followed her into the hall as if he rightfully belonged there. Together they went up to her suite and she drew the blinds.

Then all at once he was holding her close in his arms, telling her more fervently than ever how much he loved her; and she gave him the implicit confidence of a loving, starry-eyed bride. She was convinced now that once more all was as it should be. She set her dream man back on his lofty pedestal, in spite of a latent protest deep in her consciousness.

Her Sky Bright Again

Morning came in cheerily bright like a good omen, Janis thought. But Rock laughed, and reminded her that at this time of year out in this country she could expect every morning to look like this one.

Rock's prosaic attitude, however, dampened her spirits but momentarily. In a few minutes she was exultant again, positive that this was the most beautiful morning she had ever seen. She and Rock—always loving each other. Nothing could ever make her miserable again.

Now the new wife of Rock Conover heard her husband shout from the shower: "Toss me a towel, will you, honey?"

It was nearly impossible for her to realize the status of this man in her life, and it seemed close to scandalous to have him performing intimate rites in her own bathroom.

Then she remembered the way the kindly old Mr. Werrington had said, "I now pronounce you man and wife," laughed at herself and merrily threw a blanket-sized towel at Rock's tousled brown head.

Rock left the house long before Maud returned to get Janis' breakfast. Maud brought up the breakfast tray half an hour late, and Janis tried to look reproachful. Actually, she was filled with relief. It had all worked out beautifully, she thought. Her secret and Rock's was safe, so precious that a lump rose in her throat every time she thought of it.

She must, she knew, calm down in order to be ready for the screen test. She must look her best. Surely the new dear thread in her life must be reflected in her face.

Prepares for Her Test

She dropped to the dressing table stool and looked in the mirror. Yes, her face was becomingly flushed, rivaling in color the apricot slip she was wearing; her dark-shadowed eyes had a new intensity, a new wistful dreaminess. Was anything more rejuvenating than love?

She began running a comb through an auburn curl, twisting it around a finger, a tender smile hovering on her childish lips. Rock had twisted this same curl around one of his capable fingers only a short while ago. She sighed in heavenly abandon. Dear, dear Rock—how she loved him! Life was—it had suddenly become—more wonderful than words could express.

It was nearly 10 o'clock by the little blue glass clock ticking so gayly before her. She snatched up the crystal atomizer, sprayed some of the contents on her hair, the soft curves of her neck, let some trickle down between her firm young breasts. The fresh scent soared the lilt in her heart to a height nearly unbearable.

She got into a navy velvet suit, her trembling fingers with difficulty buttoning its white silk blouse. Her mind circled regretfully around the thought of she and Rock working in different studios. But perhaps it would be all for the best. It would be next to impossible for her to keep her mind on acting a part if Rock were near her.

Later perhaps, when she was famous and could be demanding, she would insist that he always be given a part in her pictures. She knew she was destined to endure desperately lonely hours now, even in the midst of people milling about the studios.

But Rock had promised to make it up to her later. When the year was ended he would tell the studio executives to go hang—announce his marriage. After that nothing could ever separate them.

She Calls Lucinda

It didn't seem fair, somehow, that one lone girl could feel so utterly jubilant over the future as she did this heavenly morning. Suddenly, in the midst of this thought, she felt a twinge of remorse. Certainly last night she had treated poor Lucinda most unfairly.

So when she was ready to leave the house she called her up.

"It's you, is it?" Lucinda's voice sounded strained.

"Yes, Lucinda—I want to apologize—for last night. I'm really ashamed. After all you've done for me, I——"

"Oh, skip it, darling," said Lucinda condescendingly. "You forgot I've known Rock longer than you have—we're good friends. I'd no idea you'd fallen so hard for him. From now on, I won't trespass."

"Please, Lucinda—I was horrid—I'm sorry. I'm having my test this morning. Like to go along?"

"It would be fun—but no—I won't. If I get near a studio some one will be sure to discover I'm not busy—try to sign me up."

Janis swiftly considered that Lucinda had been "resting" for a long time now. It seemed as if it might be better for her nerves if she didn't play so much, and got to bed in decent season because she had to be on the lot early the next day.

Then Janis decided it was not her affair, and said: "Well, of course, if you feel that way. Only, I'd love having you with me."

"Thanks for the invitation—and I suppose I'll be getting busy, too, soon. Rock's been urging me to try for the vamp role in 'Crazy Day'—but I'm not keen about it."

Pangs of Jealousy

Janis thought: "Rock and Lucinda in the same picture!" Again she felt a stab of jealous protest. For a flashing instant, it even blotted out her conviction of Rock's steadfast love. "Rock could have oh, he could have—tried to get his own wife in the picture," whispered a tantalizing voice within her.

"That would be nice," Janis forced herself to say. She knew her words came out stiltedly, hoped Lucinda hadn't noticed.

"Best luck to you, darling," Lucinda sang out now. "I know you'll be successful. Don't let them trim your lovely long lashes, or talk you into wearing capped teeth. They may want to touch up your hair—but fight it!"

"I'm jittery—so anxious to make good, I probably won't even be able to smile."

"Fiddlesticks! Be yourself and you'll make the grade Abbie Turner will take good care of you. If I don't get tied up, I'll run over tonight and see how you made out."

"Come to dinner—at 7," promptly suggested Janis.

"Fine—I will," Lucinda accepted carelessly, and hung up.

Janis was glad to have patched up her differences with Lucinda, she could not immediately forget Rock's interest in Lucinda's career.

But finally she managed to thrust this nettle of worry into the back of her mind, and began humming a lively little tune while putting on her blue velvet hat, twisting it so that the blue and gray ostrich tips slanted just right over her eager, flushed face.

On the Set

Abbie Turner soon came by for a girl whose heart was palpitating so furiously that it threatened to choke her. The success or failure which this day would bring was near to frightening her now.

Miss Turner appraised Janis quickly as she approached the car, what she saw was a girl filled with lissom grace, a girl with bravely direct blue eyes and creamy complexion. The way she held her medium-height, slim figure, the way her high-arched feet in navy suede complemented her silk clad, ankles, was nothing short of believable.

The girl was a find! In some ways she looked to be a grown woman, but in others, only a girl who had much to learn, much to be hurt about in this callous old world. Abbie Turner was inclined to be concerned, wondered if she were doing her harm by promoting this screen test. Success might go to her pretty head. Then for no reason she could name, she thought it would not, and felt better about the whole thing.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN SHORT SUITS AID

SOLID LONG suits produce the same number of tricks at No Trump as at a suit contract. But short suits have no value whatever except when they afford you a chance to use trumps to useful effect. As a generality, if you are thinking in terms of a slam, it will pay you to examine your distribution carefully. If you have a singleton in some suit not shown by your partner, or doubletons in two of them, a well-fitting suit is likely to be a much safer spot for the hand than No Trump.

That bidding was sound as a dollar, including the Blackwood slam convention call of 4-No Trumps and the 5-Diamond reply to show one ace, with the [illegible] of East's very last bid of 6-No Trumps. His correct bid was 6-Clubs, which could not possibly have been beaten. West could have got rid of two of the dummy's spade losers by ruffing in his own hand, or could have ruffed one heart and one diamond in the dummy. Played either way, he would have had only one losing trick, in diamonds.

At No Trump, however, West had no earthly way to take more than ten tricks, with five in clubs, two each in the majors and one in diamonds, and so was down two. East explained after the deal that, when West opened the bidding with only one ace, it seemed likely he would have enough of the secondary honors to make the slam just as probable in No Trump as in the suit, and that he was trying for the slightly higher trick score in No Trump, which is bad business in rubber bridge if it adds an extra risk to your entire slam score.

Warsaw

The euchre party planned by the Warsaw L.O.L. No. 284 for Tuesday evening was poorly attended, as there was a hockey match on that same evening. However, those present had a really happy time playing games and dancing to music by Wilbert Wright and Ivan Hendren, at midnight all enjoyed a splendid supper.

Mr. Dick Darling moved to his own farm with his mother this week. Mr. and Mrs. George Bennett have moved to the farm vacated by Mr. Darling. Mr. and Mrs David Miller have moved to the home vacated by Mr Duncan Kidd, and his daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Barnett and son Harold have moved to the Miller farm.

The Women's Association of the United church was fairly well attended on Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. Stuart Clysdale in the chair and Mrs. Gordon Sharpe secretary.

All were glad to see last year's secretary, Mrs. Arthur Payne, able to be out after her long illness.

The ladies inspected the church auditorium and were much pleased with the results of the cleaning done by Mr. Jewell. An oyster supper is planned for March 15th. After closing, Mrs. Stuart Clysdale, Miss Alma McCracken and Mrs. Charlotte Cooper served refreshments.

Australia expects to grow enough apricots, peaches and pears this year to fill 37,600,000 cans.

Down almost to her bulwarks in the water, the Nova Scotian schooner Chisolm is shown, TOP, before she foundered in the North Atlantic, three days out of Lunenburg. This picture was made from the deck of the Swedish freighter, Sagoland, which picked up the captain and crew of five from the schooner after they had been adrift for 13 days, subsisting on a salvaged keg of water. The rescued members of the Chisolm are shown, BOTTOM, grouped about Captain Henrik Bang-Melchior, second from LEFT, of the Sagoland. Captain George Corkum, of the Chisolm is standing beside the Sagoland's skipper.

Surprise Party At Warkworth

WARKWORTH, March 5—(ENS)—Members of St. Andrew's choir met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Meiklejohn in form of a surprise party to pay respects to their daughter Betty, who has been a valued member of their choir and who leaves on Friday to begin training in Toronto General Hospital.

A pleasant evening was spent in playing Chinese checkers. During the evening Betty was presented with a bedroom clock as a slight token of their high appreciation of her services. While Betty will be missed in the church and community, best wishes will follow her in her new course of studies. Betty responded in a few well chosen words, after which a dainty lunch of ice cream and cake was served and a pleasant evening brought to a close.

Wind Friction In Rockies Not Jap Breezes Credited By Swiss Skiier For Chinooks

BANFF, Alta., March 4 — (CP).—The theory that the Pacific's Japanese current sends chinook winds over the Rockies to warm Southern Alberta received a setback here yesterday when Bruno Engler, Swiss ski instructor, said he thought friction caused by the passage of winds through narrow, funnel-like mountain valleys accounts for the warm breezes.

Bruno, in town for the close of the Dominion ski championships, said Alberta's chinooks reminded him of similar winds in his native switzerland. These winds, he said, are called "foon" winds and generally speaking they moderate Switzerland's winters as do the chinooks along the continental divide here.

Winds, he said, do queer things in mountain ranges as high as the Rockies or the Alps. Sometimes they get literally trapped.

Winds blow into the entrance to valleys and ranges, find themselves blocked and begin to fight their way back. This, said Engler, sets up a friction "and if you know young physics you know that friction makes heat."

Well-Known Peterborough Man Tells About Syntona Results

Describes How It Gave Him Grand Relief From Acid, Upset Stomach, Gastritis, Biliousness and Constipation. Felt Fatigued, Listless and Rundown.

Painful gas and bloat—indigestion after meals—sleeplessness—nervousness—burning sensation and pains in the chest—sharp pains in the side—palpitation and stuffy feeling due to gas—weak, worn-out feelings, dizzy spells and headaches—these are some of the penalties of an Upset Stomach. Many Peterborough people have suffered that way for YEARS. But now, Syntona Herbal Compound is relieving them by the hundreds. Every day, local people tell their friends and neighbors how it helped them and many have given public statements, so others might learn about this remarkable remedy. Here, for example, is the experience of Mr. Timothy Garvey, well-known employee of the Quaker Oats Company, who resides at 182 Hazlett St., Peterborough:

"I used to suffer after every meal with a sour, upset stomach; gas and heartburn. Scalding fluids would rise from my stomach and cause nausea and discomfort. There was a burning feeling in my chest and throat and I had gas pains in my side. My bowels were inactive and I was subject to dizzy, bilious spells. I felt constantly tired out and my whole system felt weakened and rundown.

"From the first bottle of Syntona I could tell it was helping my stomach, my appetite picked up and my food began to digest better. Now, after a few weeks on this medicine, I can eat what I like and enjoy my meals without all that stomach misery after eating. I am free of constipation and biliousness and I have more energy. I had always thought that some herbal medicine was what I needed for my stomach and Syntona turned out to be exactly what I was looking for."

If you who read this, suffer from ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels, or any of their long train of distressing symptoms, make up your mind to begin taking Syntona today. Come to Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, and find out how it can help you, too.

"Keep-Troops-Home" Party Wins Australian Riding–Rouses Press

MELBOURNE, March 5. — (CP-Reuters). — The Australian Government "needs reconstruction and should enunciate a clearer, bolder war policy in order to teach the people the danger of the isolation fallacy," said the Melbourne Herald to-day in commenting on the Labor Party's victory in Saturday's by-election at Corio, Victoria.

J. Dedman, Labor candidate, won the seat vacated by Richard Casey on his appointment as Minister to the United States. With several polls missing, Dedman had 25,207 votes against J. T. Vinton-Smith, Government candidate.

This result, the Herald said, "must not be dismissed as due to minor issues." The electorate, it added, "voted for Labor's war palicy, which would leave on others the burden of Australia's protection."

Prime Minister R. G. Menzies is expected to make a statement on Wednesday on the government's war preparations.

While Australia's stand beside Britain in the war was not at issue in the election, the Labor Party vigorously opposed dispatch of Australian troops overseas and any kind of military compulsion, maintaining that the strong defence of Australia and economic aid to the Allies were the best constributions the Dominion could make to defeating Germany.

John Curtain, leader of the Labor party, said Sunday night that an obligation now rested on Prime Minister Menzies to respect the "significant decision" at Corio. He held Labor's war aim had been endorsed.

Mr. Menzies said that while the election was fought mainly on local issues, the result "indicated the government was ahead of public opinion on the war." He added it was the government's duty "to proceed with vigor and determination."

A general election is due to be held this fall. Labor's by-election victory now makes it the largest party in the House of Representatives with 30 seats against 28 for Mr. Menzies' United Australia Party.

The program was in charge of the leader, Mrs. A. E. Metcalfe who had charge of the worship period including a hymn, scripture reading and a talk by the leader bearing on the scripture.

A topic on Milton's sonnet "On His Blindness" was read by Mrs. Fred Crate and prepared by Mrs. C. M. Baker. Mrs. J. E. Glover and Mrs. Willis Preston rendered a duet. Miss Helen Collins read one of Nellie McClung's poems.

The next meeting will be in charge of Group III in the form of a quilting in the church basement.

Strangers Watched

THEY'RE taking their war seriously up Bancroft way, an Examiner representative found the other day when he visited that community.

Taking a noon-hour rest from his subscription-seeking labor, he started to sketch the Eagle's Nest, a promontory overlooking the village. In Peterborough he enjoys something of a reputation as a sketcher, but apparently his fame had not spread to Bancroft, for it wasn't long until a young girl strolled by and scrutinized him carefully, then quickly jotted down the license number of his car when his back was turned.

The girl's father told the rest of the story to another Examiner representative. He, the father, had become suspicious when he noticed the stranger "drawing plans" of the rock, and had sent his daughter out to see what she could. "You know," observed the father, "that rock lies in a strategic position. If an enemy captured it they could control the entire village of Bancroft with only a single machine-gun unit."

While the ladies of the groups prepared the refreshments, a freeze-out was held with Miss Inez Barr and Mr. Ira Lowe carrying away the honors, each receiving a prize.

Lunch was served.

Before the gathering dispersed for home the announcement was made that a progressive crokinole would be held next Friday evening, March 8, sponsored by group No. 1, with Mrs. T. E. Morden as convener.

Manion Plans To End Radio Licence

Tory Leader Proposes Pay-As-You-Go Basis For The C.B.C.

MONTREAL, Mar. 6 — (CP). — Conservative Leader Manion issued to-day a statement in which he promised that if he is elected he will abolish the radio licence fee and operate national broadcasting on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

The statement:

There has been a great deal of discussion, both in the press and on the hustings, on the subject of radio licences, and the present seems to be an opportune time to make my position clear.

It is my firm belief that there is no reason why the radio user in Canada should be compelled to pay $2.50 for the privilege of listening to his radio, whereas the radio user in the United States pays nothing. The radio licence fee is merely a nuisance tax, and one which bears heavily on those who are least able to pay. Numerous reasons can be given why the radio fee should be abolished, but I think they are obvious to most people.

It is my purpose therefore to abolish the radio licence fee and to operate national broadcasting on a pay-as-you-go basis, which will retain the advantageous services now provided. There are other means without the licence fee of having radio pay its way.

20 British Killed, 16 Captured Says Berlin In First Anglo-Nazi Maginot Line Scrap

BERLIN, March 6.—(AP)—The German News Agency claimed to-day that 20 British soldiers were killed and 16 taken prisoner on the western front yesterday morning when German shock troops stormed a British dugout in the Moselle sector.

(A War Office communique in London said a platoon sergeant-major was killed and that "several of our men are missing." It added that one of the raiding Germans was killed and that the enemy "suffered casualties during their withdrawal.")

The official communique of the German army said 16 prisoners were taken.

The Geman News Agency identified the platoon attacked as belonging to the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. It asserted that this was the first time the Germans had had an actual fight with British troops on the western front in this war. It said the Germans lost one man.

A hectic exchange of hand grenade and artillery fire preceded the dugout storming, according to the news agency, and the English left 20 dead on the scene, while the Germans lost

Heavy Navy Guns Are Heard Off Arctic Town

OSLO, March 6 — (AP). — The newspaper Arbiederbladet today reported that residents of Berlevaag, Arctic town on the tip of Tanafjord, had heard 12 to 15 detonations apparently coming from naval guns at sea during the afternoon.

Several large ships had been observed in Arctic waters, the newspaper said, but Berlevaag residents were unable to determine their nationality or whether the detonations indicated an exchange between belligerent warships.

(British warships were reported last month to be patrolling northern waters to halt German sea trade with Russia's Arctic ports).

After the Reds

STOCKHOLM, March 6—(AP).—A mounting campaign against Swedish Communists as a result of Russia's invasion of Finland was accelerated today by demands from all major parties in the Riksdag (Parliament) that the Government "remove all agents of foreign powers from the Riksdag."

Five Communists are members of parliament.

Palestine Laws Set To Keep Arabs In Line

LONDON, March 6—(CP). — The government today answered Opposition charges of betrayal of its promises to the Jews with the practical wartime declaration that its new Palestine laws are necessary to keep the powerful Arabs of the Near East in line.

Malcolm MacDonald, Colonial Secretary, said the government had had "most stern warnings from Palestine in recent weeks that despite appearances there was beneath the surface a growing unrest among the Arabs."

Defending the government's restriction of transfers of land by Arabs to Jews in Palestine, Mr. MacDonald told the House of Commons:

"If there were trouble in Palestine there would be repercussions in Transjordan, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Egypt and India. One has got to be frank about these things."

The Colonial Secretary said the Palestine Arabs had shown suspicions that "His Majesty's Government are not sincere in their professions that they would protect the interests of the Arab cultivator and laborer."

The Labor motion of censure was moved by Philip Noel Baker.

"In the last war the Jews were very strong," Mr. Noel Baker declared. "They had great influence in many lands and we desired their help. It was to get that help that we made the Balfour declaration (of November 2, 1917, promising a national home for the Jews in Palestine).

Weak Race Today.

"Today the Jews are a weak and hunted race. Their property has been stolen and destroyed, and it was because their influence had gone that we dared do this shameful act today, to repudiate the moral contact we made with them when the last Great War was going on."

Dispatches from Jerusalem said a British constable was injured by a stone as police yesterday broke up demonstrations by Jews protesting laws restricting transfer of land from Arabs to Jews.

London editorial comment included the Telegraph's assertion that the land regulations were "a choice of evils." It said the government

Harbor Crash Sinks Dutch Sub

Daring Rescue Saves All But Two Trapped In Bow

AMSTERDAM, March 6—(AP). —The Netherlands submarine O-11 sank in a collision with a tugboat in the Nieuw Diep today, but a daring rescue helped save all except two of the crew of about 30.

The submarine was cruising on the surface at the Denhelder naval harbor preparing to go to sea when rammed amidships by the tug Amsterdam.

About ten men on deck sprang clear and swam to the seawall.

Ten minutes later, a crowd gathered on the wall saw bubbles. Then the periscope appeared momentarily. After another ten minutes, part of the stern emerged.

Two naval officers in a nearby rescue boat leaped aboard the stern and managed to pry open a hatch and help the imprisoned crew to safety.

Later, it was announced officially only two men were missing. They were in the bow torpedo chamber. Tugs started salvage work.

(The O-11, built in 1925 and with a surface displacement of 483 tons, has a normal complement of 29 men according to Jane's Fighting Ships. It is one of 30 submarines which The Netherlands has in service or is building for delivery this years.

Evidence Stolen

TULSA, March 6—(AP).—Bootleggers burgled $5,000 worth of whisky from the United States government. Seized as evidence in federal raids, it had been stored pending trials of suspects. Oklahoma is dry constitutionally. Several empty bottles indicated the burglars tested their loot. They took 150 cases, passed up 100 others.

A Sawing Bee

Hastings, March 6 (ENS)

THERE was a sawing bee on Front street last night. Vic German, local merchant, purchased a cord of wood which was delivered at the front door of his store. Rather than see the wood sit there too long, he consented to having it sawed up shortly after its delivery and hired a machine to dispose of it. Shoppers on the street, who wished to speak to one another, were shouting at the top of their voice for more than a half an hour while the saw droned out its buzz above every other noise. It was not long before there was plenty of assistance. A survey of the help revealed there were men from two other towns assisting at the sawing.

London Insists Rumania Split Oil Equal

BUCHAREST, Mar. 6 — (AP).—Great Britain has demanded full equality withr Germany in sharing Rumanian exports, including oil, a high authority said today.

The British demand, said to have brought Rumanian Minister Viorel Tilea here from London, is believed in diplomatic quarters to have been prompted by the Allies' resolve to cut deeply into German sources of supply in this country.

These quarters see Rumania being pushed closer to an inevitable choice between Germany and the Allies, as experts say it would be impossible for Rumania to furnish Germany with 1,600,000 tons of oil contracted for in 1940 and send an equal quantity to Britain.

Less than 4,000,000 tons of oil will be available for export this year, according to experts, leaving only 800,000 tons if British needs are met along with Germany's. That would mean Rumania's trade with the Balkans, Italy, and many other countries—based on the exchange of Rumanian oil for foreign products —would dwindle.

German pressure for more Rumanian goods was also said to be increasing, with a demand that Rumania ship her entire 1940 wool crop to Germany.

Hepburn Accepts Bid To Visit Air School; Demands Inquiry Into Trouble; Wants Police, Editor, Airmen Called

All School Walked Out Censors Hid It Premier Insists

TORONTO, Mar. 6 — (CP). — Premier Mitchell Hepburn said to-day he was accepting the invitation of Defence Minister Norman Rogers to visit the Royal Canadian Air Force training centre at St. Thomas and that he would demand a full inquiry into alleged disturbances there. The Premier said he would suggest next Monday as suitable for the visit and inquiry.

"You bet your life I'm going to be there," said the Premier. "I will suggest Monday for an inquiry at which time I want the county high constable, the police of St. Thomas, the managing editor of the Times-Journal, and others apart from the members of the Air Force to be there for questioning. We'll get the facts.

"I don't want members of the Air Force called, but I want them to be able to volunteer as witnesses. I wouldn't accept any guarantee from Mr. Rogers that airmen who might give testimony wouldn't be harassed by his 'Gestapo.' I want a guarantee that any airman who volunteers to testify will have a promise of an honorable discharge if he wishes it and unless this is forthcoming it wouldn't be fair to ask them to testify."

Covered by Censor.

The Premier reiterated his declaration of yesterday that censorship had "covered up" a "violent disturbance" at the Air Force centre. Referring to Mr. Rogers' denial that a disturbance occurred and a statement by a Government spokesman that there had been no censorship, Mr. Hepburn said:

"I am amazed that Mr. Rogers has the effrontery to deny that everybody knows. The whole school walked out. There was trouble for days.

"The censors warned the Air Force men not to talk and when the Times-Journal tried to get information, the heads of the school wouldn't make any statement. The Times-Journal report wasn't censored because the paper couldn't confirm any information that would be sensorable."

Times Journal Posittion

ST. THOMAS, Ont., March 6 (CP) — The Times-Journal today publishes the following:

Regarding the statement made by Premier Hepburn at Toronto yesterday that "the press were warned not to publish" reports of a disturbance at the St. Thomas Royal Canadian Air Force training school on Saturday, Feb. 10, the Timesi-Journal would like to make its position in the matter clear.

When we heard reports of the walkout at the school, we endeavoured to ascertain the cause and extent of same, interviewing some of the men on the street and trying to secure statements from the officers at the school.

Stories given by the men were conflicting and indefinite. Officers at the school declined to make statements but asserted that the situation was not serious.

Convinced of Trouble

The Times-Journal learned sufficient, however, to convince us that there had been trouble in the nature of a partial walkout at the school and that it had been due in a great measure to a misunderstanding over a new system of week-end leaves brought into force through the replacing of a single-shift work system with a double-shift work system.

Having in mind the general war censorship regulation that nothing must be printed that would aid the enemy or in any way "prejudice recruiting, training or discipline of the armed forces of Canada," we endeavoured, while giving the public the facts, not to say anything that would conflict with these regulations.

We had no communication, direct or otherwise, with the Censors at Ottawa or Toronto, either before publication or afterwards. We felt at the time, and still do, that what we published covered the situation and did not conflict with the general censorship regulations.

Asks Money Back

Gananoque, Ont., March 6 (CP)

FOUR Leeds County hockey teams, Morton, Lansdowne, Westport and Gananoque, played hockey for five and half hours last night without declaring a winner.

One county fan was so annoyed that no winner was declared that he put his fist through the plate glass window in the ticket office and demanded that his 25 cents be refunded. He did not get his money.

OC At St. Thomas Would Answer Hepburn

ST. THOMAS, Ont, March 6. — (CP).—Squadron Leader R. F. C. Metcalfe, officer commanding No. 2 wing at the R.C.A.F. Technical Training School, announced to-day that he had asked permission of his superiors for a chance to reply to charges by Premier Hepburn that "violent disturbances" had been staged at the air centre.

Metcalfe, one of the group of officers and instructors who came to Canada last January in connection with the Empire training scheme, said regulations of the force prevented him from making a detailed explanation of what occurred at St. Thomas Feb. 10.

"But I can say this: Mr. Hepburn's statements are so full of inaccuracies that I have taken the only step left for me, in as much as the

Ottawa Heads Silent On Latest Step, Rogers In Scotia

OTTAWA, March 6 (CP)—Word of Premier Hepburn's acceptance of Defence Minister Rogers' invitation to investigate an alleged disturbance there drew no immediate comment from officials of the national defence department.

Mr. Rogers is in Nova Scotia and pending communication with him by telephone later today, members of his staff had nothing to say.

OTTAWA, March 6 — (CP.—Defence Minister Rogers has offered to let Premier Hepburn of Ontario visit the Royal Canadian Air Force School at St. Thomas, Ont., with newspapermen to see conditions at the school where the Ontario Premier charged there have been "violent disturbances."

In a statement issued here last night on authority of the Minister who was in Fredericton, Mr. Rogers denied the charges of disturbances and said "it is high time for Premier Hepburn, for the good of all loyal Canadians everywhere, to desist from his intemperate abuse."

"I will make Premier Hepburn an offer, purely in the interests of Canadians, in the hope it will bring him down to earth at last," the Minister said.

"Let him visit the school at St. Thomas. At the same time we will make arrangements for such representatives of the press as desire to be in attendance. He and they may ask all the questions they like. The doors will be open. The entire subject may then be given full public discussion and the conditions at this school reported as the press sees them."

Earlier in the day, Premier Hepburn said at Toronto that Canadian

Britain Orders Register Of Children

LONDON, March 6 (CP)—Great Britain moved today to register children in her cities for the purpose of prompt dispersal in event of Spring air raids.

Herbert Morrison, leader of the London county council, governing body of the world's largest city, appealed to parents to register their children immediately.

Mr. Morrison said 400,000 to 500,000 children in greater London would be eligible for registration.

Mass removals were made when war was declared Sept. 3 but there has been a drift of children back from their shelter in safe areas.

"If word is given the children will move out of London, we hope, in the same orderly manner as last September," Mr. Morrison said.

"Teachers will take them and police will make the same careful arrangements. It is expected that the movement will spread over six days.

"No child will be taken out of London unless its parents wish. The government wish children now in the country to stay there. There will be no further dispersal until raids make it necessary."

It was understood similar arrangements were under way in other cities.

Allies Commence Blockade Huddle With US

WASHINGTON, March 6.—(AP)—Great Britain and France began special efforts today to iron out difficulties with the United States arising from the Allied blockade of Germany.

Frank Ashton-Gwatkin, an adviser to the British ministry of economic warfare, and Charles Rist, formerly deputy governor of the Bank of France, were here to confer with Secretary Cordell Hull and other state department officials.

The problems that confront them are embraced within the series of American notes sent to Britain in December and January. They involve:

1. Taking American ships into contraband control ports within the European combat area.
2. Censorship of mails.
3. Delays in examining ships at Gibraltar.
4. Blocking German exports to the United States.

The British and French experts also are expected to discuss Allied plans for rationing the imports of neutrals adjacent to Germany, Britain is reported concerned over increased American shipments to such neutrals, fearing that a portion of the goods is going through to

France Sees Anglo-Italian Dispute Settled Satisfactorily, Profitably

PARIS, Mar 6 — (CP-Havas). — The Anglo-Italian dispute over German coal is likely to end in a satisfactory settlement based on profitable collaboration between the two countries, it was believed here today.

This belief was strengthened by the relatively moderate initial reaction in Rome to the interception by British naval patrols of Italian vessels bound from Rotterdam with cargoes of German coal.

It is held here that neither side is inclined to push the affair to an extreme and that the dispute will boil down quickly to its essential element: The rapid organization of coal shipments to Italy.

The Germans are urging the Italian government to make the issue a test of Allied naval control as a whole and it was on this key that the Italian protest to London was written. Since then, however, Rome has apparently been hesitating to go farther along a road that might lead Italy into a head-on collision with the Allies.

In this litly can see a definite German interest—but none for Italy. The hesitation is favored, moreover, by the voice of Moscow echoing that of Berlin. The Soviet press is harping on the allegation that Italy is menaced by the Allies in the Mediterranean and in the Balkans. The Italians, however, are naturally not inclined to heed the advice of Moscow.

LONDON, March 6.— (CP). — Great Britain to-day ordered the cargoes of eight Italian ships—declared to be coal from Germany—held as prizes in her tightening campaign to halt all seaborne exports from Germany.

Nine Italian ships have been brought into the contraband control station at the Downs, but one of these, the Loasso, was released by the enemy exports committee.

It was established that she sailed from Rotterdam, where the Italian coal flotilla loaded, on March 1 before the order to halt German coal shipments to Italy was issued.

Two of the Italian ships were brought into the Downs station today.

The Ministry of Economic Warfare said all nine ships were flying the Italian ensign and all were "assumed to be carrying coal."

British authorities showed determination to break the German coal export trade with Italy.

The trade went uninterrupted until Saturday morning, when the Allies clamped down. Sources close to the ministry of economic warfare said last week this was "not in any way a reprisal for the temporary difficulties which have arisen in British-Italian commercial and financial talks in Rome."

The Yorkshire Post in an editorial today, said:—

Armor, Self-Seal Gas Tanks For Warplanes Jump Cost 10 p.c. Dictate New Designs

WASHINGTON, Mar. 6.—(AP). —Disclosure that the war has dictated essential changes in the designs of new United States' army planes was made officially to-day following the testimony of Major-General Henry Arnold at a secret House of Representatives committee session.

Such alterations as equipping bombers with armor and installing fuel tanks which automatically seal bullet holes were decided on after a conference of experts.

Members of the House Military committee said Arnold testified privately yesterday that the cost of planes had mounted about 10 per cent since the air corps' $300,000,000 expansion was voted last year. The increases were ascribed in part to the alterations.

General Arnold said the lessons were learned "fortunately in time." He predicted that despite a delay in the production of some high-powered engines, anticipated delays in construction of some pursuit and bombing craft, and the contemplated design altera-

No British Move To Stop Swede Iron Shipments

LONDON, March 6 —(CP). — Great Britain has taken no steps to halt the transport of Swedish iron ore to Germany, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons to-day.

The Government is aware of the traffic and its importance to Germany, Mr. Churchill said in reply to a question, but "the arrest of such traffic would involve many serious considerations."

The First Lord disclosed that the plane which sank the British liner Domala with a loss of 108 lives last Saturday had fooled a nearby British destroyer into believing it was a friendly craft until bombs started falling.

The Domala was attacked suddenly, he said, and since the plane was believed to be friendly the Domala's guns were not brought into action before the bombs fell. Mr. Churchill said the nearby destroyer similarly was misled.

Mr. Churchill promised to investigate a report that the ship's gun crews were not at their action stations when the attack was launched.

Piles of RedDead Dot Bay Ice Before Viipuri

HELSINKI, March 6.—(AP). — Red Army attacks across frozen Viipuri Bay were reported by the Finnish High Command to-day to have been repulsed, fending off another assault against the beleaguered coastal city.

Aircraft, tanks and artillery supported the Russian thrust across the ice, but the Finns turned back the attack. The Red army also attacked in force at many land points on the Viipuri sector between the bay and the Vuoksi, but the Finns said all attacks were repulsed.

"Heaps of Russian dead" in front of the Finnish positions were described by a Finnish High Command communique which said "dozens of tanks" were destroyed.

The eastern end of the Isthmus front, where the Finnish lines have stood firm against contined Russian pounding, saw lively artillery activity and farther north on the Kuhmo sector Russian attacks were repulsed.

Soviet air raids behind the lines killed 40 persons and wounded many others during attacks yesterday on Mikkeli, Lahtis and Kuopio. Ten enemy raiders were shot down during the forays, the Finns said, add-

Doom For "Old School Tie" System Seen In War Taxes For Britons

LONDON, March 6 — (CP). — Thousands of conservative Britons today read with dismay reports that the war may force extinction of "the public school."

In hundreds of homes breakfast bacon turned cold as loyal wearers of "the old school tie" read gloomy accounts predicting the end of the traditional system that is public in name only.

Most prominent of those whose predictions were printed, Sir Cyril Norwood, former headmaster of Harrow, which shares honors with Eton as one of the most aristocratic schools.

Sir Cyril was reported to have told Royal Air Force officers in France that the public schools "have done their job and produced their leaders but after the war it will be found that their day is done."

The burden of war taxation would result in an insufficient number of parents "who can afford to pay £200 ($890) a year for the education of a single boy," said the former headmaster.

Australia Plans Full Army Corps For Overseas-90,000 On Reserve

SYDNEY, Australia, Mar. 6 — (CP Cable). — Prime Minister R. G. Menzies uncovered for the first time to-day the scope of Australia's war effort and revealed that the Government plans the despatch of an army corps for service overseas.

Answering the critics of his Government in a nation-wide broadcast, the Prime Minister disclosed that in addition to the army corps, the Government envisages establishment of a reserve of 90,000 men and the calling up for home training of at least 26,000 and possibly 50,000 men.

An army corps is made up of four divisions, totalling in all with ancillaries some 80,000 men. The British Expeditionary Force which landed in France in the first weeks of the war was made up of two army corps, and since has been added to.

The immensity of the Australian program was seen in the fact it will cost at least £180,000,000 ($618,000,000) spread over two years, or three times the cost of the corresponding period of the First Great War.

The Prime Minister said the Aus-

Side Issues Keep Election Drive Lively

(By the Canadian Press.)

The Dominion election campaign frequently wavers from the chief issue, which by nearly unanimous consent is the war effort of the government, but every few days some speakers set it back on the track by sweeping aside secondary disputes and taking up the main argument.

Defence Minister Rogers and R. L. Maitland, British Columbia Conservative Leader, undertook this task yesterday.

At Woodstock, N.B., and Fredericton Mr. Rogers told audiences again that the government was appealing to the electorate on its war effort. He said the opposition have found no adequately supported criticism to warrant a change of government.

Mr. Maitland said in a broadcast speech from Toronto that nothing has been done by the government that marks it as a strong, aggressive government which Canada needs now. He said that Conservative Leader Manion would give the government of action which Canada requires.

The controversies precipitated by Premier Hepburn of Ontario over his provincial ban on the March of Time film "Canada at War" and his charges concerning distrubances at tralian Air Force will be strengthened to seven times its size in 1939, and that by June, 1942, 17,000 people will be employed in munitions factories supplying not only Australia but Great Britain and New Zealand.

The prime minister's announcement came as a bombshell to most Australians who had thought the government would soft-pedal defence policy in view of the political situation. He declared the government had formulated a program from which it was not prepared to withdraw simply because it had been defeated in a by-election.

He referred to the polling in Corio, Victoria, last Saturday in which the Labor candidate won a seat previously held by the government. The opposition claimed the result constituted repudiation of the government's dispatch of troops overseas, which the Labor party opposes. The government maintained local issues dominated the by-election campaign.

No hint of the size of the government's program had been allowed to drop prior to the broadcast, and consequently the announcement was a surprise to those on the other side of the range of politics who had held that Australia has not contributed in sufficient measure to the Empire's war effort.

Like Canada, Australia will send an air force squadron overseas to act in cooperation with the expeditionary force. Special railway and forestry units also will be sent overseas.

"The task is very great, but if we abandon bickering it is not beyond our capacity," Mr. Menzie declared.

He said the by-election result in Corio proved that the government was leading public opinion.

But to preserve the schools in modified form—since "it would be folly to abolish them"—he suggested government control and scholarships.

Simpler, Less Costly Life.

"A definite and regular proportion of free places must be filled with children from the elementary schools chosen by interview and record," he said.

"Life should be simpler and less costly. The boys should carry out more services such as blacking their own shoes and making their own beds."

Sir Cyrill's thoughts were echoed in the House of Commons debate on the £50,000,000 ($222,500,000) annual educational budget measure yesterday.

While the Daily Herald, Labor, opposed State aid for "an odious system of snobbery that perverts British education," H. B. Lees-Smith, Labor, told the House that "more than 90 per cent. of the public schools will have to close down after the war if they are to be dependent on the same classes which go there now."

"The unnatural system," he said, has resulted in virtually "two nations" since the masses were educated in the State-controlled day schools and never came in contact with the sheltered lads of Harrow and Eton.

Kenneth Lindsay, parliamentary secretary of the Board of Education, forecast for after the war "a federated system of secondary schools."

"We had heard that foreign pursuit planes were finding enemy bombers easy prey," the Air Corps chief said. "We heard that foreign planes were force dto hang on armor; we learned that the warring nations found it necessary to use protective coverings for fuel tanks."

Committee members quoted General Arnold as saying that a British plane, with about 100 gallons of gasoline, suffered 63 bullet holes in its self-sealing tanks but was able to land safely with the loss of only about 10 gallons.

Meanwhile, French and British airplane purchases in the United States were shown by the Commerce Department to have made the January airplane export total of $25,480,817 the second best for any month in history.

The total was only slightly under the record set in December, but is expected to be exceeded many times this year because the Allies have indicated potential airplane purchases in the United States toalling $1,000,000,000.

In January, deliveries included $12,053,978 to France, $4,040,912 to United Kingdom, $2,733,149 to Australia, and $1,512,536 to Canada.

Finland, making its first substantial purchase in this line in the United States, also received 17 planes which, with equipment, were valued at $1,047,651. Turkey and Sweden also were large buyers.

Big Guns Sweep Ice

Coastal guns sweeping the ice of Viipuri Bay on the flank of the depopulated, half-ruined Karelian capital joined in the aerial assault on the tightening siege lines.

Bombs and shells ploughed great holes in the ice, it was reported, and some of the Russian troops with several tanks were plunged into the water, infantrymen and tank crews alike drowning.

And early today Finland's flag—a blue cross on a field of white—still fluttered from a battlement of historic Viipuri castle, although the Red army was pounding at the gates of the city and Finns themselves acknowledged that Viipuri could not be held much longer.

Viipuri long since gave up her civilian population, about 74,000 removed to safety in the face of the Russian drive on the Karelian isthmus-Mannerheim line.

(The Russians reported no fresh inroads against Viipuri proper, but told of seizing another foothold in the encirclement drive, the town of Neetela, nine miles north east of Viipuri.)

21 Finnish Planes Down?

(Today's Leningrad communique said the Red air force "acted against enemy troops and military objectives" yesterday, and that 21 Finnish planes were brought down in combat.)

The Finnish town hardest hit in yesterday's air raids was the target of 200 bombs. Thirty-two Russian planes droned in on it in two flights 50 minutes apart. Military censorship forbade naming the place.

Five direct hits were scored on a hospital, and one bomb struck an air raid shelter, the last killing 25 persons, nearly all of them women.

A Finnish communique charged three hospitals were bombed, and that more than 10 patients were killed in one and at least four in another, aside from "many" patients who were injured.

War Bulletins

Received By Examiner Over Canadian Press Leased Wire

GIBRALTAR (CP) — Five unidentified planes approaching Gibraltar from the northwest today caused the fifth air raid alarm of the war. The planes deviated to the south as crowds quietly took shelter.

LONDON (CP)—In the House of Commons today Richard Butler, under-secretary for foreign affairs, said representations had been made to the Japanese authorities for cessation of what Sir Nairne Sandeman, Conservative, called an organized campaign of anti-British propaganda in parts of north China.

BERLIN (AP)—An official statement referring to the sinking of neutral merchantmen without warning today said German planes cannot discern from the air whether neutral vessels are being voluntarily convoyed or forcibly taken to British control stations for search.

The mere fact of the convoy, the statement asserted, is sufficient for Germans to deal with such neutrals vessels as hostile. The German government, therefore, makes the Allies "exclusively responsible," it added.

No New Civil Planes

LONDON.— (CP)— Sir Kingsley Wood, secretary for air, today said Britain proposed to order no new civil aircraft from overseas during 1940. Answering questions in the House of Commons, he declined to make a statement on the shooting down by Royal Air Force fighter craft of a British bomber March 3.

He informed the House that "this regrettable accident is being investigated by a court of inquiry."

NEW DELHI. — (CP-Reuters).—Measures to increase production in India of minerals needed for wartime use are under active consideration, it was announced today by Dr. C. S. Fox, member of the geological survey of India. Dr. Fox said his department already has sent representatives into the mineral fields to study the possibilities. Emphasizing strides made in recent years, he estimated mineral production of India and Burma in 1938 at £30,000,000 ($133,500,000).

LONDON.—(CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons today that Great Britain and France had decided against publication for the present of documents covering their negotiations with Soviet Russia which broke down after signature of the German-Russian non-aggression treaty last August. The Prime Minister said the decision represented a change of mind in the light of general considerations. Asked whether the documents would be published later, he said only that they would not be published at the present time.

Air Service With Berlin

AMSTERDAM, March 6 (CP-Havas)—German planes will begin freight service between this city and Berlin next Monday, it was reported today. Passenger service was expected to follow shortly. The German Lufthansa Line cancelled its Netherlands schedule when war began.

LONDON (CP)—Richard Butler, under-secretary for foreign affairs, told a questioner in the House of Commons today that the action of the authorities in Bermuda in searching mails carried by United States transatlantic flying boats was correct "and moreover was justified by what was discovered in the mail." He said that under international law a belligerent is at liberty to examine any mail, whether neutral or belligerent, brought voluntarily within its jurisdiction.

20 British Killed

only one man.

The German shocks troops' surprise attack was said by the agency to have disclosed that the British apparently were stationed at only one small point of the front line, flanked on both sides by the French.

One German Slain

LONDON, March 6 (CP)—The war office issued the following communique today on the German raid yesterday on a Maginot Line post of the British Expeditionary Force:—

A raid on March 5 on a British post in a Maginot Line sector took place under cover of a barrage of mortar and machine-gun fire at dawn. The enemy succeeded in entering the post, which was held by part of a platoon of infantry.

"The platoon sergeant-major was killed. The Germans left one dead in the post and suffered casualties during their withdrawal from artillery and machine-gun fire.

"Several of our men are missing."

Post Is Retaken.

PARIS, Mar. 6 — (AP). — French and British troops withstood small but savage German attacks after considerable fighting on the Western Front yesterday, the French command reported to-day.

The Germans attacked a British post and French outposts west of the Vosges, the French said.

The British communique, the first issued since the Tommies arrived at the front, said the raid "took place this (Tuesday) morning against a post in the British front line, and the enemy succeeded in capturing some prisoners. "The post was recaptured, and the enemy retired, leaving one dead. Two British soldiers were killed and one wounded."

The morning French communique said:

"Local artillery action at the end of yesterday. Patrol activity during the night."

The German infantrymen were aided by violent preparation from their trench mortars and heavy artillery in attacking the British post, the French command reported.

It said the French and Germans exchanged artillery fire in Alsace, while bad weather grounded air combatants.

Several German submarines were attacked by Allied ships at sea, but the results were not determined, the French said.

The "in-between" period —several weeks of rains that will wash away the last traces of snow and ice—has started and with it a grimmer vigilance along the Maginot Line.

A tour of the frontier fields and woods of Northern France by correspondents shows that a German offensive is expected—if it comes at all—when sunbaked earth will support the heavy tread of a mechanized army.

The whole Allied line is on the alert, and it will remain ready for momentary battle.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sick and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Christians Urged To Wake Up By Dr. Parker

Hitler has become better known in four and a half years than the name of Jesus Christ has in over a thousand, declared Rev. Stuart C. Parker, D.D., of Toronto, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, on Tuesday evening in St. Paul's Church, when he sent out a rousing challenge to Christians to "wake up" before the ruins of civilization stared them in the face. He blamed religious indifference for this appalling state, an indifference that has been steadily growing for the last 85 or 90 years. At the height of its power, he asserted, the Church commenced to lose ground, and has been declining more or less ever since.

To "boosting" of Christ is what built the Church, he said. The small minority of people who formed the early foundations of the Church were not afraid to stand firmly to their religious convictions, even though it might mean burning at the stake, but to-day preaching is losing its effect because it is growing impossible to bring people within the reach of the speaker's words, and even when many so-called Christians do come to church, they are often so disinterested they fail to listen. A more drastic means of Christian propaganda than mere preaching must be adopted by the Church if Christ's word is to be boosted to-day, Dr. Parker declared. The Church does not lack ideas, he asserted, but merely the funds with which to carry out those ideas, and labelled the conduct of the public in the matter of Church-giving as nothing short of 'scandalous."

Spreading the Good News.

Suggested means of spreading "Christian propaganda" were outlined, including a subtle insinuation of fundamental teaching that would be unknowingly absorbed through the pores of the public. This could be brought about, Dr. Parker suggested, by way of the press, the radio and the moving picture industry, which he believes is one of the most powerful modes of transmitting ideas to-day. We want to see pictures of some value, pictures with the same actors, but pictures that are planned for the one purpose of "lifting us up." The only reason the Church is not in the moving picture business, he explained, is because of her lack of finances, not because of her lack of interest in making use of an excellent means of spreading Christian propaganda. He scored present-day Churchgoers for their smugness, and declared that it is more necessary to get back to the early principles of the Church than it ever was before. "The Church is an army," he declared, "or else it is nothing."

Church Has More Noble Duty.

Although he admitted that it was necessary for the people of the Church to subscribe to charitable institutions such as the Red Cross and other organizations whose aim it is to provide comforts for soldiers, Dr. Parker believes that the Church has a higher and more noble duty than the mere knitting of socks. It is its job to bring about a world when the Red Cross won't be needed, he continued, and if the Church had been sticking to its job through the last several generations the war would never have arrived. War springs from the human character—it is the job of the Church to deal with the redemption of this character.

A bright note in connection with the Presbyterian Church was struck when the speaker announced that its part in the actual work of the war is large, 21.5 per cent. of the 52,000 recruits being members. The best soldiers, he declared are not the boys with a reckless nature, but Christian men who are willing to do their share with an earnest sincerity, and a knowledge of what and why they are fighting.

Rev. B. Simpson Black of Campbellford, Moderator of the Presbytery of Peterborough, presented the speaker. Prayer was led by Rev. W. O. Nugent of St. Andrew's Church, Cobourg, and an anthem was rendered by th choir.

Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, pastor of the church, presided at a banquet for the members of the Board of Managers, the Kirk Session, and the Presbytery of Peterborough, at which Dr. Parker was the speaker. Banquet arrangements were in charge of the Ladies' Aid of the church.

Burglar Guest

ROCHESTER, Pa., March 6 (AP)—J. W. Specac celebrated his 50th birthday by inviting in some friends and boasting of his thrift. He showed them his savings of $133. Next day, he reported to detectives that one of the guests had stolen his money.

Kills His Wife

RICHMOND, Mich., March 6 — (AP). — A 55-year-old farm wife was fatally slashed with a hatchet in a chicken coop to-day. Mrs. Lottie Ciborowski died in Port Huron General Hospital less than three hours after the attack. Prosecutor Duncan McColl of St. Clair County said her husband, Walter, 61, would be charged with first degree murder. Police said Ciborowski admitted he killed his wife during the quarrel over another man.

T. E. McGarrell Dies In London

LONDON, Mar. 6—Well known in transportation circles throughout Ontario, and highly respected by his associates, and the general public, T. E. McGarrell, Canadian Pacific Express agent here, died yesterday at the age of 54. Entering the service of the Express Company at Hamilton as a depot worker on November 2nd, 1906, the late Mr. McGarrell moved to the North Bay express office as clerk in 1908 and from 1913 till the following year he worked at Cobalt, New Liskeard and back to Cobalt. On November 12, 1914, he was appointed express agent at North Bay, where he stayed until 1919, when he was made express agent at London, which post he held until his death.

Mae Murray Wins Custody Of Son

LOS ANGELES, March 6 (AP).—Mae Murray yesterday won a custody action against her former husband, Prince David Mdivani.

Superior Judge George A. Dockweiler ordered her to retain custody of her 13-year-old son, Koran David Mdivani, now in the care of an Albany, N.Y., family.

Judge Dockweiler also ordered Mdivani to pay $400 a month to the former film star for the "support, care and maintenance and education of their son."

He also ordered payment of $3,500 to Miss Murray's attorneys, Robert S. Burns and Milan Medigovich.

Coupling his decision with a criticism of the polo-playing Mdivani, Judge Dockweiler said:

"It is most singular to note that he would spend substantial sums for distant relatives and friends abroad, but, with respect to his own flesh and blood, he bade no contribution for many years, other than a few paltry dollars he gave to his wife for their son's needs.

"This is indeed something the court can hardly understand, for which the defendant gave no adequate explanation."

Miss Murray sued Mdivani for $1,000 a month, to enable her to establish a home for the son who was given, under a New York court order, to neutral person until she could maintain a suitable home.

Miss Murray testified she spent all her funds in a battle to save the boy's life during a critical illness three years ago. She had complained that Mdivani dissipated her funds while they were married, and that although she was worth $3,000,000 in 1926, ten years later she had spent three nights on a bench in New York's Central Park, penniless.

Fire Is Checked

QUEBEC, March 6 (CP)—A three-alarm fire, spreading through a lower town block, was extinguished by firemen early today before it could assume threatening proportions. No one was injured.

Several of the men employed by U. A. Hubbel & Son of Paudash, who have been lumbering near Huntsville, returned home to Bancroft for the week-end.

An accident occurred five miles north of Bancroft on Highway 62, when a truck owned by C. Avey of Bancroft, and driven by Mr. Morton, Sararas, was towing Mr. Avey's car home from the Bruton Camps, when the towed car became involved with a team of horses owned by C. Brown of Bird's Creek. One horse had both hind legs broken and was later shot by Constable Palmateer, who inves-

New Jap Attack Near Hong Kong

HONG KONG, March 6—(AP).—Japanese warships shelled shoreline positions 20 miles north of Portuguese Macao throughout the morning and then landed a force for a new penetration of South China—this one just across the mouth of the Pearl River from Hong Kong, British Crown colony.

At the same time, Japanese warplanes swooped in to break up any attempts by Chinese forces to concentrate for reinforcement of their positions above Macao and about 50 miles south of Canton. Inhabitants of Chinese villages in the scope of the Japanese operations flocked into Macao.

Doing More For Finland

The press of London cannot agree regarding the extent to which Britain should go to the aid of Finland. Britain has sent in munitions of war and planes, and the number of British who have gone of their own accord to the army of Finland would be considerable. The resistance of the Finns has been well nigh incredible.

The London Times is convinced that Finland has served well the cause of the Allies and that the tremendous effort which Russia has had to make, and the enormous supplies expended, including gas and oil, have drained a stock which might otherwise have gone to Germany to be used against the Allies.

The Times believes also that the success of Russia in Finland would endanger the whole North country, and if that were to take place it would mean that Russia and her ally Germany would secure territory conveniently dangerous as a striking point against Britain.

Against that is advanced the view of other papers that Britain cannot possibly act as policeman for the world, and that it would be dangerous to equip and send an expedition to the Arctic. It is humanly possible to fight only a certain number of dragons at one time. Britain at the moment has to bear the brunt of the attacks of German sea raiders, sea bombers and floating mines. It is her business to see that the Allied countries are kept in provisions, and that in itself is a colossal undertaking. Right now Britain is facing a show-down with Italy. There is also the question mark of if and when war may break in the Balkans.

We are not much concerned about the opinions of people in this country or in United States who say that Britain should do this and do that. The plain truth is we have not an adequate idea of what doing this and that means; actually we know little about it. The storm appears to be breaking in several corners, while back of it all is the all-important and major problem of the war with Germany, a nation which has been arming and preparing for years and which is far from being defeated or seriously shaken.

Mr. Hepburn Takes a Hand

There is nothing novel in looking at one of those "March of Time" films. As a rule they are good, well filmed and well edited, but Premier Hepburn says we cannot look at the one "Canada at War." He says it is "nothing but political propaganda of the most blatant kind," and so if we wish to see that particular film it will be necessary to wait until after the elections are over. All of which does not strike us as any too good because it adds one more to the already large list of people and regulations which tell us what we can or cannot do.

This particular film is an American production, and we learn that plans for making it were formulated shortly after Canada declared war, and it was completed before there was any intimation of an election in Canada. It was made primarily for U.S. consumption to show the people there what was going on in their neighboring country to the north.

Mr. King appears in the film briefly, and we take it that no matter who might be premier it would be necessary to have a shot at him. Plenty of times we have seen Prime Minister Chamberlain in the movies.

We doubt whether Mr. Hepburn's political wisdom was functioning full force on the day he announced that he had decided the film must not be shown in Ontario until after the elections on March 26. As far as we are aware it can be shown in any other province in the Dominion, and the coming election affects all the provinces.

We do not believe an individual after seeing the film would conclude that he had better go out on election day and vote for the Government, nor do we believe the banning of the film will change votes either. If we did hold such belief then we would have to come to the conclusion that public opinion was indeed a fickle thing, tossed here and there and blown about by every whiff of political breeze which might come from any point in the disturbed atmosphere.

Mr. Hepburn's decision can be listed only as being a bit irksome, and as an outcropping of the fact that he has no use for Mr. King. And that of course has been long since well established.

What Control Can Do

When a good many people in a good many communities started buying sugar in greater quantities than usual last September they started something; something which called a good many people into activity and finally stretched across the country, reached the United Kingdom Sugar Controller and entered United States as well. It will be recalled that the sugar shortage, although coming at the worst time of year, was overcome and nothing has been heard of it since.

From the office of the War Time Prices and Trade Board comes a report showing what took place. There was panic buying in September, and in six weeks more than 40 per cent. above the normal supply of sugar had been distributed. The Board started paying surprise visits to dealers across the Dominion and found no surplus stocks.

The remedy was to put more sugar in the market, and for that purpose the warehouses of industrial users were tapped. This sugar had been placed there months before. In a short time six million pounds had been turned into the retail channels. That was not sufficient and the dumping duty on sugar was removed until November 15. There were 2,000 bee-keepers who had to have supplies of sugar for winter feeding and they were attended to.

The Board also entered into dealings with the British control plan. In order to increase supplies in Canada raw sugar was purchased by the British Board in United States and resold to Canadian refineries. It does look as though the War Time Prices and Trade Board had handled the situation well. At the outbreak of the war in 1914 there was no such control in existence and in the first three months retail price of sugar jumped 2½ cents per pound, while during the first three months of the present war the increase was ½ cent per pound.

Choice Made By Ottawa

This comment appeared in one of our Canadian papers a few days ago: "Surely we have not advanced to the stage where this country desires to tell His Majesty who shall or shall not be the next Governor-General of Canada. That has always been his right and yet some of the papers are comenting in such a way as though the appointment was something which had to be attended to by Ottawa."

Apparently there is some misunderstanding here. The Governor-General is the representative of His Majesty in Canada, and not as was the case for some time, also the representative of the British Government.

Under the new status as it has existed since 1927 the Prime Minister of Canada is the person who recommends to His Majesty who shall be named as Governor-General. When Lord Tweedsmuir was selected the final arrangements were made by telephone when the then Prime Minister Hon. R. B. Bennett discussed the matter with the late King George V. Few details of such matters are revealed, but it has been stated that Mr. Bennett also discussed the appointment with Hon. W. L. M. King, then leader of the Opposition.

Prospective appointments have been discussed more in British papers than in this country, and it is quite evident that in London offices there is also the mistaken belief that the naming of the Governor-General is something which is attended to by His Majesty and none other. It is a matter which is not done hurriedly, and certainly the period of an election campaign is not the time for such an appointment to be made. It is considered one of the major posts in Empire service, and first it is necessary to have the names of men considered capable and acceptable. After that there is consultation between London and Ottawa, but the final recommendation comes from the Prime Minister of Canada.

When U.S. Flutters

Archduke Otto von Hapsburg, referred to as claimant of the throne of the former Austrian empire, arrived in New York on a plane from Europe. Coming from that troubled land he had something to say of war, and was certain the Allies would eventually win. He explained he had come to United States to study the constitution and see how the country was regulated and governed. Possibly he may get a number of opinions on that depending on whom he asks.

But at the moment we consider something else. We learn that the duke was greeted at the airport by his brother, "and the largest crowd of feminine admirers ever to attend the arrival of a transatlantic Clipper."

And that in the country where all men —and ladies too—are born free and equal; where they have no titles and want none; where the people are democrats straight right through from one side to the other.

But let an archduke or a prince set foot on the soil of freedom and the ladies become excited. This particular archduke has no throne. Even before the days of Hitler in Austria, there was no royal throne. The visitor in Vienna since 1918 has been able to pay a slight fee and walk through Schonbruun, a palace of 1,500 rooms with 700 acres of grounds and gardens, and it would be explained that the place was the former home of "the last of the Hapsburgs." So we can't see much chance for the Archduke Otto to have a throne. But the ladies flocked to the airport in Baltimore in great quantities—if that is the proper phrase of enumeration—when they heard he was landing on the soil of the great republic where an archduke has no more standing than the humblest citizen in the land. At least that is what they delight to tell us.

It's Done Quietly Now

Figures coming from Ottawa dealing with divorce cover only three years, showing the number of cases:

1937	1,870
1938	1,885
1939	2,022

The figure for 1939 showing 2,022 divorces would affect 4,044 people, sufficient to make a fair enough town. Our desirable neighbor, Port Hope, has something like 4,800.

People hear little of divorce cases now. Newspapers make only brief mention of the outcome of such cases, and the law on prohibiting publication of court evidence is definite. We have no particular complaint to make on that score, as much of the evidence can be classed as unfit for publication, but the one drawback is that those seeking divorce now have no reason to fear the publicity which used to be attached to it, and in that quiet atmosphere the securing of a divorce is largely stripped of its painful moments.

NOTE AND COMMENT

One trouble about selling vacuum cleaners is trying to persuade people they have any vacuums.

A church at Wheatley was broken into and all the dishes and cutlery stolen. We dare say all that equipment will be replaced because it would take more than that to down the Ladies' Aid.

Waterloo has reduced its tax rate four years in succession, and that's one way in which even a progressive community will not complain about the number of mills becoming less.

Man in Buffalo who has five wives has been examined and pronounced perfectly sane. Might be well to have him examined by some men who can prove that they themselves are sane.

One lively fellow of 46 years escaped from Guelph Reformatory and enjoyed liberty for four hours. After which he will appear in the nearest court and draw additional time for having escaped.

A man in court at Toronto on the charge of being drunk explained he had washed his face in whiskey and some of it must have slipped into his mouth. Rather a novel explanation, but the effect was the same—$10 and costs.

United States has changed the name of Marshville, Wis., to North Pole because it is believed it will aid in the sale of postage stamps around Christmas time. Showing that although people grow older they remain children at heart.

Clerk of Brant county has a clock which tells the time of day, the day of the month and the month of the year. Pshaw! We can look out the window and see the post office clock and a calendar on the wall tells us the rest. And at no expense and no winding.

Kitchener Record learns that the human foot contains 25 per cent. of all the bones in the body, and is puzzled to know how many are left for the head. Well around election times we have heard the heads of opponents referred to as being made of wood, solid ivory and even putty.

FREEDOM

(By A.R.K.)

¶ When Crusoe lived upon his isle, he really had a spot worth while, it seems that way to me; he was not regulated there, told when to move and how or where, the man indeed was free.

¶ And no inspector ever came, and asked him for his age and name, what wages he was paid; nor did he have to stop and frown, and put a lot of figures down, to show what he had made.

¶ Campaigners never bothered him, nor chased him out upon a limb, nor scared away his goat; they did not stop him as he went, and say as how they had been sent, to see which way he'd vote.

¶ No laws about his state of health, he regulated that himself, he had great peace of mind; no one to scare him with a germ, to jump at him each time he'd turn, he ate what he could find.

¶ No sanitary laws there were, to make him jump and quickly stir, no traffic lights at all; if jobs there were to do in spring, why he could go and leave the thing, and do it in the fall.

¶ When I was but a little lad, the tale of Crusoe made me sad, he lived in lonely state; but now I'm regulated so, laws left and right each time I go—I think his place was great.

Chamberlain Has Become The Man of Iron

By MILTON BRONNER

LONDON.—The "appeasing" Neville Chamberlain, around whose head often stormed criticism for his "vacillating," has long since hardened in the fires of war. A new "Iron Man" Chamberlain is emerging—and Britons love it.

When the prime minister recently spoke at Birmingham, he described his disillusionment with Adolf Hitler as a man who had "shattered any faith in his pledged word," and declared the Allies were steeled to win the war, he was cheered to the rafters.

So don't make any mistake about it—wartime Britain is being governed 100 per cent by a mightily tough old man—mentally and physically—in the person of 70-year-old Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

And don't make another mistake—Chamberlain is going to continue to be prime minister just as long as he desires.

The twists of his popularity curve are among the most striking in the history of British public men. In September, 1938, when he came back from Munich, he was a popular hero.

The thing that stuck in people's minds was that Germany and Britain had been very close to war and that Britain was totally unprepared for armed conflict.

If that period saw the zenith of his pull with the crowd, March, 1939, saw its nadir. All the fair promises of Munich were swept away. Chamberlain seemed to be a doomed statesman.

THE IRON entered Chamberlain's soul and from that time on he was a changed man. A man of honor himself, he had implicitly trusted that what Hitler said Hitler meant. When he found he had been deceived, Hitler entered into his black book. From that time on Chamberlain worked to prepare Britain for war, if war must come.

When he said Britain would fight if Poland was attacked, he meant it. That's where Ribbentrop, Nazi foreign minister, fooled his boss. He told Hitler Britain would not go to war.

Having taken Britain into the war, Chamberlain has been working overtime ever since. Let's take a peep at famous No. 10 Downing Street where the prime minister lives with his good-looking wife and where he carries on the big business of waging war to a finish with Nazi Germany.

It is a three-storey, rather squat, brick house with no outer pretension to style at all. There are simply thousands of houses in London which look something like it. Its one main outstanding feature is that with No. 11—quarters of the chancellor of the exchequer—it is the only residence in short Downing Street.

In striking contrast to the hundreds of guards that surround Hitler's chancellery, No. 10 Downing Street has only one guard, a solitary policeman on duty outside the door. And inside there are only a couple of blue-coated door keepers.

The premier breakfasts about 8 o'clock. Then for a spell, he reads personal letters, glances through all the London papers to see what they are saying and dictates letters which are most important.

That through, sun or rain, he usually goes for a brisk walk in St. James' Park with Mrs. Chamberlain.

Birds and flowers are the hobbies of this man who often seems to have no poetic strain in him.

From then on, except at lunch and dinner, Mrs. Chamberlain may not see the premier again. He goes to his office in No. 10 and works steadily. His ministers all have almost immediate access to him in the forenoon and so do the high officers in charge of British war efforts.

At 1.30 p.m. he lunches, usually alone with his wife. If Parliament is not in session, he then goes back to his private office. If Parliament is sitting, 2.30 finds him on the Government front bench. Very often Parliament sits until quite late at night.

When this is the case, the premier is apt to dine in the House of Parliament. When he finally does go back to his official home, he works at state papers until midnight, sometimes even later.

WOODLOT ADVOCATED

SOME TIME AGO We had a letter from a correspondent suggesting that our town council would do well to secure a municipal woodlot, which would in time save the town considerable money, provide fuel for the town hall and work for the unemployed. If our present council read the article we trust they will give it their serious consideration; if not, we shall be glad to supply them with copies, as we believe the suggestion was one of considerable merit. Conservation is the order of the day and besides conservation a good woodlot is a growing asset and in time would be a paying investment for the town. —Canadian Echo, Wiarton.

EGOTISM REVEALED

QUITE a number of years ago under different ownership this journal one day in the heat of a political campaign printed a large "I" on its front page in an effort to show how frequently a certain politician referred to himself. Evidently things like this still happen, for very recently we came across a statement by a university student showing that Adolf Hitler uses "I" every 53 words; Mussolini, every 83 words and President Roosevelt, every 100 words. By way of contrast this authority points out that Premier Daladier uses "I" every 234 words, and Prime Minister Chamberlain only once in 249 words.—Kitchener Record.

DUTY CALLS

"How about convoying this little bunch home after the show, Anstruther?"

—Humorist.

• Says City of Windsor Chiselling

NOTHING could be stranger in this strange war than that a municipal body rather than an individual or a corporation should be responsible for the first conspicuous Canadian instance of war profiteering. The Windsor Board of Education, if it continues to act as it has done in one case recently, is going to make a tidy thing out of the war, and out of the Dominion Government and out of the army allowances of soldiers' wives.

The Windsor board, says Kingston Whig-Standard, has a standing policy that women school teachers must retire from teaching if they marry. That is probably a sound policy so far as economics is concerned, although a doubtful one from the educational viewpoint. However, that is beside the point. One of the Windsor school teachers wants to marry a soldier in the Essex Scottish Regiment which, presumably, is going overseas shortly. She consequently applied to the Board of Education for special permission to retain her present teaching position after the wedding. Under the circumstances, the board reasonably decided to make an exception to its normal peace-time policy. However, the permission to marry and still retain the job was granted with the stipulation that the amount of the army allowance which the young woman will receive as the wife of a soldier will be deducted from her salary cheque as a school teacher.

In other words, the Windsor Board of Education will be accepting services which it now regards as being worth a certain amount, but it will refuse to pay that amount. The taxpayers of Canada as a whole, through the federal Government, which has no constitutional authority to spend money for education in Windsor, will be making up the difference. People in Kingston and in Halifax and in Vancouver will be contributing to pay for the work the young woman is doing for the Board of Education of Windsor. Another way of looking at it is that the soldier the young woman marries will be risking his life in the service of his country, earning several hundred or so dollars a year for his bride, only to have the money confiscated by the Windsor Board of Education. And the Windsor Board of Education probably feels that it was moved only by noble patriotism in making an exception from its regular policy.

Meanwhile the people of the rest of Canada have been presented with two problems. One is how to prevent money they are paying to a soldier from being diverted to municipal purposes. The other problem is the much wider one of whether dependents' allowances should be paid to self-supporting wives.

• Lawyer Tells of His First Case

T. J. ROBINETTE, editor of Ontario Law Reports, and son of T. C. Robinette, K.C., famous criminal lawyer, was guest speaker at the St Thomas Kiwanis Club. From the St Thomas Times-Journal we quote:

The speaker amused the gathering with his recital of highlights in his first case after he lectured on estates and mortgages at Osgoode Hall. He was called to Woodstock to take the defense for the male end of an enternal triangle in an alienation of affections damage suit. He said he made the mistake in that first case of permitting his client to tell him what to do. His client suggested asking him one or two orthodox or routine questions when he was called to the box and then, on a finger stroking signal, to permit him to ad lib.

"Well, my client stroked his finger, as arranged, and I let him ad lib and he ad libbed the jury into bringing in a verdict for $5,000 damages for the hubby of the lady in the case," said Mr. Robinette.

He told of another case where he unwisely mentioned to a client that the judge who would hear the criminal charge was fond of punning. The client said he was quite a punster himself. When he took the witness box he almost immediately made a pun and he made the judge so angry that "my client is still punning in the penitentiary for all I know," said Mr. Robinette.

Judicial wit was one form of legal humor that could be disposed of rather quickly, the speaker suggested. When a lawyer's nerves were on edge and the general atmosphere of a court-room was tense and inclined to the gloomy side, anything that was said in the way of witticism by the presiding judge usually sounded very funny and often it was wisdom on the part of a lawyer to laugh heartily at judicial sallies, otherwise he might lose his case.

The speaker defended the legal profession against the charge that the law did not change with the times and went on to refer to notable cases to show that the law and legal procedure has changed to meet modern conditions and practices. One famous case was that of the young lady in Scotland who found a decayed snail in a ginger beer bottle after she had drunk the contents. She had sued the manufacturers of the beer and the House of Lords had changed the law on this point and held that manufacturers were responsible in such cases. Previously, the retailers, not the manufacturers, had been held responsible. The ruling was that with the increase in the canning and preserving of food products, the manufacturer had to assume a new onus of responsibility.

SEES LIKE A CAT?

WHEN driving to my hotel I had occasion once to marvel at the way in which our taxi-cab drivers can apparently see like cats in the dark.

On arrival in Brook-street I happened to mention this fact and asked the driver how he did it. At the same time I handed him a 10s. note and asked for change.

"Instinct, sir," said the taxi-cab driver, "just instinct. I fancy we see like cats." And with that he rose from his seat and proceeded to strip to the waist as is the way with taxi-cab drivers when asked for change.

The Jehu had scarcely finished repeating the word "instinct" and had no time to expand on his feline animations when he stepped forward and, mistaking the exact position of the step of his cab, fell face forward towards the pavement. A woman happened to be passing at this moment and she, fortunately for him, broke his fall.

Maybe but for her he would have lost his life. Certainly he caused her to lose his temper.

The scene was infinitely distressing to the two principals.—Viscount Castleroose, in London Sunday Express.

Good Reason

The housewife put down her shopping basket and sniffed at the herrings laid out on the fish-monger's slab.

"These fish don't seem very fresh," she remarked.

"No, indeed, missus," retorted the fish-monger. "And I guess you wouldn't look very fresh if you'd been chased all over the North Sea with half the German navy at your 'eels."

The Morning's News

His wife brought him a cup of tea as he lay, half-asleep, in bed. "Here," she said, "drink this. And it'll be the last cup of tea I'll bring you for a long time." "Oh, an' who says so?" he asked, belligerently. "Couple o' coppers waiting in the passage," she answered, bitterly.

Norwood Begins Laying Plans To Renew Fair

NORWOOD, March 6—(ENS). — A well-attended meeting of the directors of East Peterborough Agricultural Society was held here on Monday afternoon.

Mr. Wellington Burgess, president of the society, occupied the chair and conducted a meeting which was enthusiastic and lively throughout. Plans were made to increase the usefulness and general attractiveness of the fair, and committees appointed to arrange for carrying out the several plans.

Dr. H. G. Carleton volunteered to head a committee, which would be selected later, to form a special program for children's work and entertainment including a pageant of Canadian progress.

G. J. Elmhirst, G. A. Brethen and Col. F. E. Birdsall compose a committee to make an effort to secure the Holstein club's Black and White Day for 1940. Also a foal club showing by the Junior Farmers. The duties of this committee will include a drive for membership, special grants, etc., from the Township of Asphodel.

Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Grover and the secretary make up a similar committee for the Village of Norwood and the Township of Dummer.

W. G. Barrie, Wellington Burgess and R. A. Dean will take care of Belmont and Methuen, the Village of Havelock and the Trent Bridge area.

The president, secretary, P. M. Grover and G. A. Brethen will review the prize list and make recommendations for its revision to meet changing conditions.

It was proposed to have one or more public meetings to be held in the Town Hall, in the interests of agriculture in general. Arrangements for this detail was left in the hands of the executive committee.

The Town Hall will be engaged for a Fair Night concert, with details to be arranged later on.

Many changes will be made in the general plan of the 1940 fair, and the directors will greatly appreciate the co-operation of all members of the society in their effort to make the fair a more profitable and entertaining event than ever before.

Statesmen's Snapshots

A political "master-of-all trades" is Hon. Clarence Decatur Howe.

The only American born minister in the Mackenzie King cabinet, he has been dubbed, with justification, "Canada's busiest man." Not only that, he is probably Canada's most travelled citizen, by land, air or water. As if that wasn't enough, he is also Canada's No. 1 expert in grain elevator construction, and knows about all there is to know about the grain trade.

He is a flying chief, radio chief, navigation authority, railroader, tourist guide and grain merchant rolled into one. As head of the department of transport, which takes in the Canadian National Railways and the Trans-Canada air system, he employees about 10,000 people on behalf of the people of Canada and pays them about $7,000,000 a year.

As well as keeping the largest railroad system in existence running smoothly along with an air line, which is becoming one of the finest in the world, Mr. Howe watches Canadian shipping with a careful eye.

This human dynamo was born in Waltham, Mass., in January, 1886. Educated at the Massachusetts institute of technology, he was subsequently an assistant director and for five years professor of civil engineering at Dalhousie college, Halifax, N.S. From 1913 to 1916 he busied himself as chief engineer for the board of grain commissioners at Fort William.

From 1916 he operated his own company and his reputation in the elevator field became almost world wide. Baring Brothers of London,

HON. C. D. HOWE

England, wanted him to plan the erection of a line of country elevators in the Argentine.

In 1935 he was sworn in as minister of railways and canals and minister of marine and from that time has been busier still. He has been a resident and citizen of Canada since 1903.

Mr. Howe was one of the first to fly over the surveyed route of the present Trans-Canada air line.

Last year there was a rumor, just a small rumor, that he was going to retire before the next general election. "Bunk" he replied, and that is what he meant.

Drew Is Dubbed Hitler's Best Friend

"Colonel Drew is the best friend Hitler has in Canada because he has sown the seeds of dissension," the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., said Tuesday evening at a Liberal rally in the interests of Rollie Glover at Bridgenorth. The Foresters' Hall, where the rally was held, was comfortably filled, and the speakers for the evening, besides Mr. Gordon, were the candidate and E. L. Sackville.

Referring to Col. George Drew, Mr. Gordon outlined the events leading up to the Bren Gun enquiry and said that the plan as arranged by the Liberals stood to save $1,135,000 for the country. Canada's quota was 7,000 guns, and Britain had agreed to purchase others on a cost plus basis. "Col. Drew called this entire scheme a scandal, yet we know that although the John Inglis Company was not equipped to turn out Bren guns immediately, nevertheless they had the capital and the machine shops."

"In 1939 Drew voted for conscription, whereas Dr. Manion on the other hand says conscription is not necessary, and I agree with him. Conscription is not essential nor necessary. Col. Drew is one who will be called to Manion's cabinet if it is ever formed," said Mr. Gordon.

Outlines War Work

Mr. Gordon sketched the work that has been done by the Liberal Government since the war began last September and said they had introduced the War Limitations Act to prevent anyone from making immense profits from war. War profits have been set at five per cent, said Mr. Gordon, and many big financiers do not like this because millionaires were made right and left during the last Great War. During the last war the dairy industry suffered a heavy setback bacause millions of pounds of oleomargarine were placed on the market at a price far below butter.

Enforcement of this law has prevented hoarding, and kept the price of staple commodities down, in contrast to the last war when flour, sugar and butter skyrocketed in price.

William J. Telford of Bridgenorth was chairman of the meeting and he called on Reeve Allan B. Mann to introduce Rollie Glover, the Liberal candidate.

Reeve Mann paid tribute to Mr. Glover as a man who had a true appreciation of human values. "I know that long before organized relief had been started in the city of Peterborough that Rollie Glover of his own accord and spending his own money had gathered food and clothing for many families who were in dire need of it. I know, too, that Mr. Glover has a keen appreciation of the farmer's problems gained from intimate association with the farmers while he was publisher of The Peterborough Examiner. We want to send a man to Parliament who puts human values ahead of money values," said Reeve Mann.

In his first remarks Rollie Glover paid tribute to the athletic ability of the two Jopling boys, Drake and Jack, now members of the Peterborough Intermediate "A" hockey team, "who are going to help us bring a championship to the city this year."

He traced the steady growth of the city during the last few years and said that as Peterborough prospers the district enjoys new prosperity too. "A year ago there were 530 families on relief in the city and today there are only 290. In the riding there are 3,000 more votes than their were five years ago, yet unemployment is at a very low level, said the speaker.

"Many fine Conservatives regret that the good old name 'Conservative' has been dropped during this campaign."

E. L. Sackville, the third speaker, said there is only one real issue in this election, and that is the winning of the war, and he urged everyone to give wholehearted support to every move aimed at helping the country in the war effort.

"The straight thinking Conservatives are not behind this National Government idea, nor are they being taken in by the barrage of criticism which has been levelled at the King Government for their so-called inefficiency. These charges are not specific but general, and carry little weight with the man who does his own thinking.

Richard Splaine and Frank Humphreys argued the negative for McMaster.

States Will Sell Neutrals Guns Of 1918

WASHINGTON, March 6—(AP). —The United States War Department offered yesterday to sell to Latin American and other non-belligerent nations, artillery, rifles and other surplus war material which cost originally several hundred million dollars.

A list of such surplus weapons, described as "usable" though they date from the first Great War, was disclosed following an announcement that ninety long-range 6-inch field pieces had already been sold to Brazil. The price was not made public.

President Roosevelt announced last month that certain army and navy munitions would be offered to neutrals and the list was prepared at his direction. Finland was barred from the offer because it is at present engaged in hostilities.

The sale to Brazil was said officially to be the first such sale of army munitions to a foreign Government since the first Great War. Some 2,500 rifles were reported reliably, however, to have been transferred recently to Haiti, and the Philippine Government was supplied with rifles and mountain guns for its new army after the Commonwealth was set up in 1935 to prepare for independence.

Several Latin American Governments, including Chile, have inquired since the war started whether American munitions in storage for more than two decades were for sale. Sweden also has made such inquiries.

The 1920 National Defence Act authorized the Secretary of War to sell arms which were not needed by the army, and for which there was no adequate domestic market. The navy was reported, however, to have decided that further legislation would be required to dispose of warships which possess military value.

The War Department's for-sale list was prepared under the direction of Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson. Officials explained that the surplus munitions had all been displaced by later models. Included were some 100,000 Enfield rifles out of some 1,800,000 models of this shoulder weapon now in storage. Other weapons listed included:

More than 70,000 machine guns, mostly for use in war planes, including Lewis, Marlin and Vickers makes.

Approximately 300 75-millimetre field guns of a British model, unused since the army standardized the French 75.

More than 250 eight-inch howitzers of British design, along with a limited amount of ammunition.

Approximately twenty-five heavy siege guns.

More than 200 3-inch Stokes mortars, used in trench warfare, along with over 100,000 rounds of ammunition.

Alberta Loses 2 Appeals To Privy Council

LONDON, March 6—(CP Cable). —Acts passed by the Legislature of Alberta in 1937 reducing interest rates on provincial securities was declared unconstitutional to-day by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Upholding the judgments of the Canadian courts, their Lordships dismissed two appeals brought by the Alberta Government. The first, in the name of the Board of Trustees of the Lethbridge irrigation district, was dismissed with costs. In the second, brought by the King as represented by the Alberta Government, the appellants were ordered to pay respondents' costs.

Th appeals were taken from judgments of the lower courts in favor of the Independent Order of Foresters, which holds bonds of the Lethbridge irrigation district which are guaranteed by the Provincial Government. In each appeal, the Attorney-General of Canada intervened, since the question of interest was held to be within the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government.

The Acts declared by their Lordships to be ultra vires of the Alberta Legislature are the Provincial Securities Interest Act of 1937, which reduced interest on Government bonds 50 per cent, retroactive to June, 1936, and the Provincial Guaranteed Securities Interest Act, which reduced interest on securities guaranteed by the Provincial Government by 50 per cent.

Judgment Upheld.

The Provincial Securities Interest Act first was declared unconstitutional by Mr. Justice Ewing of the Supreme Court of Alberta. This judgment was upheld in a majority opinion of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Alberta.

The Foresters' Order, with headquarters at Toronto, has sued for the full interest rate. The Appellate Division judgment declared the court was bound by previous judgments holding the question of interest to be within the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council heard the two appeals simultaneously in December, with the following Judges present: Viscount Caldecote, the Lord Chancellor, Viscount Sankey, Lord Maugham, Lord Roche, and Lord Porter.

40,000 G.M. Workers In "Separation" Plan

NEW YORK, March 6—(AP). — A guarantee of one-half month's to one half year's pay in the event of "separation" was given to more than 40,000 salaried employees by General Motors Corporation today.

The plan announced by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of the company, provides that any salaried employee with a year or more of continuous service who is released for reasons beyond his control will be paid a "separation allowance."

This amount to 25 per cent of one month's pay for each year's service up to 10 years. For each year's service in excess of 10 years, the allowance wil lbe on the basis of 35 per cent of one month's pay. The minimum allowance is one-half of one month's pay and the maximum is six months' salary.

The new plan is in addition to the "income security" and "layoff benefit" plans already in operation for more than 150,000 hourly-rated factory employees of General Motors. The three plans together cover every employee of the company.

ONE of the LAST ACTS of a GREAT LIFE

His Excellency, the late Right Honourable Lord Tweedsmuir, Baron of Elsfield, P.C., G.C.M.G., C.H., Governor-General of Canada, was until his widely-mourned passing on Sunday, February 11th, Honorary President and Patron of the Salvation Army National Advisory Board.

On January 26th, only sixteen days before his unexpected and untimely death, he wrote the letter reproduced below, warmly commending the work of the Salvation Army for the soldiers. The writing of this letter was thus one of the last acts of a noble life consecrated to duty, achievement and patriotic service.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
OTTAWA

As Honorary President of the National Advisory Board, I should like to draw the attention of the public to the War Service Work of the Salvation Army.

Whether our sailors and soldiers and airmen are engaged in actual fighting or in training, time will often hang heavily on their hands. It is for organizations such as the Salvation Army to provide opportunities for recreation and refreshments of the mind in these long periods of enforced inactivity.

The Salvation Army with its high ideals, its long practical experience and its magnificent record of service is highly competent to take part in this important work and I warmly commend its efforts to all those who have the welfare of our fighting services at heart.

Tweedsmuir

26th January, 1940.

Will you too help us in this service to Canada's soldiers?

Volunteer workers will call upon you. Receive them gladly and give as your heart dictates.

OSHAWA GENERALS RUB OUT YOUNG RANGERS TO MAKE FINALS

Strong Finish Earns Nod By A 4-3 Count

Ed. Wildey's Young Rangers bowed out of the O.H.A. Junior "A" championship picture last night, but in typical Ranger fashion, the "People's Choice" extended the smooth Oshawa Generals to the limit before dropping a 4-3 verdict at the Maple Leaf Gardens. Victory gave the Generals the semi-final series in two straight games and catapulted them into the titular test against the winner of the Guelph-Marlboro affair.

Rangers battled stubbornly against a team that packed a little more power, a bit too much finesse, and the old Wildey jinx that haunts the corridors come playoff time. The fact that the Toronto youngsters proved incapable of holding a 3-1 lead indicates they were not quite strong enough to do any dope-upsetting. But, as is usually the case, there was a disallowed goal to make it discouraging to Ranger rooters. This happened midway through the second stanza, at a time when Rangers were leading 3-2. In a scramble around the Oshawa net, Goalie Dinny McManus appeared to smother a shot and Referee Norm Collings blew his whistle. A split-second later Conacher jammed the still loose disc into the net. Heated protests were of no avail and Oshawa came on to tie the score and win out with the lone goal of the final period.

Battle Hard

Playing back to the form which enabled them to paste the only defeat against Oshawa's league record this season, Young Rangers made the Generals go all out to earn the decision. Oshawa bounded into the lead in the fifth minute, when Frankie Eddolls scored from a scramble. It took Young Rangers ten minutes to fashion the equalizer and blonde Jim Conacher was the marksman, scoring on one of his sparkling solo sorties.

Young Ranger hopes bounded to a new high when two goals in the first 7½ minutes of the second period gave them a 3 to 1 working margin. Don Veigel notched the first at 4:03 when he fought this wa ythrough stubborn opposition when it seemed he was stopped two or three times. George Akery got the second three minutes later, getting his stick to Spike Wichenko's shot from the blueline and deflecting it by McManus. Oshawa protested that Akery was in the crease, but didn't convince the arbiters on the point. A trifle peeved, the Generals surged back. A weaving solo by Wally Wilson reduced the count at 7:34, and, in the last minute of the period, a ganging session when Wichenko was in the penalty box produced the equalizer. Roy Sawyer got the goal after a passing bout with Eddolls and Nick Knott.

Oshawa seemed to have more in reserve in the final period and protected their advantage soundly after Buddy Hellyer shattered the deadlock with a goal near the midway mark. Don Daniels gave Hellyer a clear path to the net with a neat bit of playmaking.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC PERDUE

Because a lawyer in Helsinki, Finland, wanted to learn the English language and hence obtained copies of The Examiner—and other periodicals—from relatives in Peterborough some months ago, we are on the mailing list of the Finnish Olympic News Service. Yesterday we received a letter from Helsinki, starting off like this: "In 1938 the International Olympic Committee entrusted Finland with organizing the 12th Olympic Games in Helsinki. Finland and her sportsmen accepted with gratitude and, thanks to the generous sacrifices of the entire nation, preparations had progressed so far by the autumn of 1939 that the success of the Games seemed ensured. In a cheerful and confident spirit we looked forward to the arrival of the world's athletes and sportsmen as our guests."

* * * * * * *

The letter goes on to say that, despite the outbreak of war in Europe, the Finns continued Olympic plans, believing that even in war time the Olympic idea might help unite the nations in a spirit of peace and brotherhood. And then "Bolshevik Russia attacked our peaceful people, violating her non-aggression pact with Finland. She disclosed her intentions by making air raids on the unfortified Olympic City, killing women and children with bombs and machine guns. Russia's aim is to destroy Finland's independence through bloodshed and fire. The people of Finland have taken up arms as one man. The nation fights for its very existence.

* * * * * * *

Appeals To Sportsmen

"At this moment Finland is not sending out information about the Games. Nevertheless, the organizing committee of the 12th Olympic Games has met in order to make this appeal to the athletes and sportsmen of the world. We beseech you, our fellow athletes and sportsmen in all parts of the world, to think of Finland at this moment—Finland, the country which expected to greet the flower of the world's youth as her guests at this great festival of peace, the country which has been attacked without the slightest justification by a Great Power pursuing its Bolshevist policy. And when thinking of Finland may you understand that, however encouraging the sympathy shown us by the world has been, it is not sufficient for a nation struggling against an enemy 50 times greater in size and power. It's up to you also, athletes and sportsmen of the world, to decide whether this appeal from the organizing committee shall be a last message or not."

* * * * * * *

Hm, sort of brings it home to ya, huh? Makes you mighty grateful you're living here, not next door to Red Russia. Instead of athletic competitions before cheering Finns next summer, there'll be a gallant people hacked and cut to bits and driven back before swarms of Communists—saids swarms being loosed on Finland by Hitler. So much for the 1940 Olympics!

It Goes On And On

Collingwood Shipbuilders scuttled the Owen Sound Trappers by a 7-1 count right in the Sound last p.m. and, consequently, prolonged their O.H.A. intermediate "A" series. Two wins to date for Trappers, two ties, and now one victory for Collingwood in what started out to be a three-in-five affair. While word had not been received by the Petes this morning from the O.H.A. secretary, the locals expect they'll be sent to Kitchener this Friday, seeing as the Greenshirts—who romped through to an 8-1 round-robin chuckle last eve in Port Colborne—haven't had a home playoff game yet. In any event, the Petes will be on the road toward the end of the week.

* * * * * * *

Industrial Puck Loop runs off two sudden-death semi-final tilts at the Brock either Thursday or Friday night, depending on which evening is open at the rink. Quakers clash with Marines in one bracket while Packers tangle with Westclox in the other. The cream of the crop, but two will be skinned off in this double-header. Remaining pair next week mix it in two-out-of-three finals for the league championship. A Friday night offering of these semi-finals should draw well as the puck season nears a conclusion, as some lively hockey would be dished up in these crucial contests.

* * * * * * *

It's Eddie's Dough Now

Hap Day, Toronto referee—and former N.H.L. star with the Leafs—was telling a local chap recently, when down here to handle one of the Petes' games, about Eddie Shore. Hap says it's remarkable the change in Shore since he took over the managership of Springfield pros. Eddie as a star player was a regular holdout for more salary, fought hard for bonuses, ate up heavy expenses, etc. But now he has suddenly lost the player's attitude toward club expenses, and looks at the financial side of the question with an officer's eye. He cuts down on passes, he checks customers at the gate, he helps with carpenter work around the rink, he douses lights in the arena a few minutes after the game is over, he yells about the players wanting too much equipment—in fact, Eddie (as a hockey magnate) has suddenly developed one-way pockets!

* * * * * * *

Two men's City Basketball League windup numbers are listed for tonight (Wednesday) at the Y.M.C.A., being moved up from Saturday. Bees play Dominions at 7.15 while Quakers collide with C.G.E. at 8.15, and both jousts should be fast and furious frays. St. Paul's cagers didn't go to Toronto last night, apparently getting a postponement. We believe their tilt here is Saturday night. St. John's have an O.C.B.A. game in Toronto on Friday. In the Y.W. on Friday at seven, Quaker Aces play the Debs, followed at eight by "Y" Gym 'gainst Westclox, with Belleville gals then mixing with the Orfuns in a return L.O.B.A. playoff at nine. Dope on this trio of cage tussles by the fair basketeers is in elsewhere tonight.

TUBES AS USUAL

LONDON—(CP).—London's subway stations are open for business as usual, after some of them spent months safeguarding against flooding in air raids. In 1938, the London Passenger Transport Board decided on flooding precautions in the "underground."

Those Dean Boys Again

While the Dallas, Tex., sun shines, those two "baseball Deans" loll comfortably and let the baseball fans worry about their future. Dizzy (LEFT) and Paul Dean, who between them once won 49 games pitching for the Cardinals, claim they're farmers now; Diz is a "holdout" and Paul says he has retired.

Training Camp Briefs

(By The Associated Press)

FORT MYERS, Fla., March 6 (AP) — Cleveland Indians believe they have a pitching "find" in Paul Calvert—21-year-old spectacled semi pro from Montreal. Manager Oscar Vitt heard Calvert's fast one singing past the hitters and thought a rough ball made the music. Vitt gave Calvert a new, shiny ball. It also sang, and coach Johnny Bassler reported the youngster has a hook and control.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Disgusted by the failure of general manager Branch Rickey to appear for a scheduled contract confab, slugger Joe Medwick planned to leave St. Louis Cardinals' training camp today and fly back to St. Louis. Rickey was scheduled to meet Medwick yesterday but won't arrive until Friday.

"I've done my part," declared Joe, who wants more than the $18,000 offered him. "I was here on the appointed date and he wasn't."

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — Carl Hubbell admits his screwball was the cause of all the trouble he has with his left arm the last few seasons, but the 37-year-old southpaw figures he will be good enough to win 16 or 28 games for New York Giants this year. Hub says his arm feels better this spring than it has in years.

LAKELAND, Fla.—At least Detroit's Tigers can dig up more original names than the usual "regulars" and "yanigans" for their teams in intra-games. Today it's the "white rats" with Bill Fleming and Hal Manders pitching, against the "black cats," with Freddie Hutchinson and Tom Seats on the hill.

SARASOTA, Fla.—Ted Williams, Boston Red Sox crack "sophomore" outfielder, isn't modest about his hitting. He has a bet with Lefty Grove that he will belt one over the right field fence 418 feet from the plate. And he's so confident he already has wired his tailor what he wants.

Locking With 56 Shades Hemmerling

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 6.—(AP)—Norm Locking, husky wing of Syracuse Stars, took an undisputed scoring lead in the International-American Hockey League last week with an eight-point surge which brought his total to 56.

Tony Hemmerling of New Haven Eagles, who with Ronny Hudson of Indianapolis Capitals was deadlocked with Locking at the top last week, was in second place with 52 points, while Max Bennett of the Stars was third with 51.

Petes Bessone of Pittsburg Hornets led the penalty list with 32 minors, four majors and a misconduct.

Horton Smith Out Of Tourney As Putt Misses

CORAL GABLES, Fla, March 6.—(AP).—Horton Smith, one of the world's great putters, missed a wee one of less than three feet yesterday as he and Paul Runyan, last of the seeded teams, faded out of the $5,000 international four-ball golf tournament.

The ball curled around the cup and hesitated on the lip but didn't go in—and so Dick Metz and Ky Laffoon play Bill Burke and Craig Wood in the finals to-morrow.

Metz and Laffoon both scored birdie fours to beat Runyan and Smith, four time finalists in the four-ball, one up after 36 holes. Wood and Burke came from behind and won from Clayton Heafner and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, 4 and 3, in the other semi-final.

Metz and Laffoon won the tournment two years ago.

Smith and Runyan, who won the four-ball in 1934, ended the morning turn two up. Metz caught fire as the afternoon round got under way, rapped out a four-under-par 31 with five birdies on the nine-hole stretch and sent his team three up.

The complexion of the match again changed as Runyan's putter blazed once more, and in three holes the match was square.

From there out it was a dog fight. Metz's 30-foot putt for a birdie deuce won the thirty-second hole. On the thirty-fourth Smith sent a 20-footer into the cup to even matters, the way they stayed until the payoff hole.

Metz and Laffoon with a pair of 65's were 12 under par for the day.

It was Burke, national open champion in 1931, who beat Harrison and Heafner in the final analysis.

Heafner and Harrison ran up a quick three-hole lead in the morning, and were still two up through the fourteenth, when Burke's consistent iron shots began to tell.

Burke's 20-foot putt for a birdie on the opening hole of the afternoon round sent him and Wood ahead and the next nine holes were halved. Burke then sent home a 12-foot putt for a birdie. He and Wood won the thirty-first in par and Burke nailed his approach dead to the thirty-third pin to close out the match.

Wood and Burke set a nine-under-par pace for the match.

Battery Athletes Here On Thursday

A group of boxers, wrestlers, and basketball players from the 45th C.A.S.F. will visit Peterborough tomorrow, Thursday evening, a return visit arranged by the local Y.M.-C.A., in the interests of the enlisted men. Through the courtesy of Lt. Col. R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne the boxing and wrestling program will be held in the Armouries commencing at 8 o'clock. The basketball games will be played in the Y.M.-C.A. gymnasium at 9.15.

Th boxers from Peterborough are Maurice Coderre, 125 lbs.; Mel Pakenham, 135 lbs.; Bill Joiner, 145 lbs.; Joe O'Neill, 160 lbs., N. McIlmoyle, 170 lbs.; Fred Williams (wrestling), 145 lbs.

Wilf Jones will referee the boxing and Archie Menzies will act as judge, along with two Lindsay judges. Jean Hurtubise will referee the wrestling.

The attendance at this event will be open only to men of the local militia and their friends, including the ladies. A good sized crowd is expected.

New York—Lenny (Boom Boom) Mancini, 134½, Youngstown, O., outpointed Pat Foley, 133½, Boston (8).

Remember When—

The mile bicycle record held by Torchy Peden of Victoria was bettered at Los Angeles five years ago today by Frank Bartell, bewhiskered Czecho-Slovakian, who skimmed around a track at 80.584 miles an hour, four miles an hour better than the Canadian redhead's mark.

Badminton Play Begins Today

WINNIPEG, March 6.—(CP)—When the Canadian badminton championships get underway here today, two of the hottest rivalries in any national sporting event will attract interest in the main events—the men's and women's singles.

The starting draw in the men's individual event will see Johnny Samis of Vancouver and Dick Birch, Montreal, cast as favorites to meet in a continuation of their see-saw battle for supremacy.

In the women's singles Marjorie Delaney of Quebec City and Mrs. W. R. Walton, Toronto, will add another chapter to their friendly feud if they reach the final.

Birch and Samis were boyhood chums and Birch, the older, was also the better badminton player until two years ago. Birch was Samis' instructor but one day in a club match the pupil trounced the tutor and thereby started a keen but amiable competition.

The powerful, barrel-chested Samis captured Birch's Dominion crown in 1938 and the two seemed destined to clash in the final again at Toronto last year.

Both drew less-favored opponents in the semi-final but Samis twisted his ankle and forfeited to Ted Pollock of Kitchener, Ont. Birch whipped Pollock in the final to retake the title.

Neither of the two will have a clear road to the finals, however, with an entry list including Rod Phelan, 1935 champion from Toronto, Jack Sibbald, London, Ont., Allan Frances, British Columbia junior champ and Jack Underhill, Vancouver veteran, a former Canadian champion nine times.

Mrs. Walton first met Miss Delaney when she defeated her in a semi-final in the Canadian championships at Quebec in 1937. Mrs. Anna Kier Patrick, Vancouver, topped Mrs. Walton in the final.

Classic Struggle

In 1938 Mrs. Walton won her first Dominion crown and last year at Toronto Miss Delaney gained her revenge, capturing the title. Officials of the tournament say if the classy youngster and the experienced veteran beat their way to the final a history-making match can be expected.

Other highly-regarded feminine players include Mrs. Guy Perodeau, Ottawa, twice runner-up for the Dominion title, Margaret Taylor, 1935 champion from Vancouver, Evelyn Effnert, Toronto, and Doris Clapperton, Calgary.

Hoop Playoffs Lined Up In Girls' Loop

The third round of play in the city ladies' basketball league comes to a close with the games this Friday evening. These games conclude the regular schedule for the season and the play-offs open the following Friday, March 15.

The games this week will have no bearing on the final standing of the teams, as the 'Y' gym and Quaker Aces are the top two squads and will meet for the senior title. Westclox and St. John's are entrenched in third and fourth positions and will battle it out for the junior cup, now held by the Westclox girls. Quaker Debs, who are behind the clockmakers and in fifth place, will be through for the season after this week.

Trio Of Tilts

At 7 p.m Friday, the Quaker Aces play the Debs in an all Quaker get-together. The Debs have been coming along nicely of late and upset St. John's last week. However, the Aces are favored to take this one and make a clean sweep of their games with the sister team.

"Y" gym meets Westclox at 8:00 o'clock and the Y girls will be working hard for a win to finish on the top rung.

At 9 p.m. the Belleville girls will be here for their return game with the local Orfuns. This is the first round of the Provincial playdowns, with the Orfuns holding a nice lead from the first game in Belleville last Saturday.

The locals play a wide open game with lots of speed and passing and fans are assured of plenty of action. Audrey Craig, Ruth Thompson and Barbara Blade are high scoring forwards who will make it plenty difficult for the visitors on the roomy Y.W. floor. The winner of this round meets the Toronto winner in the next round of play.

WESTERN CANADA RINKS LEAD IN GREAT CURLING BONSPIEL

Manitoba Leads Brier Play Wins 4 Rounds

WINNIPEG, March 6.—(CP)—Alberta and Saskatchewan meet today in one of the crucial games of the 14th annual Macdonald's Brier curling championships.

Unbeaten Manitoba leads the Brier after four rounds but the other Prairie rinks are tied with three wins apiece and their encounter in the fifth round this afternoon will break the second-place tie. Manitoba meets British Columbia which has won only once.

Other fifth-round pairings are: Prince Edward Island-Ontario; Quebec-Northern Ontario; and New Brunswick-Nova Scotia. For the sixth round tonight they are: Northern Ontario-Nova Scotia; Manitoba-Quebec; Alberta-British Columbia; Ontario-New Brunswick; Saskatchewan-Prince Edward Island

Play closed yesterday in the afternoon when Quebec, skipped by the veteran Col. Archie Bell, Quebec City, scored the competition's major surprise—a 15-9 conquest of the 1939 Brier champions, Bert Hall's Ontario rink from Kitchener.

Beats Scotia 17-4

Howard Wood, the 1930 champion, topped Manitoba to its fourth win 14-4 over Nova Scotia; Saskatchewan nosed out Jim Davis' Kirkland Lake four, representing Northern Ontario, 8-6; New Brunswick rallied with two on the last end for a 10-9 win over Bill Finlay's British Columbians' and Alberta beat P.E.I. 10-6, the fourth straight loss for Rankine McLaine and his Charlottetown men.

Col. Peter Lyall of Montreal, Brier trustee, announced to 400 guests at the annual banquet last night the 1941 championships will be held at the Granite Club, Toronto, at invitation of the Ontario Curling Association and the Granite Club where the first 13 competitions were held. The 1942 Brier was awarded to Quebec City at invitation of the Quebec curlers bonspiel.

Guests of honor at the banquet, the 10 competing rinks in the current 'spiel were piped into the banquet hall by pipers of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders and officially welcomed by Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Tupper and Premier John Bracken of Manitoba, Mayor John Queen of Winnipeg and President W. R. McAlpine of the Manitoba Curling Association.

Finn Track Star After Funds Wins 3-Miler

SAN FRANCISCO, March 6.—(AP)—Taisto Maki, who exchanged a soldier's rifle for an athlete's spike to help build up the depleted finances of his native Finland, apparently is not far off from the form that enabled him to crack running records less than a year ago.

The mud of Finnish trenches, heavy boots and war ordeals are still fresh memories, yet without much training the 141-pound speedster stepped out here last night to win a three-mile race. He was timed in 14 minutes, 15.3 seconds.

Ted Vollmer of the University of California and Robert Madrid of Fresno State College were second and third repectively. Each was lapped once by Maki.

The American indoor record is 13:46.2 set in New York Feb. 24, 1939 by Willie Ritola, one of Maki's countrymen. Maki is unofficially credited with running the fastest outdoor three miles when he went the distance in 13:42.4 in Finland last June.

Accompanied by Paavo Nurmi, his countryman and world's greatest distance runner of the early 20's, Maki made his first appearance in the United States in what will be a series of performances dedicated to the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund. Nurmi, now 43 years old, ran an exhibition half mile.

Bauer Leads Way To Bruins 7-2 Win Over Wings

BOSTON, Mar. 6—(CP)—When it comes to timing utterances perfectly for the public prints, Manager Art Ross of Boston Bruins stands at the top of the class.

Only the other day, Ross ventured forth with the prediction that Milt Schmidt and Woody Dumart of his Kraut line would finish one-two in this season's National Hockey league scoring race. In addition, Ross said he wouldn't be at all surprised if the third Kraut—Bobby Bauer—would wind up in the third spot.

Tossing caution to the winds, the Bruins' manager even went so far as to state that Bauer is the best right wing in the business today and that the Kraut Kids make up a better combination that the once-famed trio of the Cook brothers, Bun and Bill, and Frankie Boucher of the New York Rangers.

Bobby Bauer

Not to let down his manager, the speedy little Bauer went out last night to notch two unassisted goals and help in another as the Bruins walloped Detroit Red Wings 7-2 to climb only a point away from the leading Rangers. Bruins seem certain to finish up on top for Rangers have only three more games to play compared to five for the Boston club.

Bauer's performance placed him in fourth place in individual scoring in the league, only a point away from Dumart and Bryan Hextall of the Rangers, who are tied for second with 39 points. Schmidt, who picked up a goal and an assist against the Wings, is the leader with 20 goals and 27 assists. His total also equals that compiled last season by Toe Blake of Canadiens in winning the scoring crown.

The Bruins managed several notable achievements last night as goals went to Roy Conacher, Herbit Cain, Dit Clapper and Red Hamill. The markers by Schmidt and Cain gave each marksman 20 scores for the season, putting them with Dumart and Hextall in this class.

Goalie Frank Brimsek of the Bruins, who was seeking his sixth shutout of the season, saw his hopes die early in the third period when Kenny Kilrea scored. Syd Howe added another for the Wings.

Farnsworth Bees Oust Tweed 3-2 In Overtime

TWEED, March 6—(ENS). — In the second round of the semi-finals for the Dr. Welsh trophy in the East Hastings League, the Farnsworth Bees eliminated the Tweed Bearcats, 3-2, in overtime at the local arena on Tuesday night.

Both teams played close hockey, with the Bees having the better of the play throughout. The Bearcats opened the scoring in the first period with Prout tallying. However the Bees tied the count with Meraw taking a pass from R. Palmateer in a scramble in front of the nets rapping home the rebound. Meraw and Thompson went to the box in this frame.

The second period was scoreless, with both teams missing several chances to count. Two penalties were handed out in this period with Hayes and L. Gunning getting the gate. Good work in the Bearcats' nets by McIlroy kept the fast stepping Bees from tallying when they had the Tweed team cornered in their own end of the ice.

Farnsworth went one up early in the last period, when Baker took a pass out from Meraw and maintained that margin in play until two minutes from the end of the period, when Prout tallied from behind the Bees' nets to tie the count. Both team laid it on, resulting in three penalties being handed out, with Courneyes, Hayes and R. Palmateer going to the cooler.

Neither side tallied during the first part of the overtime, but in the second half, Baker licked in the winning counter with only three minutes to go. A penalty to Prout in the dying minutes of play prevented the Bearcats from pressing in for a tying counter.

As a result of the victory, the Farnsworth Bees now meet the Plainfield aggregation for the trophy. Lineups:

Tweed.—Goal, McIlroy; defence, Emmerson, Woods; centre, Prout; wings, Cronkwright, T. Thompson; subs., Hayes, Courneyes, Lobb, Sherry, Sinclair.

Farnsworth.—Goal, Mouck; defence, R. Palmateer, G. Gunning; centre, N. Thompson; wings, H. Meraw, J. Lajoie; subs., D. Palmateer, G. Baker, G. Jones, L. Gunning, T. Rivers.

Horse Drops Through Ice

SELWYN, March 6—(ENS)—Albert Whetung, a resident of Curve Lake Reserve, very narrowly escaped losing his life and that of his horse when he was crossing the lake from Curve Lake to Selwyn on Tuesday morning. He was crossing in his horse and cutter, not on the road used by the cars, but on another road that had been used by wood-drivers all winter. Suddenly, the horse's hind feet broke through the ice and went into the water to the hips, but it being of a quick and nervous nature, it plunged forward with its front feet and managed to get footing, pulling the cutter and the occupant, Mr. Whetung, safely over the hole.

In relating the story to some friends, Mr. Whetung said had he been driving the other horse, which he sometimes uses for a short trip, it would have drowned because it is of a much slower nature and would not have been able to regain its footing so quickly.

Pressing Hay.

Mr. Reg. Bell went to Bridgenorth Tuesday morning with his tractor and hay-press, where he will cross over Chemong Lake on the ice to Ennismore, and do some more hay-pressing for some farmers there.

Personals.

the Royal Canadian Air Force school at St. Thomas, Ont., have brought him into the election picture although he has not campaigned.

Howe's Views

At Haliburton, Ont., Transport Minister Howe said that permission to show the film was refused because the provincial leaders did not want their critical statements disproved by photographs. At Fredericton Mr. Rogers said the reason was presumably because Mr. Hepburn felt it told too much while a few months ago he criticized the government because it told too little.

The Hepburn charges about the Air School brought denials from Mr. Rogers and a Government spokesman at Ottawa.

The news that M. A. McPherson, runner-up to Dr. Manion at the 1938 Conservative convention which chose the party leader, is expected to run as a candidate in Regina projected another personality into the electoral spotlight again. He is considered cabinet timber if Dr. Manion forms a government.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Conservative Minister of Trade and Commerce, charged at Winnipeg that the war effort of the present Liberal administration was marked by inefficiency, ineptitude and waste.

One of the worst examples of government waste was the purchasing of 109 acres of land in Ontario from three "friends of the Liberal party for $88,000, Mr. Stevens continued. He said the land, required for a rifle range, had been assessed for $9,000. Only a few acres of land were used, and the balance was leased back to the former owners for a rental of $2,000 a year, he charged.

Supplying of clothing to soldiers had been hopelessly mismanaged. In Toronto enlisted men had to sleep on newspapers because no cots were available, Mr. Stevens said.

Drew In Calgary.

"The real issue in the federal election is to win this war and to preserve democracy in Canada as well," Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, said at Calgary.

Col. Drew made a hasty entrance to the crowded hall three-quarters of an hour after the meeting had started. A specially chartered plane had whisked him to Calgary from Lethbridge on the last leg of a fast trip from Toronto which he left Monday.

His speech was filled with charges of war contract inefficiency, and with charges of dictatorial radio censorship applied by the King government.

Hugh C. Farthing, K.C., Calgary East, Conservative candidate, also levelled charges of "tyrannical censorship" against radio regulations, when he read to the audience 300 words which he said had been deleted from his radio address by a Calgary radio station manager in the afternoon.

Life has been held at too low a value in wartime, M. J. Coldwell, national chairman of the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation, said at Hamilton.

"The cheapest thing in war is human life and we've got to make it the dearest, and make war so expensive that those who are anxious to see it will be anxious to preserve peace," he said.

He advocated that a bond or insurance policy to guarantee post-war security be given to each man, or his dependents, upon enlistment in the Canadian army, the air force or the navy.

More Than Fireside Chats.

R. L. Maitland, K.C., of of Vancouver, leader of the Conservative part, in British Columbia, declared in a half-hour radio address broadcast over a national network from Toronto that from 1935 until the present nothing has been done by the government of Canada that marks it as a strong, aggressive government such as Canada needs at the present moment.

"We want something more than fireside chats from Prime Minister Mackenzie King," he said. "We want a government of action."

Dr. Manion, the leader of the Conservative party, promises action, said Mr. Maitland. "Dr. Manion's record is the record of a human, energetic, fearless man, and Dr. Manion calls on the people of Canada to-day to support him. He asks you to help him lift government above party affairs and patronage at this time.

Dr. Manion proposes protection for agriculture. He proposes the further development of Canadian industry within Canada. He proposes a department of youth so that this problem will be ever present in the planning of affairs by the Dominion government. He promises Dominion jurisdiction over unemployment as a national responsibility. He seeks to form a cabinet irrespective of party, and in this direction he has shown his good faith in years gone by. He brings his war service to aid him in returned soldiers' problems."

Appeal On War Effort.

The Dominion government is appealing to the electors on its war effort and the opposition have found no adequately supported criticism to warrant a change of government, Defence Minister Rogers said at Woodstock, N.B.

The campaign issue was serious and must be dealt with calmly and deliberately, he said. No speaker on the government side had sought support by means of prejudice. The first wartime election had been fought largely on a battlefield of prejudice and misunderstandings, and the country suffered for years afterwards.

There is only one outstanding issue now and that is for or against the candidates supporting the present administration, said Mr. Rogers. No one should allow secondary issues in various districts to cloud the real issue.

Mobilization and equipping of two divisions by the government showed no lack of careful planning and administration but quite the contrary, Mr. Rogers added.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner told a Gladstone, Man., meeting of the benefits to the farmer under the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act.

Denton Massey, National Government candidate in Toronto-Greenwood, and Sylvanus Apps, National Hockey League star and National Government candidate in Brant, spoke at Paris, Ont. The Toronto Maple Leaf player said if he was elected he would call a conference of representative farmers to discuss their problems.

Rogers Proposes

censorship had "covered up" what he described as 'violent disturbances' at the air school where airmen were "fed-up and disgusted with doing nothing but shining door knobs and polishing floors."

A Protest March

Mr. Hepburn said several hundred airmen marched through the streets of St. Thomas in protest against "lack of training." It took three days for military authorities to round them up and the censors warned local newspapermen that the story could not be published, he said.

Mr. Rogers said in his reply that there have been no riots and it "is absolutely untrue" that the airmen marched into town and were not rounded up for three days.

It also is untrue that the St. Thomas paper wanted to publish such a story and was denied the right. Mr. Hepburn's further allegation that the rioters were given blanket leaves so that Mr. Rogers could deny there was any disturbance, was described by the defence minister as "sheer fabrication."

A halt should be called by Conservative Leader Manion, Premier Hepburn and Lieut.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, "to wild and fantastic utterances," Mr. Rogers continued.

He said he did not know if these men realized what they are doing and added "each time Premier Hepburn indulges his flair for abuse and for groundless statement, for loose and violent speech, he is a party to the betrayal of Canada.

Mr. Hepburn's charges also prompted a reply from a government spokesman concerning the censorship charges.

Denies Stories Suppressed.

The spokesman declared that the censors never at any time suppressed any story of disturbances at St. Thomas and no such story ever was submitted to them. The press censors here confirmed this statement.

Mr. Hepburn, annoyed by criticism by Dominion Government officials against Mr. Hepburn's ban on the "march of time" film "Canada at War," told newspapermen he was "exposing" news of the "violent disturbance" on his own responsibility as Premier of Ontario.

Mr. Hepburn also criticized Prime Minister Mackenzie King and charged him with having "control of the press and the radio through his censorship."

"Well," added Mr. Hepburn, "he is not going to control the screen as well." He said he had been criticized for "preventing dissemination of this political propaganda" ("Canada at War") but "Rogers employed censorship to cover up at St. Thomas."

The film in question, said Mr. Hepburn, will be released for showing in Ontario theatres the day after the general election, March 26.

Ready For Agreement

"We were willing to come to a war trade agreement with Il Duce for the benefit both of his country and ours. Negotiations have broken down because of his unwillingness to supply us in return for coal with certain heavy goods.

"Apparently in the belief that he holds the central position on the diplomatic seesaw, he deems himself able to dictate to us under threat of inclining further towards Hitler if we prove difficult.

"We hope he will not overrate the advantages of his neutrality.

"We have not the slightest intention of being frightened into making war as the Germans would like us to make it and not as we ought to make it to ensure our success."

A source close to the foreign office said last night that Britain is "not inclined to view the matter as a 'crisis' or anything like it."

(In Rome, however, authoritative Italians said the actual seizure of the colliers tended to bring relations toward a crisis.)

Ships held at the Downs were the Ernesto, 4,356 tons; Orata, 8,641; Absirtea, 4,170; Felce, 5,639; Numidia, 5,339; Caterina, 4,786; and the tanker Loasso, 5,986.

(Lloyd's register of ships list no Caterina, but shows a Caterina Gerolimich and a Caterina Madre of approximately the tonnage given for the Caterina.)

Commenting editorially this morning, The Times said it hoped negotiations would be resumed on the matter of supplying British coal to replace the German.

"Incidentally," the paper said, "British credits for the export of coal to Germany have been available for some time, and such facilities still exist. Therefore in theory, at any rate, the question of what Italy should send in return for the coal is not pressing at the moment. Britain wants a fair share of heavy industrial products useful in war.

"Italian officials in London yesterday were saying that as Britain had proposed to cut off Italy's normal supplies from Germany, the least she should do is at first to take in exchange for coal the kind of produce which Italy had been paying to Germany—mainly agricultural produce. On the other hand as some Italian heavy production is presumably available for export, Britain would be glad of them, for British purchases of agricultural produce have already been heavy elsewhere."

The White Paper to which it referred declared that it was not part of British policy that "Palestine should become a Jewish state," and forecast an independent state in which Arab and Jew would share the responsibility of government. MOTHER OF EXPLORERS

Premier of Quebec

"QUEBEC IS PREPARED TO CO-OPERATE IN ALL FRIENDLINESS"

Following is Premier Godbout's statement:

"Quebec with her vast natural resources is ready to support faithfully the Canadian Government in its duty, incumbent upon it for the protection of our territory and our Christian civilization.

"Quebec's immense activities make a contribution that round out the offerings of her sister provinces.

"Ranging from the products of farm, mine and forest, to those of manufacturing plants, Quebec's share in Canada's effort is as diversified as it is large.

"Quebec is prepared to co-operate in all friendliness with the other provinces of Canada to assure the triumph of our National Unity." (Signed) A. GODBOUT, Premier.

THE SAME QUALITIES of intrepidity, perseverance, courage, and leadership that characterized her explorer sons, are alive in Quebec today. Her present pioneers are still exploring, developing, cultivating her vast frontier with its natural wealth waiting to be uncovered: with its water powers, developed and undeveloped, the greatest in the world; and immense forests yet untrod.

This people by industry and enterprise produced in 1936 over a billion and a quarter dollars of wealth; exported over two and a half million tons of their products. Quebec's mines of gold, silver, copper, lead, radium, her fur trapping and her fur culture, her fisheries, her newsprint and her forestry are constant producers of wealth. She has 35,000 miles of roads, and in 1937 entertained 600,000 tourists, being herself one of Canada's greatest and most compelling attractions.

THE AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY IS CO-OPERATING IN CANADA'S WAR EFFORT

Now, more than ever before, our plants and highly specialized equipment are Dominion assets; our skilled workmen, vital cogs in the wartime industrial set-up in which the production of units of transport looms more important than ever. A busy Automotive Industry is truly a National War Enterprise. So remember, when you buy a Canadian-Built car, you are helping support an industry that distributes more than $22,000,000.00 in wages and salaries to many thousand families dependent on the industry. Add to these the families that are employed by industries supplying raw and finished materials to automobile manufacturers, and you see what this activity means to Canada.

WHAT ABOUT DEFENSE?

One of the most amazing things about this amazing election has been the attempt of the King government to blame the administration of R. B. Bennett for the country's lack of preparedness.

You would imagine that the Liberal leaders thought the people of Canada had no memories.

Mr. Bennett went out of power in 1935. At that time Hitler had made none of his menacing moves; in fact it was in that year that the world first learned that the Nazis were building an air force, and yet Mr. King and his lieutenants are now trying to make Canadians believe that Bennett is to blame for Canada's inadequate defence preparations.

Let us turn the spotlight on the same Mr. King for a moment.

What was he saying back in 1935 when he now says Mr. Bennett should have been preparing for the dire days ahead?

In that election campaign Mr. King visited Kingston, and after denouncing Mr Bennett as a dictator (he'll have to admit however, that Bennett never scuttled parliament or gagged the radio), made the following attack on expenditures for defence. We quote:

"There are drill halls, armouries all over the country, built at heavy cost. Why is that money being spent?

"It is to build up a great military force, because all dictatorships demand power, and the last word in dictatorship is the cannon and what comes out of the cannon.

"As you think of the election to come, ask yourself that little question, "Whither are we tending?" Think of what has happened and ask yourselves if we are making Canada a second Italy, a second Germany, or a second Russia."

That is the stuff Mr. King was feeding the electors in 1935 and now he has the effrontery to go back to those same electors five years afterward and charge that the Conservative government did not do enough for defence between 1930 and 1935.

What kind of leadership, what kind of statesmanship is that?

The conclusion is inevitable that winning the election is so important to Mr. King that he is willing to make his speeches of the past look ridiculous in the light of his utterances of to-day.

It is high time that kind of thing was ended in Canada. You can help to end it by voting National Government on March 26.

FALSE RUMOR

Gossip to the effect that Miss Madge Rycroft, an employee of a local theatre had been stricken with deadly tetanus (lockjaw) was exploded today when investigation revealed the girl is suffering from spasms of the jaw muscle, a condition attributed to a nerve fault. She is at present in the hospital and her doctor claims the unusual ailment is not at all serious.

A BELATED CHARGE.

Arrested last July on a drunk charge and failing to appear in court after having been granted an adjournment, a farm laborer made the mistake on Tuesday night of getting intoxicated again and he was arrested on the original charge. This morning he pleaded guilty and was fined $10, and costs, or ten days in jail. "It's too bad; he should be on the land," commented Chief Constable Newhall. "There'll be nothing doing on the land, anyway, for the next ten days." Magistrate Langley said.

McIntyre Hood, secretary to Attorney-General Conant, will be granted leave of absence from his Queen's Park post shortly and will proceed overseas to join the First Canadian Divsion, according to a Toronto announcement. A few months ago District Orders for Military District No. 3, announced that Mr. Hood had been attached to the 4th Field Battery in Peterborough as a Lieutenant. That order has not yet been withdrawn in district orders.

IN TRAINING.

On Monday afternoon Rollie Glover, Liberal candidate, and T. J. Carley with a chauffeur set out for a political meeting at Mount Irwin, up near Kinmount. The car was ditched near Bobcaygeon and a Stock's Bread truck towed it out. Four miles further on the car slid off the road again and almost disappeared in the deep snow. Rollie and Mr. Carley walked three miles, then rode three more on the back of a wood truck, finally trudged the last two miles on foot to arrive at the meeting two hours late. The crowd had waited for them.

The three actions were as follows: Charles Westlake v. Arthur T. Johnston and Arthur M. Johnston—Appeal by defendants Arthur M. Johnston from the judgment of Greene, J., and a jury, at Peterborough, on Sept. 28, 1939, dismissing the action as against defendant Arthur T. Warkworth Citizens See Pumper Work

A demonstration of the capacity of Johnson pumpers manufactured by Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Company was made at the plant on Monaghan Road this afternoon for a deputation of Warkworth citizens, headed by Reeve R. R. Mallory of Percy township.

The recent destructive fire in the business section of the police village in the township impressed the community that some efficient fire-fighting equipment should be purchased, and it was thought that a Johnson pumper might be an economical machine to meet the needs of the village.

Reeve Mallory was accompanied by the other members of the council and several business men, including Clayton Dudley.

Reporter Sent After Famous Polka Number Only To Find Madrigals "Pulled His Leg"

Harold Robson, reporter, tells a little news story that embodies a bit of humor attaching to the Madrigal Singers and Dorothy Allan Park. It seems that one of the members of the chorus told him recently that they were going to sing "The Beer Barrel Polka." It was getting into the "all-British program" as the marching song of the Mother Country's new army. At least that was the intimation of one of the ladies of the chorus. Dubious about this approaching descent from Olympus, Mr. Robson queried another of the songsters whom he knew, apparently a keen lass, quick on the uptake, who without an eye-blink confirmed the news, that time had been spent on rehearsing the beer barrel opus.

Mr. Robson still felt that there was something off key about this number, and finally he telephoned Mrs. Park.

"What polka was that?" Mrs. Park is said to have enquired, wondering about the unfamiliar name.

"Why, the Beer Barrel Polka," Mr. Robson replied. "I understand you are using it in your concert program, you know—'Roll out the barrel, we'll have a barrel of fun'."

The name apparently did not convey anything recognizable to Mrs. Park. "I was doubtful about it," Mr. Robson explained, "but I understand it is getting into your program in a group of modern British songs."

It seems Mrs. Park thought some one was spoofing her about this beverage tune, but she was finally persuaded that the question was really in good faith, preposterous as it must have sounded. It might just as well have been that African atrocity by one Cab Calloway with such a title of primitives as "Zaz Zuh Zaz."

At any rate Mr. Robson was informed that the song he was enquiring about was unknown to the director of the Madrigals, and of course it was not on the list, and there was also the further gracious information that it sounded suspiciously of jazz, and that meant it was out. As for the two members of the choir who betray a low acquaintance in things musical, partly redeemed by their madrigalling, Mr. Robson didn't say what he was going to do about their sending him along the more or less famous polka trail. Possibly there may be an account to be settled with those two singers.

Music Supervisor Reports Pianos In Quite Satisfactory Condition

"It seems to me that the school pianos have struck a very discordant note at this meeting," declared Chairman D. G. H. Melton at a meeting of the Board of Education Tuesday night. So saying, he summed up a wordy discussion that was the aftermath of last month's charge by member G. W. Craw that school pianos were badly out of tune.

Asked for a report, Miss M. R. Rannie, supervisor of music in schools, submitted the following: "I have visited each kindergarten and have found that with one exception the pianos are in quite satisfactory condition.

"Within the last ten years two new Heintzmans have been placed in the Prince of Wales and King George schools and I consider that the pianos in the other schools are quite good instruments, although the one in the Central kindergarten is quite old and not in as good condition as the others.

"As your Board knows, the late Mr. Cunningham was employed to tune the pianos. This work had been done twice a year, in January, and again during the summer, and had been most satisfactory.

"Owing to Mr. Cunningham's illness the pianos were not tuned in January as heretofore and thus the criticism seemed to have been rather ill-timed.

"In justice to Mr. Cunningham and to his very efficient work I should ask that this letter be given the same publicity as the paragraph which appeared in the Examiner after the last Board meeting."

Members of the Board passed a resolution asking that the same publicity be given the statement by Miss Rannie.

"I don't think that Miss Rannie is in a position to say whether the criticism of a member of the Board is ill-timed or not," declared Mr. Craw. "After all, she is an employee of this Board."

Member H. G. Walker came to the defence of school pianos when he claimed that a noted musician, whom he left unnamed, had visited the city schools and found the pianos superior to those in many other city schools in the province. This man, he said, had visited a great number of schools in the province. Mr. Walker agreed with Miss Rannie that the criticism had been ill-timed in view of Mr. Cunningham's illness.

Mr. Craw said he had not criticised the pianos themselves, that he knew they were good ones, but that his remarks had been levelled at their tuning. Nor, he said, had he intended criticism of Mr. Cunningham. He had every faith in his ability, but he maintained that tuning twice a year and not since last midsummer was not sufficient for pianos in such great use. "We parents are paying out money every week to teach our children music, and we're throwing it away," he said. He contended that use of poorly tuned pianos is destroying children's ears for music.

The report of Miss Rannie was sent to the supervision committee and when the discussion wound up Inspector Wightman asked if another month would pass before "anything is done to the pianos."

Criticism of newspaper reports was opened by D. G. H. Melton on the grounds they are far from accurate. He claimed they exaggerated out of proportion events that transpired at meetings of the Board, that they even contained things that did not transpire. Dr. A. Moir wanted press reports submitted to the Board before being printed and asked if the Board had the right to demand such. "Another Hitler," commented Mr. Craw, the Examiner's city editor.

He served overseas with the 93rd Battalion and held the rank of Captain. His wife took an equally prominent part in this city's life. It was three years ago next month that Mrs. Abraham moved to Portsmouth to live with her son, James Abraham. Her death yesterday came as a great shock to a large number of friends whom she had left behind in Peterborough.

Galt Minister Nominated As Moderator

The name of Rev. M. B. Davidson, D.D., of Galt, was nominated as Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, by the Peterborough Presbytery at its meeting in St Paul's church here yesterday.

Rev. Dr. Stuart Parker, present moderator, will retire from the post in June. Rev. E. A. Thompson, of Elora, was nominated as general secretary of the Board of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies. The Presbytery nominated Rev. Dr. W. A. Hay, M.A., Ph.D., of Ayr, Scotland, for the vacant chair in Systematic Theology at Knox College, University of Toronto.

Commissioners to the General Assembly who were appointed were Rev. D. K. Perry of Hastings and Rev. J. M. Young of Omemee, ministerial representatives; and Messrs. James Thompson of Port Hope and Henry Rose of Colborne, elders' representatives.

Discuss Sustenation.

A feature of the afternoon session was a discussion on sustentation by Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr of St. Paul's church, secretary of that committee in the General Assembly. The Presbytery commanded the sustentation plan for ministerial support and two recommendations were adopted on motion of James Dutton. The first called for an actuarial statement to be prepared, showing how the plan would affect congregations according to the contributions required for the sustentation fund, and the second that before the plan was put into operationon initial fund of an amount to be raised equivalent to the total at present contributed for augmentation of ministers' stipends. This would mean a sum of $100,000.

Rev. D. K. Perry reported difficulty in securing a minister for the vacant charge of Keene, Westwood, and Warsaw. The vacancy has lasted more than a year and a half and scarcity of candidates has created difficulty for the committee. After discussion it was agreed to make every endeavour to get the pastoral charge settled as soon as possible.

Home Mission Grants.

The report of the committee on Missions was presented by Dr. Barr, chairman, and grants were approved for Omemee, $400; Bowmanville, $200. It was also agreed that students be secured for Buckhorn and Brighton, the present grant being maintained. Rev. S. J. Jamieson, who has been pastor at Brighton for the past four years, concludes his ministry at the end of March. A special committee consisting of Rev. A. R. Gibson of Millbrook, Rev. W. O. Nugent of Cobourg, and James Dutton, Peterborough, was appointed to visit the congregations of Colborne and Brighton to arrange for union of these two into one pastoral charge.

Rev. D. K. Perry of Hastings, reported for the committee to strike standing committees and the following chairmen were appointed, Missions, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, Peterborough; Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies, Rev. B. Simpson Black, Campbellford; Budget, Rev. A. R. Gibson, Millbrook; Pension Fund, Rev. D. A. McKenzie, Centreville; Church Life and Work, Rev. J. M. Young, Omemee; Recruits for Ministry, Rev. W. O. Nugent, Cobourg; Statistics, Rev. G. P. Duncan.

The Presbytery held two sessions besides the evening meeting at which the Moderator of the General Assembly spoke. The morning session was from 10 to 12.30 and the afternoon from 2 to 5.30. Rev. B. Simpson Black, Moderator of the Peterborough Presbytery, presided. The next meeting will be held in Cobourg in June.

Going To Enlist Two Youths Held

Trying to get into the Canadian Active Service Force resulted in two local young men finding themselves in police court this morning, charged with vagrancy.

The two were picked up early this morning by police, and as there had been several break-ins in the neighborhood recently and the story told by the youths did not impress the officers, the pair were held for appearance before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.

In court they both pleaded not guilty and one of the youths told the court that they had just been going to leave to join the army when they were arrested.

"It is an odd thing that nearly everybody arrested these days is going to join the army," said Magistrate Langley.

At the request of Chief Constable Newhall the two were at first remanded until Saturday, with bail fixed at $500, but later after two more youths arrived at the police station and substantiated the story that all four had planned to catch a freight here early this morning and try to reach Picton to enlist with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, the young men were released.

"We can't get work and there is no recruiting here so we thought we might as well take a chance at getting on in Picton," one of the companions of the two explained.

LOCKED IN ICE BOX

McIntyre Hood To Join First Division

TORONTO, March 6.—M. McIntyre Hood, secretary to Attorney-General Conant since 1937, shortly will be granted leave of absence from his Queen's Park post and will proceed overseas to join the First Canadian Division.

It was reported last night that Mr. Hood, who, for many years, has been prominent in Canadian Legion work, particularly in pensions legislation and administration, will be assigned eventually to duty in connection with documentation of casualties. It is also stated that he was selected for the post largely because of his experience gained in the Legion pensions' work. During the years 1931, 1932 and 1933 he attended Parliamentary committee hearings at Ottawa in connection with the Legion program.

Mr. Hood was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, and came to Canada in 1911. He served overseas in the last Great War with the Canadian infantry in the 24th Battalion under General J. A. Gunn and Brigadier R. O. Alexander, now D.O.C. of Military District No. 2, with headquarters in Toronto.

On return to civilian life he entered newspaper work and was at one time editor of the Woodstock Sentinel-Review and the Oshawa Daily Times and city editor of the Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph.

His interests have centred largely in the Canadian Legion, of which he was a member of the Dominion Executive Board for four and a half years. He was vice-president of the Provincial Command from 1930 to 1932 and again in 1939. He was president of the Oshawa branch for three years and since December has held an executive post with the Canadian Legion War Service organization in Military District No. 2.

Second Offender Is Given Month

Either Candidate Fraser or Candidate Glover lost a vote in Police Court this morning when a local man was charged before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., as a second offender drunk.

It was alleged that he had been intoxicated on Edison Avenue, North Monaghan, on Tuesday, and he admitted that the charge was correct. He also admitted that he had previously been convicted of having been drunk on February 22.

The two admissions automatically cost him a fine of $50, and costs, or a month in jail. He had no money to pay the fine which explains the statement in the opening sentence that one of the contestants in the West Peterborough election lost a vote. The accused will be in the County bastille on the day other folk marks their ballots.

We Noticed

....Providing you are very young and vitally alive, there are a number of exciting little "features" in connection with Spring fashions that it would be a thrill to wear.

....For instance, you might try a wool hood tied demurely under your chin, initialled on the forehead line; dancing-chool pumps of gleaming black patent with flat, juvenile ribbon bows.

....Or maybe a double-breasted navy-blue reefer, an off-the-brow felt Breton; the gingham check of your girlhood, grown up into a dashing taffeta dinner dress, or a skull cap and reefer duet of violently vivid plaid — sounds like fun, doesn't it?

Pastels Favored By Many Spring Brides

The Spring bride must do her planning betimes, since Easter comes early this year. If she has dreamed about a white satin gown since the day the first little boy said to her "I love you," she must have it. But there are girls who like to be different and wear a delicate tint. Pales misty blue is the color most liked this Spring. There is something heavenly about gowns of this shade, and when they are enveloped in a cloud of blue veiling they are celestial.

The bride who prefers pale blue for herself has a wide choice when it comes to selecting the frocks of her attendants. She may like the bridesmaid to wear pink orchid to harmonize with her bouquet, or she may prefer apple-blossom shades, from pale-petal to deep pink, to set off one delicate tint of her attire. French-blue—it is slightly darker than mist blue—when worn by the bride may be complemented by roseberry for the maid of honor and soft rose for the bridesmaids.

The girl who enjoys being original may approve of a pale champagne tint for her entire party, including herself. If she adopts this scheme, brilliance of color can be introduced by means of bouquets of camellias.

The bride who has set her heart on wearing white will find that enchanting color arrangements can be worked out for her party. The most talked-of among the new arrangements is grey, yellow and brown. The bridesmaids in pinkish grey must have accessories in brown and forsythia bouquets. In this case the honor attendant should wear brown and carry the same flowers. Foam-green and sherbet-pink frocks, accented with raspberry accessories, incorporate the very spirit of Spring. To complete the picture, apple blossoms could be used for the floral decoration.

Madrigal Choir Has Added Another Program To Long List Of Triumphs

Peterborough's noted chorus of women's voices, "The Madrigal Singers," and their talented conductor, Dorothy Allan Park, won new and gleaming laurels in their concert at the Collegiate Institute last night. They were assisted by Norman Wilks, pianist, and George Lambert, baritone, both of Toronto, in one of the most delightful programs presented here in a long time.

The Collegiate auditorium was crowded for this event to which the host of admirers of Mrs. Park and her choir had been looking forward with assurance and expectancy from bright memories of other such hours of song bearing a stamp of excellence that has received acclaim here and elsewhere, reflecting a lustre of musical accomplishment in which the citizens generally take an increasing pride. The splendid audience last night included quite a number of friends of the "Madrigal Singers" and Mrs. Park from neighboring communities, including Lindsay, Lakefield, Omemee and Millbrook. They were rewarded with a program that opened on the charming note of an old English madrigal and sustained its interest with a generous measure of extra numbers that whisked the evening away in pleasant transport. For those two hours and a half it seemed a happy and solacing return to the sweet sanities of life in an atmosphere of melody and color, shutting out of thought and hearing the cruelty and tragedy and strife of a world giving itself up to violence.

One of the fine qualities of the choir is the freshness it acquires from some inner resource of spirit, a kind of vocal and artistic rebirth, as it greets another Spring. There is a lightness and buoyancy and sparkle that leave no hint of the hours given up to practice, not only this season but in the years that have preceded it. And with this blossoming forth there is also the evidence of poise and confidence and unity gained by experience that has already won for the choir a high place in musical accomplishment and company in this province.

Incidentally, the gowns of the ladies in mauves and greens, white and peach, were prismatic in their variety and vividness of color creating a pleasing visual effect that harmonizes with essential lyric and whimsy of madrigal.

The choral tone which Mrs. Park has refined virtually to perfection is a veritable achievement which most people no doubt comprehend and appreciate. It is a close weaving together of those forty or more soprano, mezzo and contralto voices until their blended texture is not only flawless but is pliant and responsive as any other musical instrument. You also notice, because it is so easily done, that the choir's notes are always precisely pitched and placed. There is no uncertainty, not even in the very first syllable. The concert last night left a sharper appreciation of the quality of the several groups or parts in the Madrigal chorus, a soprano section that sounded as one voice richly toned and sweet; contraltos of remarkable range and purity; and mezzos that seemed to link together the two other sections in vocal beauty. And separately or in harmony they comprised an instrument that is fashioned only by the ability of the conductor and the discipline that rests on all the members. Then with those acquirements and graces they can sing such blithe and lyrical things as "Hark! the Echoing Air" by Purcell (1658-1695); "Let Us All Go Maying" by R. L. de Pearsall (1795-1856), that exquisite vocalism as even one line "In the month of May"; and "Hence, Vain Affections" by Richard Dering (1575-1630), with its opulent harmonies.

Mrs. Park drafted an "All British" program, opening with the above group by early English composers and "Evening Hymn" by Purcell. Another group of four were listed as modern British music—"In the Highlands," whose last phrases crystallized the full glory of the Madrigal Singers. It was written by Robert Louis Stevenson with music by George Butterworth.

"The Dolls' Wedding Song" by such strange collaboration as Hans Christian Anderson and George Henschel (1850-1934) had the appeal of the theatre, like something out of an operetta, and suggested rather intriguingly what the choir could do in that field.

The last group were folk tunes: "A Celtic Lullaby" (Irish); "The Wraggle Taggle Gipsies" (English); "Deifdre's Farewell to Scotland" (Scottish); "The Bells of Aberdovey" (Welsh), and a smart and rollicking encore, "Waltzing Hilda" (Australia) that seemed to be a slight gesture of letting down the hair a bit, and artistically of course.

The Madrigal Singers received grateful applause and with Mrs. Park have every reason to regard last night's concert as one of the highest peaks in their local accomplishment. They obviously strengthened their position in the hearts of the people of this city and district.

George Lambert and Norman Wilks were splendid aids to the choir.

Mr. Lambert sang two groups, one of six English folk songs that won him well-merited encores. One of them entitled "Lord Rendal" was an ironic little story. Its softer tones brought out a specially pleasing quality in Mr. Lambert's voice. "Rolling In the Dew" had an infectious humor.

One of the features of the program was the Chopin scherzo in B-flat minor played by Mr. Wilks. It was brilliant pianism, an impressive portrayal of clashing emotions, restlessness of spirit, with outbursts that seemed of despair, reflecting Chopin's bitterness and disillusion of life. This was the Pole, born near ill-fated Warsaw, whom George Sand mentioned as an "exasperating nuisance." Mr. Wilks won the audience with his entire group of Chopin, two valses, two preludes and an impromptu, full of charm, several encores from the same composer, and another group including "The Engulfed Cathedral" by Debussy.

Harry Northrop, as accompanist of the Madrigal Singers and Mr. Lambert was exceedingly and expertly helpful.

Mrs. Park opened the concert with "O Canada," arranged by Charles Peaker, and closed with Ernest MacMillan's arrangement of "God Save the King."

Don't Probe Too Deeply Into Children's Affairs. Family Curiosity Wrecks Many Homes and Lives of the People Therein.

The other day a young girl ended her life because, as she said in the brief note that she left behind her, she was so tired of being questioned by her mother. "It isn't that I wanted to do anything wrong," wrote the poor little creature whose mother's naging had hounded her into her grave. "It is just that I hated to be made to tell about everything that I did."

This is a strange and pathetic little story, but this girl will not have died in vain if she makes mothers realize the cruelty they inflict upon their children by probing into their souls and denying them the slightest degree of privacy. Also, it would save mothers many tears and breast-beatings over ungrateful children who shut them out of their lives. For there is no doubt that no one thing alienates parents and children or that does o much to drive the young people away from home as does the puestionnaire that mother puts every son and daughter through every time they leave the house or return to it.

It is true that in the average home no one can make the slightest move without having to make elaborate explanations about why he or she is doing it. No one can make the smallest purchase without giving a reason for buying it, telling its cost, where it was bought and why he or she got that particular article. No one can eat, or fast, or go to bed, or sit up without everybody having to read it. Nobody can receive a telephone call without all the family listening in.

Oliver Wendell Holmes once said that the reason families break up is to keep the Browns from being Browned to death and the Smiths from being Smithed into the lunatic asylum.

But most of all it is family curiosity that wrecks homes. It is the eternal, "Where are you going?" "Whom are you going with?" "Who did you see?" "What did you say?" "What did they say?" "Why are you going with that girl or that boy?" "When are you coming home?" that breaks the nerve of the heartiest and makes them flee to some far place where nobody feels privileged to catechize them about their private affairs.

Later on in life we learn that bondage is the inevitable price that we pay for domestic life, and very often it is worth the freedom it costs us. But youth does not know this, so it gnashes its teeth and flings back a bitter retort and slams the door behind it, and makes up its mind to marry the first man who pops the question, or to get a job in another city so as to get away from Mother's prying and to be able to go to the corner drug store for a new toothbrush without having to give an account of one's every movement.

And Mother and Father, whose nagging is inspired by love, bewildered by the irritation their children display at being asked a few simple questions, stabbed to the heart by their children's refusal to confide in them, wring their hands in helpless grief over the situation and believe the worst of the youngsters and pessimistically wonder what they are doing that they hide with such secrecy.
